Juman Prudence:

OR, THE

A R T

By which a P

MAN may Raise HIMSELF

AND HIS

FORTUNE

TO

GRANDEUR.

Corrected and very much Enlarged.

The ELEVENTH EDITION.

Non dicere, sed facere, beatum est. Pluris est prudenter agere, quam sapienter cogitare.

LONDON,

Printed for RICHARD SARE, at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn. MDCCXVII.

Humano Prudenice Lyon Contreferon for they fellow bless a de on the state was the or over the - was a light to discount of the Harrish made H Ch and mary see Magnetid dieseror howard it's blavent in the room. 94154 red in survival de borne, some in bone Shout the votes your to be trained or selling Meals Ast. St. N. D O M. मंगारी कार्यांचे वर्तर्भे नेत्रमुख्नी अवस्था 15.5.75

E

S

fs, bat nte

sop nej

cat

2022 y a Pri

aces

ilof

rk.

The Epithe Dedicators

TO THE

Virtuous and most Ingenious

Edw. Hungerford, Esq;

SIR,

Can

Othing can more illustrate, even the bravest of Persons, than to act according to the Maxims of Prudence and Virtue. Many Men are Wise in Picture, and notably Learned in Tristes; but when they come to Busis, of no more Use than a Sun-Dial in a Graves bat is the best Philosophy which teaches Men prunter agere, rather than Tapienter cogitare.

If the World would spend that time in active Phisophy, and in the Study of Things of solid Use and ness, that they consume in Cobweb-Learning, catch Flies; People would be more Judicious and nowing at Twenty Years of Age, than usually now y are at Seventy.

Prudence (like Mines of Gold) is found but in few aces; and though it is as yet in the Ore, active ilosophy will refine it: To Think well is only to eam well; but it is well-doing that perfects the rk. As Virtue is the lustre of Action, so Action be life of Virtue.

The Epistle Dedicatory.

This Little Manual, if you please to read it so berly, and practise the Principles contained in a (though you may have erected a fair Structure Knowledge to your self, yet) I dare say it will build you a Story bigher.

The Conversation of Men, is a good Expedient cultivate and improve your Parts. Reading Books may make you Learned, but it is Conver and Bufiness that make Men Wise.

The Theory of that Learning which the Worldhal for many Years admired, serves only to dispute Pie and Truth out of the Church; Justice and Hong out of the State.

Of this Valentinian and Lucinus, Emperors Rome, had Experience, when they termed Leaning the Plague and Poyson of a Kingdom; sand Licurgus was not far from this Opinion, when he Stablished Ignorance in his Republick.

If we consult the Register of Time, we shall he that Seditions and Revolutions, Herefies and Schild have not any where been so frequent as in Commo wealths, where this Kind of Learning was in gree Esteem, and even when it triumphed most a American and Pride march always in the Rear of gree Knowledge; whereas we have observed that the that are not too Learned, are commonly the best since it, and the Wisest and Honestest Men.

There are many that are great Opiniators, and in their own Conceits; but you may take the Election of their Parts, without a Jacob's Staff: The Menthink when they have read Aristotle's Physic and Politicks, they have exactly survey'd the great Round of Nature, fathom'd the Moon; and that know by what Strings, and upon what Pins, Who and Hinges, the whole Universe moves: Where if they had seriously studied Nature, and Active Physiophy, they would no more value all the Learn they now have, than we do the wagging of a Sin et the nes's or like thers Philosolientes ribue

Som o a P Dead; o Ma our fei

This
o dref.
say thi Noth

irtue.

When ius, an rich, ihat to lat Dil efteen s own itle of By Ri eat, P

Privatings; fed.

Riches
ilt make
You have ur Year

the Glo

The Epiffle Dedicatory.

it So

in it

cre o buil

ent t ng

nver

dhe

Pie

Ione

rors

Learn

dL

2-101

all fu

chila

1227740

Ami

f gra

t the

eft Su

end b

Elev Th

hylic

ne gro

bat to Who here

e Ph

earm

Str

the Antipodes. These Sophisters are like Diegenes's Archer, that could hit any Mark but the right; it like some Persons, who can give a good Ground to thers, but cannot boul themselves: Whereas the Philosophy of a Wise Man is honeste vivere; prulenter agere; alterum non lædere; suum cuique ribuere.

Some part of this Manual was formerly Dedicated of a Person of great Honour and Merit, who is since Dead; and you being the next Heir to all his Virtues, o Man has a juster Title to Humane Prudence than our self.

This will serve you, as the Philosopher's Mirror, o dress your self by; to tune your Passions; and if my thing be amiss, to correct it:

Nothing will add a greater Ornament to you, or ender you more renowned, than Learning and little.

When Alexander had defeated the Army of Daius, among it the Spoils there was found his Cabinet, rich, and of such Value, that a Dispute arose, that to lay in it; Alexander said, I'll soon and lat Dispute, I'll lay Homer's Works in it! Such a esteem he had for Learning. It was Philip his other that made him ALEXANDER, but it was sown Conduct and Prudence that gave him the itle of Great.

By Riches you may make Friends; by Honour and eat. Places, oblige many, but by your Virtues you by oblige the whole. World.

Private Men for their Virtues, have been made ings; and Kings for their Vices have been de-

Riches may be wasted, Honour lost, but Virtue il make you immortal, because it self is so.

You have made a fair Progress in your Studies beyond ar Years; if you proceed in that Course, you will the Glory of the Age you live in.

A

Al-

The Epistle Dedicatory:

Alphonsus, That incomparable King of Spain, Sicily, and Naples, was so devoted to his Studies, and had such an Honour for Learning, that for his Crest, he gave a Book open: If you will be a Prince, imitate that great King.

Non a caso è virtute anzi è bella arte.

As much as you excel others in Fortune, so much ought you to excel them also in Virtue.

The Nobleness of your Stock, is a Spur to Virtue, and if Virtue could have been propagated, you had been one of the most Virtuous Persons in the World.

After you have made your Progress thro' a Course of Virtue, imitate the Industrious Bee, and gather from the Flowers those Things which afterwards may be useful and serviceable to you.

Agefilaus was asked what Youth should Learn That, said be, which they should use when Men.

I will not detain you any longer at present, that to intreat you to look into this Mirror; as made up of other Men's Crystals, and my own Errors; where in you may see what you are, as well as what you ought to be.

Worthy Sir,

I am your faithful Friend and Servant,

W. de Britaine

ATA

T

Of Los

Of Con Of Dif Of Sile Of Rep

of Vair Of Gen

of Pal Of Inju

Of Virt

Of Frie

Of Frus Of Rick

Of Ame Of the Of the Sobri

Of Suit. Of Gan Of Man Of the Of the

Of Cour Of Pru

A

pain, udies,
r bis rince,

a TABLE of the Principal Matters contained in this Book.

ld.	Of Study, Of Religion,	Page I ourle	Of Religion.	7
ather	Of Loyalty,	13
may	Of Conversation,	15
	Of Discourse,	23
arn	If Silence and Secrecy,	29
	Of Reputation,	35
tha	Of Vain-glory and Boasting,	39
le ut	of Gensure and Detraction,	49
	Of Passion,	57
t VON	Of Injuries and Revenge,	64
,	Of Virtue,	77
	Of Friends and Friendship,	84
	Of Frugality and Expences,	94
	Of Riches.	100
nt,	Of Ambition and Great Place,	108
•	Of the Art to be Happy,	118
	Of the Regimen of Health, and of Tempera Sobriety	127
me.	Of Suits of Law,	140
7.30	Of Gaming,	143
1	Of Marriage,	144
1	Of the Man of Honour,	155
CA.	Of the Man of Business,	162
	Of Counsel and Counsellors,	170
	Of Prudence in time of Danger,	178 y - months of bounds
100		1 2 3 4 5

A 4

A TABLE.

Of the Grotto, or retired Life,	181
Of Complaisance,	191
Of Faber Forting.	193
Of Negotiating,	201
Of the Politick,	213
Of the Favourite,	218
The Sun of Honour in the West,	224
Sententia Stellares: Or Maxims of observed by Artisans of State.	234

Humane

not or o the a go

234

Humane Prudence:

OR, THE

Art by which a Man may advance himself and his Fortune.

S'E C T. I. Of Study.

3: I R,

N ingenious, and an industrious Youth feldom fails of being follow'd with a virtuous, and a happy Life: You are now entring upon a publick Stage, where every Mortal acts his Part; what yours may be I know not; but be it what it will, whether of a Prince or of a Beggar, it must be your Care to discharge the Lot that Providence hath assigned you, with a good Grace.

Never puzzle your Head with the phantallical Quirks of the Schools: As how many Angels can A c dance

Dance upon the point of a Needle; or beat your Brain about the Proportion between the Cylinder and the Sphere, though Archimedes highly valued himself upon the Invention.

Neither will it become you to quarrel pedantically about the Orthography of a Word; as whether to write Fælix, with a Dipthong, or an (e) simple; but rather attend to the Sense and Meaning of Things. What is it to us how many Knots Hercules had in his Club, or whether Penelope was honest or not? Let every Man mind his own Business, and do his own Duty. A wise Man will employ his Thoughts upon things substantial, and useful. It is not for a Philosopher, and a Man of Letters, to pester his Brains with idle Punctilio's, and Cavils: That superfine curious fort of Learning fignifies no more than a splendid Foppery, to no manner of purpose. What are we the better for those Studies that furnish us only with unactive Thoughts, and useless Discourse, and teach us only to think and speak?

Knowledge is the Treasure of the Mind; Discretion the Key to it: And it illustrates all other Learning, as the Lapidary doth unpolish'd Diamonds.

It ought to be a great Part of our Study and Business, as well to unlearn what we have been taught amiss, as to acquire the Knowledge of better Things: And this must be before the Error, or the Mistake become habitual to us; for the Impressions of Education are strong and lasting. They grow up with us from the Cradle, and go along with us to the Grave. That's the best Knowledge, in fine, that makes us good rather than learned; which consists, in a great Measure, in the governing of our Appetites, and in the tuning of our Affections; so as to keep them in Harmony, one to another.

Meta-

with Philo It Lear to hi the I Happ Doo

M wor

delic

whice Trave The versa

them

his o'

perac

Facu

Bo contr beaut Wor shew and s

In is a g will went

He

ned l graph

music

Harp

by Z

well

our .

Metaphysical Speculations are but the Spiderwork of whimsical Heads. They are subtle and delicate; but at the best, they are but Pleasure without Profit; like a Flower without a Root-

Philosophy pays no Scores.

your inder

alued edan-

or an

and

Pt-

d his

Man

tial, nd a idle ious

ndid

are

Dif-

-

Dif-

0-h'd ind

een

of

or,

ng. go

est.

ner.

re,

he.

in

2-

It was put to Antisthenes, what he got by his Learning? His answer was; that he could talk to himself, without being beholden to others for the Delight of good Company. It is no small Happiness for a Man to keep all quiet within Doors, and to entertain himself comfortably with his own Thoughts: Provided always that you supperadd Observation and Experience to your own Faculties; a way of Learning as far beyond that which is got by Precept, as the Knowledge of a Traveller exceeds that which is got by a Map.

The whole Universe is your Library: Conversation, living Studies, and Remarks upon them, are your best Tutors.

Books give us the first Notions of Things, and contribute Materials towards the Structure of a beautiful Palace: but it's the Knowledge of the World which teaches us the Architecture, and shews us the Order and Connexion of Things, and gives us the Reputation of Wisdom in all our Actions.

In any Art or Science to be first in Eminency, is a great Advantage; for those that come after, will be counted but Imitators of those which went before.

Hence it is, that any Part of Philosophy penned by Hermes-Trismegistus; any Script of Geography bearing the Name of Anaximander; any musical Composition sung by Amphion to his Harp; any piece of Mathematicks said to be write by Zoroaster; are severally reputed the best, as well as the Works of the first.

Am

Humane Prudence.

An illiterate Person is the World in Darkness, and like to Polyphemus's Statue with the Eye our.

I envy none that know more than my felf, but pity them that know less.

Nothing doth more dignify a Person than Learning, and no Learning makes a Man more judicious than History: Which gives an Antedate to Time, brings Experience without grey Hairs, and makes us wise at the Cost and Expence of others.

Study well the Book of Nature, which is more worth than all the Volumes in the Universe: And it lies open to all too; tho' read, or understood but by few. To deal freely with you, I am not much concerned at the burning of Ptolomy's Library at Alexandria; and I should not have been much more, if I had seen it in its Urn: For a Multitude of Books is but a diverting Distraction of the Mind; whereas the Treasury of Nature entertains us with an inexhaustible Variety of Matter. Since the Discovery of the Use and Virtue of the Loadstone, there is nothing methinks, but Study and Industry may find out.

In Matters cognoscible and framed for our Disquisition, Application must be our Oracle, and Reason our Apollo. Not to know Things out of our Reach, is the Impersection of our Nature, not Knowledge; for mortal Eyes cannot fee beyond their Horizon.

True Knowledge values Things by Weight and Measure, and not by the distinction of Words and Authorities.

Truth is known but of a very few, whereas faile Opinions go current with the rest of the World.

Study to be eminent: Mediocrity is below a brave Soul: Eminency in a high Employment, will distinguish you from the Vulgar, and advance

you in emine tle, a Th

Great (Borbe) the K That Bonus Orbus I pray

I w that I never

Maje

very

you h

A S for no Ab

Greek thing only

I ha Secon which of Or

Ho them to the

I he they the IV there if the

I n crofe Than you into the Catalogue of Famous Men: To be eminent in a low Profession, is to be great it little, and fomething in nothing.

There was a Man who presented to Henry the Great of France, an Anagram upon his Name, (Borbonius) which was Bonus Orbi, Orbus Boni; the King asked him what it meant; he told him, That when his Majesty was a Hugonot he was Bonus Orbi, but when he turned Catholick he was Orbus Boni; a very fine Anagram, said the King; I pray what Profession are you of? Please your Majesty I am a maker of Anagrams, but I am a very poor Man: I believe it, said the King; for you have taken up a Beggarly Trade.

I would not have you like a Friperer's Shop, that hath many Ends and Remnants in it, but never a good Piece.

A Smatterer in everything is commonly good for nothing.

els,

out.

but han

ore

date

airs,

e of ore

rse:

der-u, I

my's

peen or a tion

ture

y of and

nks,

our cle,

ngs Na-

not ight

ords

reas

the

w a ent.

you

About a Hundred and Eighty Years fince, Greek and Necromancy were one and the same thing with the common People: And it was not only scandalous, but dangerous to be learned.

I have somewhat wondred, that Pope Paul the Second, should declare them to be Hereticks, which pronounced the Word Academy, the Seat of Oracles and Learning.

However I shall have a singular Regard for them that bring any new Invention or Discovery to the Republick of Learning.

I honour Carpus, or those others whoever they were, who were the first Discoverers of the Medical Efficacy of Quick-silver; they have thereby relieved more distressed Persons, than if they had built many Infirmaries or Hospitals.

I much admire the rare Invention of the Mic ctoscope and Telescope, and must pay my Thanks to the Authors of them, (of which Antiquity quity gives us not the least hint.) By the Assistance of these Dioptrical Glasses, you may observe the curious Mechanism and Excellent Contexture of the minutest Animals, and that in these pretty Engines, (by an incomparable Contraction of Providence) are lodged all the Perfections of the largest Creatures; so that were Aristotle now alive, he might write a new History of Animals; for the first Tome of Zoography is still wanting, the Naturalists hitherto having only described to us the larger and more voluminous sort of them, as Bears, Bulls, Tygers, &c. while they have regardlessy passed by the Insectile Automata, with a bare mention of their Names.

There is a new World of Experiments left to the Discovery of Posterity; but it hath been the unhappy Fate (which is great pity) of novel Inventions to be undervalued; witness that excellent Discovery of Columbus, with the Contempt he underwent both before and after it.

But let nothing discourage you; Worth is ever at Home, and carrieth its own Welcome along with it: Your own Virtues will ennoble you, and he that has a great Mind wants nothing to make him greater.

It is the Ruin of many Men, because they cannot be best, they will be nothing; and if they may not do as well as they would, they will not do as well as they may.

Fortune is like the Market; if you can stay a little, the Price will fall.

Let great Actions encourage greater; and let Honour be your Merit, not your Design.

the leavest of that (of regard off)

M of O his P Piety prosp miser that i nest. terest Briefl

I ki the W no mo Men a Ænigi I m

Fund:

Reafor Whole the Ala Fait and it Thus Christ

See Breentin
must I can

or: A

SECT.

Affi-

7 Ob-Con-

at in

Con-

Per-

were

Hif-

ogra-

ha-

nore

Ty-

d by n of ft to

the

In-

cel-mpt

is e-ome

oble

hing,

can-hey

not

1y. 8:

let

SECT. II. Of Religion.

Link not your felf with a Faction, but joyn with all Christians in a Communion.

Make not your felf of a Party, nor an Affertor of Opinions in Fashion. Value no Man but for his Probity, and for living up to the Rules of Piety and Justice. If Integrity does not make you prosperous, it will at least keep you from being miserable: For no Man can be truly Religious, that is not likewise conscienciously Just and Honest. Now Holiness is the most prevailing Interest in the World, for God is on that side. Briefly, I wish the Christian World Unity in the Fundamentals that are necessary, Liberty in: things indifferent, and Charity in all things.

I know there are many things obtruded upon he World as Oracles of Heaven, that fignify no more than Cheats and Impostures: But wife Men are not any longer to be entertained with Enigmas, fince God hath faid; fiat Lux.

I must confess, I have not Faith enough my elf to swallow Camels, nor can I persuade my Reason to become a Dromedary; to bear the whole Luggage of Tradition, or the Fables of he Alchoran.

Faith may exceed Reason, but not oppose it; and it may be above Sense, but not against it: Thus while Faith doth affure me that I eat Christ effectually, Sense doth assure me that I ee Bread, and taste it really: For though I ofen-times fee not those Things that I believe, yet must still believe those Things that I see.

I can pay no Reverence to a Gray-headed Eror: And as Antiquity cannot privilege a Mif-ake, so Novelty cannot prejudice Truth.

There is nothing in it felf more excellent than Religion, but to raise Quarrels and Disputes about it, is to dishonour it. It's admirable to me, that, that which was designed to make us Happy in another World, should by its Divisions make us most Miserable in this; and that what was ordained for the saving of Men's Souls, should be perverted to the taking away of their Lives. I do not like a Religion that, like Draco's Laws, is writ in Blood.

I never was disaffected to any that were of a different Persuasion from me in point of Religion, but wished them Liberty of Conscience, so far as they made Conscience of that Liberty; and I never understood the Logick of convincing a doubting Conscience with Sword and Pistol. I never was so rigid a Censor as to damn all those which were not within the Purlieu of the Church; for my Charity hopes for a Reserve of Mercy, even for the very Pagans themselves.

I never affected any Schilm, being against a main Article of my Faith, viz. The Communion of Saints, which makes the Church Militant and Triumphant one Parish.

I never Idolized the Theorems of the Schools; but I must confess, that unum Augustinum mile Patribus, unam Sacrae Scripturae paginam mille Augustinis prafero. I value St. Augustin more than a thousand of the Fathers, and one simple Page of Holy Writ more than a thousand St. Austines.

That Religion to me seemeth best, which is most reasonable; especially if we consider how much of interest, and the strong impressions of Education there is in that which many call Religion. Not that we are to try the Articles of our Creed by the Touchstone of Aristotle.

Be content with a single Faith in God, the Comforts of a good Life, and the Hopes of a better ipor In

Chui Ti of y

he (

as the lieve

A fcien Phyfi Le

upon

well-If clear ans r

in the

for fe it to

Be ligion ter, to pocri

Ze derati Set

Error fion b

the d Church petter upon true Repentance, and take the rest upon the Authority of the Church. In things necessary go along with the ancient Church, in things indifferent, with the present.

Tho' you have some Opinions and Notions of your own, yet yield (as the Orbs do for the order of the Universe) to the great Wheel of the Church.

Let it be an Article of your Faith, to believe as the truly Catholick Apostolick Church believes; and the great Rule of your Practice, to live as the Law directs.

ellent

Putes

ole to ke u istons

what ouls,

their

Dra-

of a

Reli-

ence,

erty;

neing

iffol.

n all of the

ve of es.

inst a

UNION

and

ools:

mille

Au-

an a ge of h is how us of eligi-

our

the

of a

etter

A found Faith is the best Divinity; a good Conscience the best Law, and Temperance the best Physick.

Let not your Faith, which ought to stand firm upon a sure Foundation, lean over-hardly on a well-painted rotten Post.

If in Scripture some Points are lest unto us less clear and positive, be content; it is that Christians might have wherewith to exercise Humility in themselves, and Charity towards orders.

Never wrest the Scripture to maintain a Truth, for sear Custom in time should bring you to wrest it to an Error.

Be careful not to exasperate any Sect or Religion; Rigour seldom makes ill Christians better, but many times it makes them reserved Hypocrites.

Zeal doth well in a private Breaft, and Moderation in a publick State.

Set bounds to your Zeal by Discretion, to Error by Truth, to Passion by Reason, to Divifion by Charity.

Never contend over passionately for Ceremonies (which are but the Suburbs of Religion) to the disquiet of the Church: It's better for the Church to be without some Truths, than to have no Peace.

Opti-

Optimus animus est pulcherrimus Dei cultus.

If you design to make your self Happy, look to your thoughts before they come to desires; and entertain no thoughts which may blush in words.

The best way to keep out wicked Thoughts is always to be employed in good ones; let your Thoughts be where your Happiness is, and let your Heart be where your Thoughts are; for the your Habitation is on Earth, your Conversation will be in Heaven.

Let your Thoughts be such to your self, as you need not be assamed to have God know them; and Words such to God, as you need not be afhamed Men should hear them.

It was one of Pythagoras's Symbols, De Dev loqui fine lumine nefas esto: I must confess, I cannot think of God without an Extasy, or speak of him without a Solecism.

If your endeavour cannot prevent a Vice, let a timely Repentance atone for it; with the same height of desire thou hast sinned, with the like depth of Sorrow thou must repent; thou that hast sinned a day, defer not thy Repentance till to morrow: He that hath promised Pardon to thy Repentance, hath not promised Life till thou repent.

Make use of Time if thou lovest Eternity; know yesterday cannot be recalled, to morrow cannot be assured: To day is only thine, which if once loft, is loft for ever.

Let all your Actions be à Deo, in Deo, ad Deum: Never venture on any Action unless you bring God to it; nor rest satisfied, unless you carry God from it.

Be assured he hath no serious Belief of God, or the World to come, who dares be wicked.

Instead of a Cato, set before you a God, whose Eye

Eye i Eye a Fe

thou thing

Le and y

In for w you h

Ta

afraid creaft is to If t vil, b ons, more upon Ha

attacle great Co which you, Deed your one h

In Man finful

An Adva quire

Le cafior God. Lye is always upon you; and therefore keep your Eye always upon him.

ok to

and rds.

nts is vour

d let tho'

ation

you iem;

be a-

Deo

can-

peak

, let

like that till n to ity;

row

De-

you

car-

, OF

nose

Eye

Fear to do any thing against that God whom thou lovest, and thou wilt not love to do any thing against that God whom thou fearest.

Let your Prayers be as frequent as your Wants; and your Thanksgivings, as your Bleffings.

In the Morning think what you have to do, for which ask God's Bleffing; at Night, what you have done, for which you must ask Pardon.

Take an exact account of your Life, be not afraid to look upon the Score, but fearful to encrease it: To despair because a Man is finful, is to be worse because he hath been bad.

If the Devil shall at any time tempt thee to Evil, betake thy felf to Prayer and holy Meditations, and then he will forbear to tempt thee any more, when he shall see that he thereby puts thee upon holy Exercises and Devotions.

Have a care of the least Temptation which may attack thee; for the most Heroick Virtue, like a great City, is seldom besieged, but it's taken.

Confider, that in Heaven above, there is an Earwhich over-hears you, an Eye which over-fees you, and a Book wherein all your Words and Deeds are carefully written; therefore so behave your self in every Action, as if God were on the one hand, and Death on the other.

In all your Actions aim at Excellency; that Man will fail at last, who allows himself in one finful Thought.

And he that dares sometime be wicked for his Advantage, will be always so, if his Interest require it.

Quod dubitas, ne feceris.

Let thy Estate serve thy Occasions; thy Occasions, thy self; thy Self, thy Soul; thy Soul, thy God.

Be not follicitous about Fame, for that lyethen in the Power of many; but to take care of Conficience, is a thort Work, for that is in the Power of one.

Dispose of the Time past, to Observation and Resection; Time present, to Duty; and Time to come, to Providence.

Your Time makes the richest part of the publick Treasure; every hour you mis-spend of that, is a facrilegious Thest committed against your Countrey.

Consider the Shortness of your Life, and Certainsty of Judgment; the great Reward for the Good, and severe Punishment for the Bad; therefore make even with Heaven by Repentance at the end of every Day, and so you shall have but one Day to repent of before your Death.

Have all the Wildern of the World, Knowledge of Tongues and Languages; if you be not acted by the Maxims of fine Piety and Holinels,

'tis but sapienter ad Infernum descrindere.

Religion lies not so much upon the Understanding as in the Practice: It's to no purpose to talk like Christians, and live like Insidels; this was it, that made a samous Heathen Philosopher say, That there was nothing more glorious than a Christian in his Discourse, nothing more miserable in his Actions.

He that ferves God is free, fafe, and quiet; all his Actions shall succeed to his Wish; and what can a Man desire more than to want nothing from without, and to have all things desirable within himself?

Therefore be careful, 1. That you be always employed. 2. Look to the lifue. 3. Reflect upon your felf; Vita est in se restectio: Beams in Restection are hottest, and the Soul becomes wise by looking into it self.

In Dead my S readi

Univ

Hon A efter

don Stre

Pov flur bed fon

it w is u Jea

free the it c

tha

In the Morning I frequently converse with the Dead, at Noon with the Living, at Night with my Self; yet I don't trouble my Head with much reading of Books.

When I contemplate the great Volume of the Universe, in every Page of it I observe such excellent Theorems and Maxims of Wisdom, that all Books to me are useless.

SECT. III. Of Loyalty.

Ext your Duty to God, I advise you, that you be Loyal to your King: Never fell Honour to purchase Treason.

A fecure and happy Subjection is more to be esteemed than a dangerous and factious Liberty.

Government is the greatest security of Freedom; for as Obedience in Subjects is the Prince's Strength, so is the same their own Safety.

Therefore they who weaken the Sovereign

Power, weaken their own Security.

Never suffer the Dignity of his Person to be flurred; for the most effectual Method of Disobedience, is, first to fully the Glory of his Perfon, and then to overthrow his Power

As Rebellion is a Weed of hally growth, fo it will decay as fuddenly; and that Knot which is united in Treachery, will easily be diffolved by lealousies.

Great Crimes are full of Fears, Delays, and frequent change of Counfels; and that, which in the Projection formed full of its Reward, when, it cometh to be acted, looks big with danger.

It becomes all difloyal Persons to consider, that when those who employed them have effectuated their impious Defigns, they will either

Vays flect

Veth

Con.

n the n and meto

blick , is a Coun-

rtain. iood:

efore

e end

Day

LOW-

enot

ness,

nder-

fe to this

ofo-

than

rable

what

rom

thin

sin wife

In

ther disdain the Instruments as useless, or do stroy them, as dangerous.

Charles V. During the Difference between the Imperialists and the French, made use of the Duke of Bourbon against his Lord and Master, Francis the I. who for his Insidelity, had purchased the hatred of Men; after the Arrival of the Duke at the Emperor's Court, Casar having entertained him with all friendly Demonstrations, sent afterwards to desire the House of one of his Nobles to lodge him in: Who answered the Messenger with a Castilian Courage, That he could not but gratify his Master's Demand; but let him know (saith he) that Bourbon, shall no sooner be gone out of the House, but I will burn it; as being insected with his Treason and Insamy; and thereby made unfit for Men of Honour to dwell in.

He that entertains a dangerous Design, puts his Head into a Halter; and the Halter into his Hands, to whom he first imparts the Secret.

And Events have affured us, that the People, after they have seen the Inconveniences of their own actings, they will return that Power which they gained by their Rebellion, (but could not manage it) to its proper Place, before it becomes their Ruin; for unbounded Liberty will destroy it self.

And let me tell you, the Ends of the common People if nussled up in factious Liberty, are much different from the Designs of sovereign Princes.

Mankind is highly concerned to support that, wherein their own Safety is concerned, and to destroy those Arts by which their Ruin is consulted.

Submission to your Prince is your Duty, and Confidence in his Goodness will be your Prudence.

Whatsoever a Prince doth, it's to be presumed that it was done with great Reason; if he commands any thing, every one is bound to believe that he hath good reason to command the same:

His

fecre to m King can t when

His

ted, ed, b

knov

obed your A

L

Guic your his f

Rebe

Fide my I the w A stand Scars who in hi

Re catch with

Tand

or de en the

Duke

rancis

d the ike at ained

after.

obles

enger

ot but know

ve out

fected

le un-

ts his

o his le, af-

own

they mage

their felf.

mon

much that, o deed.

Con-

imed

com-

lieve

me:

His

es.

His Actions are manifest, but his Thoughts are secret: It's our Duty to tolerate the one, and not to murmur against the other: For the Books of Kings are written in dark Characters, which sew can uncipher; and their Actions like deep Rivers, whereof we see the Course of the Stream, but know not the Source, or the bottom on't.

The Command of Princes is not to be disputed, but obeyed; examine not what is commanded, but observe it because it is commanded.

Let no pretence of Conscience render you disobedient to his Commands; for Obedience to your Prince, is part of your Duty towards God.

And Conscience is not your Rule, but your Guide; and so far only can Conscience justifie your Actions, as it is it self justified by God and his sacred Word.

I have seen Loyalty suffer Punishment due to Rebellion, and Treason received the Rewards of Fidelity; yet for all that, I'll be loyal, and sorce my Passage to the Service of my Prince, though the way were paved with Thorns and Serpents.

A loyal Subject (like a good Soldier) will stand his Ground; receive Wounds; glory in his Scars; and in Death it self love his Master for whom he falls; with this divine Precept always in his Mouth; fear God, honour the King.

Remember that Kings have long Hands, they catch afar off, and their Blows are dangerous within Reach.

SECT. IV. Of Conversation.

THE Love of Society is natural; but the Choice of our Company, is matter of Virtue and Prudence.

The

The Conversation of wise Men is the best Academy of Breeding and Learning: It was not the School, but the Company of Epicurus, that made Metrodorus, Hermactius, and Polyanus so samous.

To hear the Discourse of wise Men delights us, and their Company inspires us with noble and generous Contemplations.

When I happen into the Society of two or three wise Men, I think my self as happy as if I were in the Lycaum of Aristotle, or the Stoa of Zeno.

Let your Conversation therefore be with those by whom you may accomplish your self best; for Virtue never returns with so rich a Cargo, a when it sets Sail from such Continents: Company, like Climates, alter Complexions: And ill Company by a kind of Contagion, doth insensibly insect us; soft and tender Natures are apt to receive any Impression: Alexander learned his Drunkenness of Leonides, and Nero his Cruelty of his Barber.

I dare not trust my self in the Hands of much Company; I never go abroad so as to come home again the same Man I went out; something or other that I had put in order is discomposed, some Passion that I had subdued gets head again, and it's just with our Minds, as it's after a long landisposition with our Bodies; we are grown tender, and the least Breath of Air exposes us to a Relapse.

Keep Company with Persons rather above than beneath your self; for Gold in the same Pocket with Silver, loseth both of it's Colour and Weight and Weight.

But be careful that you do not twist Interest with great Men grown desperate, whose Fall hath been ruinous to their wisest Followers.

Therefore 'tis well faid by the Spaniard, Yrall Suga con & Calderon.

Men of large Souls, and narrow Fortunes, are eace. Eat If the ey gi He i ompa ith F Reta atura you nal: vanc Hear nemy u bel Say . hat yo Appr and Perm u be d sere are if t ch. Give

bt fo eir (

ith

for a the J

not red,

ce, a ither

r Me

ed the

Be not ot for your Conversation; for they seldom bless eir Owners with Moderation; their Friends ith Happiness, or the Place they live in with sace.

Eat no Cherries with great Men, for they will if the stones in your Eyes, like Fire at a distance ey give Warmth, but if too near, they burn.

He is Wise, or will soon be so, who keeps such ompany: But he that lieth with Dogs, riseth ith Fleas.

Retain your own Virtues, and by Imitation aturalize other Mens; but let none be Copies you, longer than they do agree with the Orinal: Study to gain Respect, not by little Obvances, but by a constant fair Carriage.

Hear no ill of a Friend, nor speak any of an nemy; believe not all you hear, nor speak all u believe.

Say what is well, and do what is better; be nat you appear, and appear what you are.

Approve your felf to Wise Men by your Vir-, and take the Vulgar by your Civilities.

Permit not your Humours to grow tart, tho' u be on the Lees of Fortune: Be of a quiet d serene Deportment; for any violent Courare like hot Waters, (that help at a plunge) t if they be often used, will spoil the Stoch.

Give not your Advice or Opinion before reired, for that is to upbraid the other's Ignoice, and to value your own Parts over much: ither accustom your self to find fault with or Men's Actions, for you are not bound to red their Gardens.

Be not Contradictious, for Contradiction paffor an Affront, because it's the condemning the Judgment of another; and it sours the estest Conversation.

B

Diftruft

three were

Aca.

t the

made nous,

ights

Comnd ill fenfi

; for d his uelty much

home ofed gain ng Inender ipse.

bove
same olour

terest Fall

Yra la

s, are

Distrust a Questionist, or an Asker of ma Questions, as an Impertinent or Spy; for for Persons who are forward in asking, do often the same liberty in telling: In cunning Menth are dangerous; for Questions in them are li Beggars Gifts, Sua munera mittit in hamo, whi are only to draw somewhat back again by way Answer, to betray you: You will meet with Me whose Ears are like Cupping-glasses; for as the attract the most Noxious Humours in the Bod so the other ever suck the worst Discourses the Company.

In Conversation rather practise to hear than fpeak: For you will have this Advantage, the what is beneficial in the Discourse, you may ma your own, and more readily discover what False or Impertinent.

Avoid too much Familiarity in Conversation He that Familiarizes himself, presently loses Superiority that his serious Air gave him: T more common things are, the less they are esteen ed: Familiarity discovers Imperfections that I servedness concealed: Be not too Familiar w Superiors for fear of Danger, nor with Inferio for it's indecent; far less with mean People whom Ignorance renders Infolent, infomucht being insensible of the Honour that is done the they presume it's their due.

There is no better Counter-battery again those, who would pick the Lock of the Hear than to put the Key of referve in the infide.

Never commend any Person to his Face, to others, to create in them a good Opinion him; neither dispraise any Man behind his bas as: T

but to himself, to work Reformation in him ood Op Over great Encomiums of any Person do a aus being fuit with Prudence; for 'tis a kind of Detraction, and that profession those with whom you do converse, and that profession the state of th

No eople Ar as a ema Urt lank ill be you mainta lity, er S Vords hase, ffabil Pyry are o defigi at he d alr vill e

hend

is Iu

at wa Valls (ould n ft ent ed in The ffectio

Heno

ing of hting

ill express Arrogance in you; for he that comhends another, would have him esteemed upon is Judgment.

Nothing will gain you more Reputation with the eople, than an humble and ferene Deportment.

A rude and morose Behaviour in Conversation. as abfurd, as a round Quadrangle in the Maematicks.

f man or for ften u

en the

are li

, which

way th Me as the

e Bod

urses

ge, th

w hat

: T

Urbanity and Civility are a Debt you owe to lankind; civil Language and good Behaviour, fill be like perpetual Letters commendatory unyou: Other Virtues have need of somewhat to than maintain them; Justice must have Power; Libelity, Wealth, &c. But this fets up with no oayminer Stock than a few pleasant Looks, good Vords, and no evil Actions: It's an easy purhase, when Friends are gained by Kindness and rsation ffability.

ofes t Pyrrbus being advertised by the Romans to beare of Poyson, for one of his own Subjects had esten design to dispatch him; he did then begin to fear hat it he should be conquered by their Arms, who iar wind already subdued him by their Civilities. design to dispatch him; he did then begin to fear ferio Hence it was that Magnanimous Don Alphonso People ing of Naples, by forgetting Majesty but a while, uchthe shting from his Horse to relieve a Countreyman at the lat was in some danger, conquered the fortified Valls of Gaetta, which the Battery of his Guns again ould not have done in many Days: He made his Hear off entry at their Hearts, and presently after eneed in Triumph into their City.

The Vulgar are as violently carried in their effections, as they are furious in their Persecutions bases: The first thing that gets their Love (after a him bod Opinion) is Courtesy and Generosity. Agedous being asked how one might get the Love of track len, answered, by speaking the best, and doing and hat profits them. , and that profits them. B 2

Let

Let your Behaviour, like your Garment, be neither Streight or Loose, but Fit and becoming Catch not too foon at an Offence, nor give to easy way to Anger; the one shews a weak Judge ment, and the other a perverse Nature.

Avoid in Conversation, idle Jests, and vain Compliments; the one being Crepitus ingenii, the other nothing but verbal Idolatry; Virtue, like a rich Stone, is ever best when plain set.

Anacharsis being invited to a Feast, could not be prevailed with to smile at the affected Railleries common Jesters; but when an Ape was brough in, he freely laughed, saying An Ape was ridical lous by Nature, but Men by Art and Study.

Be not of them that commence Wits by Blafphe my, and cannot be Ingenious but by being Impious

To break idle Jests, is the Suburbs of Vanity and to delight in them, the City of Fools.

By endeavouring to purchase the Reputation of being Witty, you lose the Advantage of being thought Wise.

An Advocate pleading in the Senate, and using many Jests, Pleistarcus said to him, Sir, you do no consider that as those that Wrestle, are Wrestlers a last: So you by often exciting Laughter, will become ridiculous your self.

Jests must be used like Physick, you must no accustom others Ears with them too much, for they lose their Operation by reason of the too much Familiarity they have with the Hearers: your Jests, like Mustard, be biting, as you make others afraid of your Wit, so you had need beat fraid of their Memory. Wit is of the fecond venter to Wisdom; or Wit is nothing but Wis dom, skared out of its Wits.

Never put your Countenance or Words in Frame, to express Bombast or profound Nonsency nothing doth more depritiate or under-value a fo-This ber Person.

Th lunt beaks

> L T

The

oke; y C1 Use nders And ho co besaur ofylla You ve do eding ng of ry Ri

I pity

You daF the S uty yo ble R

If you ver de ve no Youn eath,

Noth an th rn bai

of B To be it, be ming

e too

Judg-

Vain

z, the

not be rieso

ough

idicu-

afphe

pious anity

tation

being ufing

do not lers a will

ift not

:h, for

he too

ers:

make

d be a-

(econd

Wif

is in isence,

e a 10-

This

like

This Folly is handsomely derided in an old lunt Epigram, where the Fantastico thus bebeaks his Foot-boy.

Diminutive, and my defective Slave. Reach my Corps Coverture immediately; 'Tis my Complacency that Vest to have, T'insconce my Person from Frigidity.

The Boy thought all was Welch his Master oke r till he rail'd in English, Rogue, go fetch y Cloak.

Use such Words, as those to whom you speak, nderstand; otherwise you will be as ridiculous Andrew Downes, (Greek Professor in Cambridge) ho courted his Mistress out of Henry Stephens besaurus.

I pity that Person who never speaks but in Moosyllables, like Rablais Gray-Frier.

You will meet with many Persons, (as I my felf ve done) which are wife in Picture, and exeding formal; but they are so far from resolng of Riddles with Oedipus, as that they are ry Riddles themselves.

You must have a care of these, for a Pedant da Formalist are two dangerous Animals; but the Solons, and Heroes of the Times, out of uty you must pay them the Debt of an Honouble Regard and Memory.

If you meet with a Person subject to Infirmities, ver deride them in him, but bless God that you ve no occasion to grieve for them in your self. You may see your own Mortality in other Men's eath, and your own Frailty in their Sins. Nothing doth more cultivate and embellish a an than the Conversation of the Wise; Man is in barbarous, he is ransomed from the Conditiof Beasts, only by being cultivated.

To build up your felf, keep the Society of the moit most virtuous and excellent Persons; but when you are built, strike in with those of the Inserior Size; for the other will Eclipse the Lustre of you Virtue: The most accomplished will always have the first Rank; and if you have any part of the Praise, it will be their leavings: It will be no Prudence to do Honour to others, at the expense of your own Reputation.

Tis a fair Step towards Happiness, to delight in the Conversation of wise and good Men where that cannot be had, the next Point is,

keep no Company at all.

The Cat out of pretended Kindness came of day to visit a sick Hen, and asked her how so did; she answered, The better if you were su ther off: After the same manner, answer all id and vain Persons.

These Men, like a vitiated Stomach, corru whatsoever they receive, and the best Nouril ment turns to the Disease.

I do not design to open my Breast, like the Gates of a City, to all that come; the Virtuos only are my Guess.

The Affyrians make Mercury to be the Plant of Young-Men; and the reason is, as I conceive because that Planet is good or bad, as it's Conjunction with another.

Be free from all kind of Strangeness and part eular Humours, as not agreeable to Conversation; for who would not wonder at a Demopher Complexion, who sweat in the Shadow, at trembled for Cold in the Sun?

Be Orpheus in Silvis, inter Delphines Arion: would advise those that are of a severe and more Conversation, to sacrifice to the Graces. Thou dle cl Sile

The leth 1 Speaking as Think vife the lether the lether

Dial of Before Mind, A was Fool

Nev peakin Let nay m eglect bservi Disc n its p

A po Ears; nake the Discount

ittle L I app Delphick

Hear

SECT

SECT. V. Of Discourse.

Discourse is Vehiculum Cogitationum; therefore it should run even with the Wheels of Men's houghts, which ought to be discreet, and not le chiming of Impertinences.

Silence is the Wisdom of a Fool, Speech, of a vise Man.

When

nferior

ys have

of the

be no

xpena

deligh

Men

t 15, 1

ne on ow h re fa

all id

corrup

ourill ike th

irtuou

Plane

nceiv

it's i

1 part

verlat

mopho

V , an rion:

more

E C

The Rabbies observe upon the Two and Thirleth Psalm, and other Places, that this Word Speak) in the Original, signifies as well Thinkng as speaking; to teach us, That we ought to Think before we Speak, and not to Speak otherrise than we Think.

If the Clock of the Tongue be not fet by the Dial of the Heart, it will not go right.

Before you Speak, dip your Tongue in your lind, and then you will mind what you Speak.

A wise Man hath his Tongue in his Heart, but Fool his Heart in his Tongue.

Never Speak in Superlatives, for that way of peaking ever wounds either Truth or Prudence.

Let your Discourse be such as your Judgment nay maintain, and your Company deserve; in eglecting this, you lose your Discourse, in not blerving the other you lose your self.

Discourse like the Season of the Year, is best n its proper time.

A polite smooth running Discourse charms the Ears; but sublime Metaphysical Conceptions, nake those that hear them, do Penance; and the Discourse of some Men is as the Stars, which give ittle Light, because they are so high.

I approve not of those Bootick Ænigmas, or Delphick Oracles, they are fit only for an Apollo.

Hear more willingly than Speak, and learn of B 4 others others rather than shew thy self a Teacher; for it's many Men's Fault, rather to unfold their old Wares, than purchase new.

I had rather be a Table-Book, to take the wife Sayings and Discourses of others, than to have every Word of mine esteem'd an Oracle.

A prudent Man hath his Eyes open, and his Mouth shut; and as much desires to inform him self, as to instruct others.

The wise Man retires within the Sanctuary of his Silence; and if sometimes he be communicative, its but to a few, and those the Wise.

Never argue against the Truth, but covet to her Champion, at the least to hold her Colours. He that argues against the Truth, takes pains to be overcome; or if a Conqueror, he gains by vain Glory by the Conquest.

I have heard two Men arguing so passionately one against the other, that each of them lost Charity, and at the last, both of them Truth: There is no Dispute managed without Passion, and yet there is scarce any Dispute worth a Passion.

Let your Discourse be smooth, and flowing like a River, not impetuous like a Torrent.

If there be any occasion of contending, let is be done with Respect, and in such Terms as to propound your Opinion, and not Magisterially, and in a Style of Authority to establish it; but at the Romans gave their Judgment, Ita videtur, is appeareth so to me; for Men are not easily convinced of any thing by others discoursing imperiously.

In Discourse make not too great profusion or expense of your Knowledge, lest your Treasury to soon exhausted: Some new thing is to be kept in store, that you may appear with to Morrow: The skilful Fowler throws no more Meat to the Birds than what is necessary to eatth them.

than what is necessary to catch them.

the S your

N

your . Na

The fettle he coman t

but a to him hat he his D gree nforr ome

was n isked Quacl

I have who wher P and ca le had veret Taylo vill li

Taylo
um IV ure;
reat I

The ame I sked whe Du

Disc ake th

Never talk or discourse of any thing beyond the Sphere of your Intellectuals, or that is out of your knowledge, which will render you ridiculous.

Navita de Ventis, de Tauris narret Arator; Enumeret Miles Vulnera, Paftor Oves.

There was a Gentleman that had a falt Humour settled in his Nose, which did much afflict him; he consulted a Doctor of Physick, and the Gentleman told the Doctor that he had a Friend (who was but a Quack), but because he was much beholden o him, and unwilling to disoblige him, defired hat he might be fent for, and confult together about his Distemper; to which the Doctor did willingly gree; the Quack being fent for, came, and being nformed what the Doctor had prescribed, after omeimpertinent Discourse, he told the Doctor he was much mistaken in the Distemper; the Doctor sked him what he took the Distemper to be, the Quack told him it was Fistula in Ano.

I had a Neighbour, by Profession a Taylor, who was much abused with ill Language by anoher Person; the Taylor was resolved to sue him, nd came to his Counsel and declared to him how e had been abused; the Counsel asked him what verethe Words that he spake of you? Sir, said the Taylor, he call'd me Prick-louse; a good Action vill lie said the Counsel; I know, that, said the aylor, very well, but I would have a Scandaim Magnatum, for the Words are of a high Naure; and I have heard that the Jury usually give reat Damages in that Action.

These two Persons had their Brains under the me Meridian with that Gentleman, who being sked what the Bucentore was, answered it was he Duke of Venice.

Discourse is the Scheme by which you may ake the Ascendant of the Understanding.

Forbear

e wife have

r; for eir old

nd his n him ary o

unica t to be lours ains to ns bu natel t Chahereis nd yet

OWING t. , let i s as to erially, but as tur, I y conmperi or ex ury be rept in

: The e Birds

Never

Forbear all Sarcasms or Satyrical Speeches, for they will be remembred when they are forgotten by him that spake them.

The Earl of Effex told Queen Elizabeth that the was as crooked in Disposition as she was in Body; she never forgot those Words, and the Earl lost his Head for them.

Chareas the Tribune had a broken Voice like an Hermaphrodite; when he came to Caligula for the Word, he would sometime give him Venus, other while Priapus; Chareas well understanding the Abuse; there being some time after a Conspiracy against Caligula, Cheareas to convince him of his Manhood, at one Blow cleft him down the Chine with his Sword.

Le Lingua non ha Ossa, e rumpe ill Dosse,

Says the Italian; the Tongue tho' it hath no Bone, yet many times it breaks the Back.

Vincula da linguæ, vel tibi vincula dabit.

Confine your Tongue, or else it will confine you. Be not suite and over talkative; that is the Fool's Paradise, but a wise Man's Purgatory; it will express a great Weakness in you, and dother imply a believing that others are affected with the same Vanity.

Great Talkers discharge too thick to take always true aim, Qui pauca considerat, facile pronum siat.

To fpeak well and much, is not the Work of one Man.

Εν πολυλογία ές ι πολυμωρία.

Speak well, or speak nothing; so if others be not better by your Silence, they will not be work by your Discourse.

By your Silence you have this Advantage, you that' com Bi

oble

that Le Simi

it's y reme fear T

> but y filent him.

In Silen cures De

talkat woul that n the Pa

Be hear felf ca

I har Tong Par the bea

Ine bei Italian Keep nance

Be Affert

gumer Behay eches, e for-

b that vas in id the e like ula for Venus. nding

Conce him wn the e you d doth

ith the ake alronus

ers be

, you 00

observe other Men's Follies, and conceal your own; not that I would have you over-referv'd, that's a Symptom of a fullen Nature, and unwelcome to all Society.

But let your Discourse be solid, not like a Ship that hath more Sail than Ballast.

Let Reason be the Pillar of your Discourse, and Similies the Windows that give the best Lights.

Your Wit may make clear things doubtful, but i's your Prudence to make doubtful things clear; remember he that is quick in fearching, feldom fearches to be quick.

There is no Man that talketh, if you be wife, but you may gain from him; and none that is filent, if you have not a care, but you may lose by him.

In Discourse it's good to hear others first, for ath no Silence hath the same effect a Authority; it procures a kind of respect to your Words.

Demades the Orator in his Age, was a very talkative Person, and would eat hard; Antipater would fay of him, that he was like a Sacrifice, and is the that nothing was left of him but the Tongue and ory; it the Paunch.

Be affured, he that delights to speak much and hear little, shall inform others more than himself can learn.

I have Knowledge enough my felf to hold my Tongue, but not enough to speak.

Parca lingua, aperta frons, & clausum pectus, are ork of the best Ingredients of Wisdom; and that made the Italian say, Gli pensiere streti, & el Viso sciolto, Keep your Thoughts close, and your Countenance loose.

Be not Magisterial, or too affirmative in any work Affertion; for the bold maintaining of any Argument, doth conclude against your own civil Behaviour: Modesty in your Discourse will give B 6. a Lustre a Lustre to Truth, and an Excuse to your Error. If you defire to know how short your Under. standing is in things above, consider how little you know of your felf, what the Soul is, of what Members your Body is inwardly compacted, and what is the use of every Bone, Vein, Artery, or Sinew, which no Man understands; as Gales himself confesseth.

Protagoras hath delivered to us, That there is fome nothing in Nature, but doubt; and that a Man not a may equally dispute of all things; and of that alfupit so, whether all things may be equally disputed of silence I do pay much Reverence to the Humility of y and Plato, Democritus, Anaxagoras, Empedocles, and reat all the new Academicks, who positively main-like s tain, That nothing in the World could be certain frustr. ly known.

And Socrates was by the Oracle adjudged the lars a wifest Man living, because he was wont to say to Mo (I know only this) I know nothing; yet Arche the fillans was of Opinion, that not so much as the were could be known, which Socrates said he knew, to led by wit, that he knew nothing.

Therefore I never troubled my felf with the Inquiries of the Height of the Heavens, nor the quence Magnitude of the Earth, whether the Sun (as Anaximenes thought) be as flat as a Trencher, of Sapien. Whether it be hunch-back'd underneath as a Cockboat, as Heraclitus held: I never disturb my Head With the Dimensions of the Moon, to know whether she be hung loose in the Air, or inhabited or were not; whether the Stars be but Earth luminated, as Whatso Thales maintained, or whether perfect Fire as Anachy whether merfect Fire as Anachy who is the start of the Moon, to know whether the Stars be but Earth luminated, as Whatso Thales maintained, or whether perfect Fire as Anachy who is the start of the Moon, to know whether the Stars be but Earth luminated, as Whatso Thales maintained, or whether perfect Fire as Anachy whether the Stars be supplied to the start of the Moon, to know whether the Stars be but Earth luminated. Thales maintained, or whether perfect Fire, as And Plato; I leave Nature to it self, and think it sufthe greater to know who is the Author and to give with desired to the self. God thanks as I am able.

among

YU

to be

Was :

He

He

thing l

Deity.

Sot

SECT. VI.

Error.

Inderlittle

f what

ry, or

CT.

Of Silence and Secrecy.

d, and YUpiter having conceived some Displeasure against Mortals upon Earth, caused an Army Gala to be raised against them; and being raised, there was a great Squabble who should command it: here is some were for Mercury, others for Mars; but Man not agreeing, they acquainted Jupiter therewith; hat al-fupiter told them he would have none of them, silence should be his General. And indeed Secre-ity of y and Celerity are the two Poles upon which all reat Actions move: And the noblest Designs are like a Mine, which having any Vent, is wholly train-train-train-

Hence it was that Pythagoras enjoyned his Scho-Hence it was that Pythagoras enjoyned his Scholars a Quinquennial Silence, that they might learn to fan to Meditate, and unlearn to Talk; and this was the first Rudiment of Wisdom; And after they were grown Learned in Silence, which they called exemplican, then they were allowed to speak.

He who offends thro' Speech offends rashly, who thro' Silence safely: In Matters of Conser the quence, Qui silet est sirmus: A silent Man walks as A- in the dark, and is rather to be guest at than known:

The Venetians in their Senate, which confifts of Three Hundred Nobles, manage their Affairs whe with fuch admirable Secrecy, as if none of them were privy, or as if they had power to forget what sever they heard.

And Embeddedors fent thither cought to be of e, as And Embassadors sent thither, ought to be of the greatest Sagacity, because they treat as it were give with dumb People, and are to produce And Embassadors sent thither, ought to be of thing by Signs.

So that at Venice Silence is no less venerable than amongst the Persians, where it was esteemed a Deity.

Secrecy is the Key of Prudence, and the Sanctuary of Wisdom.

I never do more Penance, than when I have communicated a Secret to two; before I told you of this, said Charles the Fifth (of a Design discovered of the Seventeen Provinces to his Favourite Lunenburgh) I was an Emperor, but now you are follows

The Answer of the Italian was Witty, who had published a Libel against Pope Sixtus: His Holi- the Du ness being extreamly offended at it, promised a considerable Sum to any that should discover the himsel Author; some Days being past without hearing lence any News thereof, they found these Words writtent to ten at the bottom of the Pasquil, Nol Sapray, Santissimo Padre, quando lo feci era solo: Most Ho-Santissimo Padre, quando lo feci era solo: Most Hobeing ly Father, you shall never know it; when I made it, I his Ro was alone.

Nulli crede unquam, quod tu clam feceris: He After that makes others Privy-Counsellors in such Cases, chance may pass for a Prodigy of Folly.

He that talks what he knows, will also talk be disc what he knoweth not.

Fingere qui non visa potest, commissa tacere Qui nequit, bic niger est, bunc tu (Romane) caveto

A futile and talkative Person is no well-tuned Cymbal: Be like a Spring-lock, readier to shut king of than open: If a Man be thought secret, it invited that Discovery, as the more close Air sucketh in king be the more open.

Never communicate that which may prejudice your Concerns when discovered, and not benefit your Friend when he knows it.

Pretend not to understand those Affairs which it to di your Prince would have kept secret; there is nothing will so soon create an hatred of you, and anto I consequently your Ruin.

The Duke of Anjou having received from Charles What p he N Hugon his to ing w mentio priz'd led as to feci

He Selen

Bread ness an ing tha

with T

n the ainly his tal

vered one of

Asit Whe

him wh the the no

bene-

Sanc. The Ninth of France, his design of extirpating the Hugonots on St. Bartholomew's day, communicated have his to one of his Gentlemen; the King discourdiscouring with the Gentleman in private, happened to mention this Secret; his Majesty was much surpriz'd at it, and caus'd this Gentleman to be killed as he was Hunting, conceiving no other way to had to secret of so great Importance, which the Duke had so inconsiderately discovered.

He that trusts another with a Secret, makes er the himself a Slave: But in great Persons it's a Violence that cannot last long; for Men are impatient to redeem their lost Liberty.

Selencus, Sirnamed Galymaca, a valiant Prince, she his Royal Diadem, and to get himself packing with Three Men, that he might not be known.

with Three Men, that he might not be known. : He After he had wandred a while in the Desart, he Cases, chanced upon a poor Cottage, where he requested Bread and a little Water, to the end he might not talk be discovered; his Host shewed him all the Kindness and Courtesy which in him lay, well knowing that he was the King, and so conducted him in the way that he did require; and would certainly have been nobly rewarded for it, had not tuned his talkative Tongue marr'd his Market: The King departing, said, Farewel, mine Host; who invianswered, God keep you, my Lord; whereat the eth in King being much troubled, and fearing to be discovered by the Indiscretion of his Host, ordered udice one of his Men to cut off his Head. As it's not Prudence to hear a Secret if of Contern, so many times it may be his Ruin that heard which it to discover it. s no. When King Lysimachus professed great Kindness and unto Philippides the Comedian, and demanded of him what he should give or communicate unto him; harles What pleases your Majesty, says Philippides, provided the to be not a Secret. I am

I am not for making Windows into Men's Hearts, or prying into the Cabinets of their Privacies: It was finartly replied by the Egyptian. when one asked him what he had in his Basket Cum vides velatum, quid inquiris in rem abscondi-

I would not have any Man enter into my Se. crets without my leave. It is but common Civility to stand off when a Man is reading of Letters, or in any private Discourse: Cardinal Richlien had a great Esteem for a Person, and began to entrus him in his Business; but finding the young Man reading some Papers which he left upon his Table, he would never after employ him.

As Alexander was reading of a Letter which he received from his Mother, containing Secrets and Accusations of Antipater, Hephastion also (as he was wont) reading along with him, he let him alone: But having read it over, took his Ring off his Finger, and laid the Seal upon his Mouth; meaning thereby, that he to whom a Secret is committed, ought always to have his Mouth close.

> Servo d' altrui si fa, Chi dice il suo Secreto, a chi n'ol sa.

He makes himself a Servile Wretch, To others evermore, That tells his Secrets unto such As knew them not before.

Let your Heart set a Lock upon your Lips, but be sure you your self keep the Key.

If at any time you fall into the Humour of Talking, keep the Philosopher's Check upon your Tongue, i. e. Lingua, quo vadis?

Bembo, a Primitive Christian, came to a Friend of his to teach him a Pfalm, he began with the 39th Psalm: I said, I will look to my way, that I offend not

Verse, for me month That h hinete earne with n

No but ma

AN hath co what h Thi

re tho we pay rets u En la

Prover

Iam out if r of one. where ore I p hat ex Armodi ution he was lare w piracy never c fact, t ected ntran age by

It w nut a S

erance

Tong

with my Tongue: Upon hearing of which first Verse, he stopt his Tutor, saying, This is enough for me if I learn it as I ought: And being after fix. months rebuked for not coming again, he replied, That he had not learned his first Lesson: Nay, after nineteen years he protessed, that he had scarce earned in all that time to fulfil that one Line.

No Man ever repented of having kept Silence, out many that they have not done fo.

A Man may easily utter what by Silence he ath concealed, but 'tis impossible for him to recal what he hath once spoken.

Things that are to be done, are not to be told, nor rethose that are fit to be told, good to be done; we pay Tribute to as many as we discover our Se-rets unto.

Men's

r Pri-

btian,

sket;

condi-

y Se-

Livili-

rs, or had a ntruf

Man s Ta-

ch he

s and as he

t him

off his nean-

nmit-

9 IM

h iscod

acim

dare v

PITAC

19 49

Lips,

ur of your riend

e 39th

ndnot

with

Enlaboca serada Moxcano entra, says the Spanish Proverb, Into a Mouth closed, a Fly never enters.

Iam unwilling at any time to entertain a Secret; out if my Friend shall make my Breast a Repository of one, I do declare, Ubi deposuerit, ibi inveniet, where he hath laid it, there he shall find it: Thereore I pay a great Veneration to the Memory of hat excellent Leana, who after her two Lovers, Armodius and Aristogiton, having failed in the Exetution of their Enterprize, had been put to Death, he was brought to the Torture, to be made to delare what other Complices there were of the Conpiracy; but she continued so constant, that she never detected any one. In remembrance of which fact, the Athenians caused a Lion of Brass to be eected which had no Tongue, and placed it at the intrance of a Castle, shewing her invincible Couage by the Generosity of the Beast, and her Perseerance in Secrecy, in that they made it without Tongue.

It was one of Pythagoras's Symbols, Entertain not a Swallow under your Roof: Thereby advising not not to admit into your Society a talkative Perfon intemperate of Speech, who cannot contain what is committed to him.

There are a fet of Men which differ nothing from broken Pitchers, which can hold nothing but let it run out by babbling.

Freedom of Speech I must confess is proper to Generosity, but Difference of Occasions many and re times renders it dangerous.

To hear much and speak little, is an Heroick Life at Virtue.

Homer had good reason to esteem Menelans, Nel tor and Ulysses, (who were flow to speak) to be you; the Wisest among all the Grecians, and Therston her of a Fool for his babbling.

Silence is the highest Wisdom of a Fool, and Speech the greatest Tryal of a Wise Man.

A Man without Secrecy, is an open Letter for every one to read.

It was the Advice of Philip D. of Burgundy to Earl Charalois his Son, Think to Day, and Speaks Morrow.

. A Wife Man draws the Curtain of Prudencebe fore him (which is Silence) to make him wall unseen: Yet many a filent Man is like a shu Book, which if you open and read it, you ma find good Matter in it.

But I would not have you pay too superstiti ous a Reverence to Angerona the Goddess of Si lence, lest you make your felf liable to that Para dox which was told one who was Silent.

Prudens sis, Stultus es; si Stultus, Sapiens.

Reservedness will be your best Security, and by you Slowness of Belief the best Sinew of Wisdom the gre Never open your felf but with an half Light and full Advantage: Never impart that to a Friend of Me which may impower him to be your Enemy; you true w Servants (which usually prove the worst of Ene nies) ut ne

AS

ver ir nit it, must p fyou

Con lender

et me

 R^{Ep}_{C}

on Ric Man c goes:

Age greate speak i

Rep that sp you fil flrong.

The

mies

othing thing,

per to

ter for ndy to

1, and

peakt a shu u ma

erstiti of Si Para t. S t and

YOU Ene mies

Person nies) you may admit into your Bed - Chamber, n what but never into your Closet.

A Secret, like a Crown, is no Estate to be made over in Trust; and to whomsoever you do com-nit it, you do but enable him to undo you, and you must purchase his Secrecy at his own Price: And fyou shut your Purse, he will open his Mouth; many and remember that Secrets are not long liv'd.

Confider how Precarious and Unhappy your leroick Life and Fortune will be, which depend on so lender a Thread as another's Pleasure; therefore et me advise you always to carry two Eyes about to be you; the one of Wariness upon your self, the otherstandard of Observation upon others.

SECT. VII. Of Reputation.

R Eputation is a great Inheritance, it begetteth Opinion, (which ruleth the World) Opiniwall Man carrieth about him, and leaveth wherever he Man carrieth about him, and leaveth wherever he goes; and it's the best Heir of a Man's Virtue.

Agefilaus being asked how one might get the reatest Reputation amongst Men; he replied, by peaking the best, and doing the bravest things.

Reputation is made up of the Breath of many that speak well of you; if by a disobliging Word you filence the meanest, the gale will be the less flrong, which is to bear up your Esteem; therefore by your Civility oblige all, so your Esteem will be dom the greater, and the Consort the fuller.

The shortest way to attain Reputation is that riend of Merit; if Industry be founded on Merit, it's the true way of obtaining it.

Chi Semina virtu fama raccoglie.

The gaining of Reputation is but the revealing of your Virtue and Worth to the best Advantage.

It will be more Glory to you to perform that which hath not been attempted before, or attempted and given over, or hath been atchieved, but not with so good Circumstance; than by effecting a matter of greater Difficulty, wherein you are but an Imitator of those that went before you

There was an excellent Painter observing that Titian, Raphael, and some others had gained to themselves the Fame of eminent Masters, who resolved to fall to work in a grosser way. Some demended of him why he did not paint after the manner of Titian and others; he answered, that it was more Credit to him to be the first in that grosser way, than the second in a way of more Delicacy.

Having raised your Reputation, it will require great Skill to preserve it fresh and slourishing, and to keep it from growing stale and out of date: For an ordinary Novelty carries it from the greatest Excellency that is in a State of Decay. You must therefore always have somewhat that may create Curiosity, and feed Expectation; as the Sun we see in the Change of his Horizons, that so Privation may make you desirable when you set, and Novelty admirable when you rise.

To Men in great places there can be nothing more fatal than a great Fame.

Non minus malum ex magna quam mala fama.

Great Merit and high Fame are like a high Wind and a large Sail, which do often fink the Veffel.

Alcibiades, by his noble Exploits which he atchieved on behalf of his Countrey, had obtained so great Reputation for his Abilities, that when he fail'd in the exact performance of any thing, he ould n It's V Vings read l bmmit ertain re Alc loak b re ma ound There eir ow other at he t e, wil Neve dion. Over-vas pre eater Peality e Perf n to fli Reput m rec urt tha

d muc

Be stud Be stud ; if the riting vive y Glass ade w npt; lipect, a lt's ea vas presently suspected; not so much because he ould not do it, as because he would not.

It's Wisdom sometimes therefore to clip the Wings of Reputation, and not suffer them to pread beyond the compass of the Nest, and to ommit some small Faults, in an Affectation of ertein Failings and Mistakes, which peradventre Alcibiades did; this is the throwing off ones loak before the Eyes of Envy, which peradventre may empty her Quiver at you, but never round your Reputation.

There are Men in the World, who to advance eirown Fame, will decry the Virtue and Merit other People: In which case you may be assured, at he that is out of hopes to attain another's Vire, will endeavour to take away his good Name. Never think of raising your Reputation by De-action.

aling

age.

n that or ateved.

y effe-

a you

e you.

g that

ed to ho rene de

man-

it Was roffer

cy.

quite

, and

: For

eatell

mult create

n we riva-

, and

thing

a.

Wind

he at-ned fo

en he

g, he

Was

el.

Over-great Laudatives do many times more urt than Good; for when any thing is cried up d much talked of, People imagine to themselves eater Persection in it, than in truth there is; for eality can never come up to Imagination; so that e Persection falling short of the Idea, Men beto slight that which before they admired.

Reputation is gained by course of time, and selm recovers a Strain; but if once broken, it's ver well set again. There is no Plaister, in fine, a wounded Reputation.

Bestudious therefore to preserve your Reputati-; if that be once lost, you are like a cancelled siting, of no Value, and at best, you do but vive your own Funeral: For Reputation is like Glass which being once crack'd, will never be ade whole again: It will bring you into Conmpt; like the Planet Saturn, hath first an evil pect, and then a destroying Instuence.

l's easy to get an ill Name, because evil is fooner believ'd; and bad Impressions are very di ficult to be defaced.

The Navigation of Civil Life is dangerous because it's full of Rocks, for Reputation to soll

But how soever, be careful to keep up the Repu tation of your Parts and Virtue with the Vulgar for it will be more Advantage to you to be ac counted Wise and Virtuous by the Ignorant, that by the Learned; for the Ignorant are many, bu the Learned few.

It was a Principle in Julius Casar, not to be minent amongst the Magnifico's, but to the chie amongst the Inferiors.

Credit cannot be preserved with too gree Care, nor forfeited but with the greatest Los hink putation, nor so great a Folly as to put it in Hardfult zard; That brave Archer described There is no fuch Infelicity as to furvive ones Re zard; That brave Archer deserves Commendati on, who refused to shew his Skill unto Alexan Conten der, fearing to lose that Honour in an Hour, which Debton he had been all his Life-time a getting.

It's more difficult to repair a Credit that is one shaken, than to keep that in a flourishing Green ness, which was never blasted.

Reputation is like Fire, when you have kin dled it, you may easily preserve it; but if once you extinguish it, you will not easily kindle it again. extinguish it, you will not easily kindle it again, least not make it burn so bright as before.

At a time Fire, Water, and Fame went to Track of the Gravel together, (liking each other's Company) the Mobility confulted, in case of losing one another, how the vere all might be retrieved, and meet again; Fire said which a when you see Smoke, there you shall find me Moblem Water said, when you see Moorish Ground The there you shall find me; but Fame said, take her panish there you lose me, for if you do, you will run to the panish the world meet me again. Hazard never to meet me again.

There

TI

7

Ne

me

ree of o Ira

ad no

mph

Hom

onfide

ipt a f

ery fir

Ofte

entatio Man

Nev

vere ty

Therefore,

ery dif

gerous

to fpli

Repu ulgar

be ac

it, than ny, bu

o be e

ne chie

o grea

Green

ve kin nce you

gain,

Thy Credit wary keep, 'tis quickly gone, Being got by many Actions, lost by one.

SECT. VIII.

Of Vain-glory and Boasting.

Never see a Vain-glorious Man, but he makes me think of the Fly which fate upon the Axleree of the Chariot-Wheel, and said, What a Dust I raise! So there are some vain Persons, if they ad never so little hand in any Business, they Loss hink it's They that carry it: They make a Trines Remph of every thing they do; and it must be the in Habital Contempt of their Conduct.

Self-esteem is commonly punished by universal Contempt; He that praises himself, remains a rywhice Debtor to all others.

Homer was so blinded with Conceit, and overis one onfident of his own Abilities in Poetry, that he Green ipt a false Quantity, and lest it on Record in the ipt a false Quantity, and left it on Record in the ery first Verse of his Iliads.

Oftentation of Dignity offends more than Ofentation of Person. To carry it high, is to make

Man hated, and it is enough to be envy'd.

to Track Grandeur of your Nobility, Gentry, or of the Track Grandeur of your Family; for the greatest y) the Jobility was puny to no Nobility, when Men ow the verealike; and a Yeoman is a Gentleman in Ore, re said which another Age may see refin'd, and the greatest and me Jobleman is but a Gentleman in a Text Letter. The Marquiss of Spinola Commander of all the skehee panish forces in the Netherlands, and the Prince strong who commanded the Army of the Dutch, were two samous Rivals; the Prince derogating Never boast of your Nobility, Gentry, or of vere two famous Rivals; the Prince derogating from

There

from Spinola, said, that he was sprung out of Merchant, and consequently not capable of an Competition with him, who came of a Princel Extraction; the Marquiss sent him word, That was a more glorious thing for a Merchant to have command over Princes, than for a Prince to be commanded by Merchants.

I knew a Man who by Profession was a But cher, and raised a considerable Estate, and pure oved chased a Coat of Arms; he left several Sons, who ongst much boasted of their Gentility; falling one day ows into Discourse with a Gentleman of a very ancient thin ent Family, and highly extolling their Coat of It can Arms, the Gentleman asked them what their Kno Coat was, they told him a flaming Torch; the lowled Gentleman replied, that a flaming Torch was ninf but a Cow's Tail reversed.

If any Man will fet himself off, let him do rather by a great personal Worth, than by a bor gal M rowed Character.

A Ranting and Boaffing Man, is like a Drum ofe of which makes a great Noise, but look in it, and there is nothing.

I will not with the Egyptians vaunt of my No bility, nor with the Arcadians contend for Antiquity with the Moon; Virtue is my Crest and Nobility.

Those Persons who vainly boast of their No bility and ancient Descent, (having nothing else are like the Man of Abydenus.

Qui se credebat miros audire Tragædas, In vacuo letus sessor, plausorque Theatro.

Or like unto that ignorant rich Man Calvifa Sabinus, who thought himself very Learned, be cause he maintained learned Men about him.

Sometimes a few Grains of Vain-glory may fe forth a Man's Worth and Merit, and like Varnil Value

Lun ntatio rismon r hav Ther VES 2 orld

Ciel

r Cre

Sow

ats of tany, e hav rjorai s wit ifter (Ve ca ligh a

's Pi may ns of le tha

weak little from a Foc e of a Cielings, make him shine, as it did Sigismond Lunenburgh. Without some Feathers of Ofntation, the Fight had been but flow; and tho? rismond had taken good Aim, yet he could neto have it have hit the Eagle without them.

There are a fort of Men which magnify them-ves as if they were the only Oracles in the a But forld, and that the whole Orb of Learning oved in their Heads; but I must tell you, as anongst wise Men he is the wisest that thinks he ows least: So among Fools, he is the greatest thinks he knows most. It can be no Glory to any Man to be Proud of the Knowledge, if he considers, that much of the h; the owledge of the Arts we profess, we have the minstructed therein by the very Beasts and or Creatures; of the Spider we learn to Spin forld, and that the whole Orb of Learning

r Creatures; of the Spider we learn to Spin m doit Sow; of the Swallow to Build; of the Nigh-a bor gal Musick; of divers Creatures Physick; the ats of Candia being shot with an Arrow, do

Drum of out from a Million of Simples, the Herbit, and tany, and therewith Cure themselves; the Tore having eaten of a Viper, doth feek for wild ny No rjoram to purge herself; the Dragon clears her and ister Glisters of Sea-waters unto themselves.

Ve cannot derive the Pedigree of Knowledge eir No sigh as Solomon, much less from reading it on ing else 's Pillars; only with astonished Ignorance, may fee its Epitaph in Confusion on the ns of Shinar.

t of

of any

rincely

Thati

a But

le that doth not know that he is Weak, is weak in Knowledge.

little Esteem of one's self, hinders a great sed, be from others; boasting may gain Applause im. a Fools, but it puts a wise Man to the Exmay se of a Blush.

Varnish value the Asterisk of one wise Man, more than the Euge's of a Multitude, or the Io Peans of many; prudent Antigonus placed his whole Renown in the fingle Testimony of Zeno.

A Poet being derided for acting of a Traged none being present but Plato, answer'd, The this one Person is more than all the Athenians fides.

Vain-glorious Men are the Scorn of wise Men the Admiration of Fools, the Idols of Parasite and the Slaves of their own Vaunts.

Those Men expose their Actions to the Pulick, as Painters do their Pieces drawn in Wall Colours, (which are Representations of who was only in their Imagination) to be gazed a and admired by the Multitude.

One boasting to Aristotle of the Greatness of Countrey; That, saith Aristotle, is not to be of sidered; but whether you deserve to be of the great Countrey.

When a Man comes once to be blown with this Tumour of adoring himself, farew

Respect and Reverence to all others.

Aristotle seeing a Youth very conceited, a withal ignorant; Young Man, saith he, I w I were what you think your self, and my E mies what you are.

Wind puffs up empty Bladders; Opinion, For Socrates perceiving Alcibiades to be exceed proud, and boasting of his Riches and Lands, shewed him a Map of the World, and bid his find out Attica therein, which done, he desired that he would shew him his own Lands; her swered they were not there; Do you boast, replications, of that which is no considerable part the Earth!

He that is his own Appraiser, will be mistal in the Value. It was Jugarth's Glory, Plurim faciendo, & nihil de seipso loquendo: By this hegi gard t is ve A Agric ater

Servi an g of deftl

fermal ltuou s, ca state

National Nat

ed the ustras, le is controlled out b pplau lake n

it be be worthe K Eye is hen I i I nev tfu! F othing tes tha ever mons, (t

grea

ater than Envy, and received the Honour and gard of Posterity.

es of th

ole R raged

niansb

Ce Men

arasite

he Pu

n Wat

of wh

azed

Is of

o be co

e of th

lown

farew

ed, a

, I w my Er

n, Foo

xceedi

ands,

Th

t is a sufficient Recompence for the doing of a ve Action, to have brave Men approve of it. Agricola (faith Tacitus) notwithstanding his ma-Services done to the Empire: Nunquam in suam an gestis exultavit, did never boast of any Acof his Fame, but (as an inferior Planet) did defly acknowledge the light he had to be olly derived from a higher Sun.

fermanicus having calmed and allay'd the tumous Broils and Insurrections of the Ger-, caused a Pile of Weapons to be raised with stately Title, Debellatis inter Rhenum Albim-

Nationibus, Exercitum Tiberii Casaris ea Moenta, Marti, & Jovi, & Augusto Sacravisse; the Nations between the Rhine and Albis beovercome, Tiberius Cafar's Army had confeed those Monuments to Mars, Jupiter, and

ustus, but added nothing of himself.

e is doubly excellent, who confines all his ellencies and Perfections within himself, out boasting of any; he is in the Ascendent pplause by a way not much frequented.

ake not your felf a Figure among Cyphers.

o Man is content with his own Condition it be best, nor dissatisfied with his Wit tho it e worst.

the Kingdom of the Blind, he that hath but bid h Eye is a Prince.

ne destrain Then I have done a Kindness or good Office s; her I never love to boast of it; for that of st, replication Friend is to make a certain Enemy hen I have done a Kindness or good Office to I never love to boast of it; for that of a le part othing will give a greater Lustre to all your es than Modesty.

missale ever magnify your self or boast of your great Plurimons, (that's Pedantry) and as in Falconry, so is hegt it for a Truth, that those of the weakest

. Wings.

grea

Wings, are commonly the highest Flyers: Reff tisfy'd to do, and leave it to others to talk of it.

'Tis the Employment of a great Soul rather do things worthy to be admired, than to admi what himself hath done.

There are some who hold it the chiefest Hono to be thought the Wonder of their Times; whi if they attain unto, 'tis but the Condition of Mo fters, that are generally much admired, but me abhorred.

An old drudging Whore-master, was no turn'd of Fourscore, and had still the Vanity value himself upon his Faculties that Way, w taken notice of upon all Occasions to be telli People over and above what a Spark he had be in his Time: He was a constant Man at the fices of the Church, and was observed still up the reading of the Commandments, to roar The Lord have Mercy upon us to the seventh, much lowder than to any of the other; that it the People a staring about them to find out desperate Blade, that was in so much more ger of that Commandment than any of the of Nine.

A proud prancing Steed (and Bob-tail'd cording to the Mode) that was as brave in Embroidery and Velvet as his Master and Mon cou'd make him, got loofe out of the Stable of ready Bridled and Saddled, and there was Bounding and Curvetting at fuch a Rate, as if Ground would hold him; while this vain h mour was upon him, it was his Fortune tom two Asses and a Horse upon the way comings Market with empty Sacks instead of Sadles: T Equipage with their long beaftly Tails, all Po dered over with Chaff and Dust, look'd for culoufly Phantastical, he cou'd not forbear B tering them for so odd a Furniture and Fashic or to

I wo

ree eep the Plea

WOL

11 T t W rar

oug pu be hen i ifour

are: to b g the unpr ce an One A llest : n, b nter is lt the Thin the F

ous th ne it rit. World n in i ng the I h hood, e But

And d Spel

Reft

of it.

rather

o admi

Honor

s; whi

of Mo

out mo

vas no

anity

Tay, w e telli

had be t the 0

fill upo

roar o

venth,

that it

out th

nore da

the oth

tail'd

ave in

nd Mon

tableon

e was

e, as if

dles: T

would fain know now, fays he, what you ee are thinking of, and what you wear those eeping Tails for, unless it be to clean the Way the next Comer. Why, fays the Horfe, 'tis Pleasure to us to think how Light and Easy we Il Travel all this Day; beside, cry'd the Asses, t we are going into a Countrey where there rare Thiftles. Pitiful Wretches, fays the or, to entertain your selves with such mean oughts, and so fell into his Capreols again, put himself into such a Heat, that he cou'd be quiet till he had thrown off his Saddle: hen that was gone, the Flies plagued him fo foundedly, that he wish'd for his Tail again; are not you right enough ferv'd cry'd the Afto be made smart for your Vanity in preferthe superficial Splendor of a vexatious and unprofitable Pomp to the Bounties of Provine Rinaldo a Merchant fell into Company uphe High-way with three good Fellows; the llest and the best bred People that ever were n, but the Complemental part of this Ennter is nothing to our purpose. ce and Nature.

the first greeting, they fell a talking from Thing to another, and in particular how danous the Road was for Thieves, and what a ne it was the Government look'd no better it. But, fays one of them, we live in a wickvain H World, and we must expect to meet with ill ne tomen in it. Well, says Rinaldo, 'tis a strange mingstong the virtue of certain Words and Charac-World, and we must expect to meet with ill I have heard indeed, fays one of the Broall Po hood, of Charms to drive away the Fleas, to 'd son e Butter come, and to keep Ale from sourbear Band fays another to cure a Horse of the Fard or to prevent Foundring. In these cases a I would Spell will do more than a good Farrier.

Rinaldo gave them the hearing, and so they we on putting the Question to him, what he thou of the Power of certain Prayers by the way Charms or Spells. Why truly, fays Rinaldo, do not much deal that way; but this I cant you, that when I Travel, I do commonly a the Office that they call the Prayer of St. Jul every morning Fasting, and never fail of a go Lodging the Night after it; which is a main Po with me, let me te'l you upon a Journey; and it is with me too, I can affure you, fays one the Company (finiling) and I hope you havel your Lesson in Form this very Morning. Y yes, says Rinaldo, every Syllable of it: So you are safe, says t'other; and yet after all the what do you think of a Wager now betwirt and me, which gets the better Lodging of and me, which gets the better Lodging of two? Well, says Rinaldo, with all my Heart, wided you give me your Oath that you have made use of the same Prayer. To tell you made use of the same Prayer. To tell you Truth, fays the other again, Praying is not Talent; but if I lose this Wager, by the Gr of Heaven, I'll go that way to work hereaft however for your present Satisfaction; I don folemnly swear to you, that I have not ell directly or indirectly call'd upon any Saint m or less this Day. Hold, says Rinaldo, one Art more, and then 'tis a Bett. You shall be bot to Lodge at an Inn too; for I have no Friend Acquaintance upon the Road. Ay that's Reason, says t'other, and now 'tis Done Done, and the Wager shall be Horse, Money Cloaths.

As they were coasting forward by the side a Wood, the Wagerer stopt short, takes Redo's Horse by the Reins, and bids him State Dismount and Deliver, for this is the Time Place to determine the Wager. In one Wo eral on'd ner His

hey.

are

he V

0.

p;.l p;.l ne W

noug is ow the

Fucinald Mu Abo

g up ace of the b

round r his rembl

laid-Si The oung larquis mour is for oor in iseen;

hen ev

they we hey stript him to his Shirt, and turn'd him loose, arefoot, cold and dirty to shift for himself with the way he Wind in the Teeth of him, and a long way to sinald, o. The Thieves in this Interim scampering se-I can the eral ways for their own Security as fast as they only a got their out to Rinaldo to make trial of his St. Julian.

His Servant with his Valida (Table)

His Servant with his Valife (which was all ain Point Hope he had left him) was not as yet come y; and p; His Horse, it seems, having cast a Shoe by ys one he Way, but he was got near enough however havel he have his Master in the lurch, and save hough to leave his Master in the lurch, and fave is own Bacon by scowring away cross the Fields rall the heeft Inn in the Town, where his Master wints have quarter'd that Night, and there was in got to five found and making good Chear, while poor heart, have Mud.

If you had ow as groping out his Way up to the Ears have Mud.

About an hour after the Bridge was Drawn is not got up to the Walls of the Town, and hunt-the Grag up and down a considerable Time for some hereast I don the back-side of the House with a kind of Pent-ouse to it, and a few scatter'd Straws upon the round under it: Rinaldo took up this Retreat in his Couch, and there laid himself down, rembling and Shuddering so long, that he was ser heard into the next House, by the Lady and that's laid-Servant of the Family.

The Mistress of the House was a Brisk Airy soung Widow, and the Consident of a certain Joney oung Widow, and the Confident of a certain larquis that carry'd on the Intrigue of a Secret mour with her in those Lodgings. The Markes Risis for his Privacy and Convenience had a Backim State oor into the Fields to go or come at any time liken; The Lady look'd for him that Night, and hen every thing was made ready for his Reception,

tion,

tion, Bath, Supper, Bed, Lady and all in her be Dress and Humour, in comes the Page with Excuse that his Lord cou'd not come.

This was a lucky disappointment for Ringle for the Maid upon this occasion mov'd her Mi tress in his Favour: Madam, says she, this M serable Wretch will be starv'd to Death if ther be not some care taken of him. Thou speake like a good Wench, fays the Lady, here is a empty Garret, and prithee put him in there, wit a Squab and a little fresh Straw, and there le him take his Rest; but you must get him some what to Eat. The Lass does as she was bid, an the opening of the Door was to Rinaldo, the ta king him out of his Grave. The Man was en cellently well Shap'd, and a very agreeable Per fon to all purposes, only out of Countenances the Beastly Circumstances of his present Condition on. He told his Story over and above with f good a Grace, that the Maid goes up to her Mi tress in a Transport of the rare Qualities of the Man, and in short, tells her from Point to Point how he behav'd himself; stay Sweetheart, say the Widow, have not I some Cloaths in the Wardrobe of my late Husbands? Yes, yes, Ma dam, fays the Servant, I am fure you have; bu in the first place, says the Widow, (out of respect to this Gentleman's Quality, as by this time die the evidently appear) carry him to the Bath that we obtice prepar'd for the Marquis, and after that give him a Suit of my Husband's Cloaths, and then to Superport. The Widows Thoughts were divided a ling the order of the same of this while 'twixt the Marquis and Rinaldo, but up on the refult she came to this Conclusion, The multichange was no Robbery, and that one Man migh be as good as another. Rinaldo was come by the have time to have a very good Opinion again of Scenft Julian's Prayer. Supper and Defart being not h: I over the o ver

alk hey

wo

her b im

b be Aft

aldo t

leep

em:

m, i rave

ing eir I ourse

at Ra

d Ec

e Bai

her be Withan

Rinaldo er Mil this Mi if then

Speake! re is a re, wit here le n some oid, an the to was ex ble Per nancea Conditi with f ner Mil of th to Poin rt, fay in th es, Ma ve; bu over

ver, and the two Lovers left to themselves to alk out the rest, they made a Match on't before hey parted, to the satisfaction not only of the wo Principals, but of the Marquis himself. here needs no more to supply this Vacancy, but imagine the tenderest Things that are possible be spoken upon such an Occasion.

After this Nights Conversation away goes Rialdo to his Inn, where he found his Lacquey falls leep, and his Horse and Baggage as he left em: He changes his Clothes, and in this Intem, in comes the News that his Three Fellow ravellers were fallen into the Hands of Justice, ing surpriz'd upon the very Point of parting eir Booty. They were presently Arraign'd in ourse, Try'd, Condemn'd, and Executed; so at Rinaldo recovered his Money, Goods, Horse, d Equipage, with a good Supper Gratis, into e Bargain; Thanks to the Widow and St. Ju-

SECT. IX.

Of Censure and Detraction.

respect Here are a sort of People that love to look on time direction the knotty side of the Arras; and take little hat we office of the excellent Figure that is wrought on the right side of the Hangings: If they see to Sup my Persections in a Man, and spy but one ided a sling in him, that must eclipse the Glory of the other.

han might multa nitent, non ego pancis offendor maculis:

have so many Failings in my self, that I necessitive any Man; if I do, I censure my self and not self: I love not to reprehend that in another which I find in my own Breast; I affect not a play the Epicure, and inveigh against Luxury; of be perfidious my self, and expect exact Fideling from my Neighbour.

A wise Man which values himself upon the scor of Virtue, and not of Opinion, thinks himself net ther better or worse for the opinion of others.

I have often admired how it should coment pass, that every Man loving himself best, should more regard other Men's opinions concerning himself than his own.

When one told Pelistarchus that a notorion Railer spake well of him; I'll lay my Life (sa he) somebody hath told him that I am dead, for he can speak well of no Man living.

He that thinks himself injured, let him argue thus within himself; either he hath deserved this or he hath not; if he hath, it's a Judgment; is hath not, it's an Injustice. When you discove any faults in others, make the right use of them which is to correct and amend the like Failure in your self; therefore when you observe any Micharriages in others, forget not to put this Question to your self, am I not such another?

Moses an Abbot and a Religious Person, we heretofore called to give Sentence against a Person that had offended; he came, but with brought a Bag sull of Sand upon his Shoulders being asked what he meant by that, They at (said he) my Sins and Errors which I can neithe sufficiently know, and am scarce able to bear: Hat then shall I judge of another.

We live upon the Credit and Reports of others; Truth seldom comes pure to us when comes from far; for when it takes some tindus of the Passions it meets with by the way, pleases or displeases according to the Colour that Passion or Interest gives it.

Mer fures a felves: blamed ife hin

They the

The me; for front, always informations a lice; ar

Ther
poken ate: F nd dro
A M e be al

Tin&ur

her, or It's a ain app ir wise Man in It doing Consi he Judg Democri ocrates ong wa Nay, he de neve oft him.

Men Let n

lot t

y; 0

idelin

e fcor

If nei

me to

ernin

Orion

e (Sai

for argued this

; if h

Scove

then

ailure

y Mil

restion

, Wa

a Per

vithal

1ders bey at neitha

How

of o heni

nctur ly, I

olour

Men

Men usually frame both Opinions and Censures according to the Mould of Evil in themelves: They are not most guilty that are most lamed: Those who speak against Machiavil pracise him most.

They that of every slip Advantage take, find but those faults which they want Wit to make.

The first report makes no Impression upon me; for Falshood many times marches in the Front, and Truth follows after in the Rear. I always keep a Door open for a second or third information; to do otherwise, it may be pernisious and give advantage to the Artistice of Maice; and ill-disposed Persons hasten to give the sincure to Credulity.

There is none so Innocent as not to be illpoken of, none so wicked as to want an Advoate: Fame, like a River, beareth up things light, and drowns those which are weighty and solid.

A Man must know many things first, before e be able truly and judiciously to judge of anoher, or of his Actions.

It's a harder thing to avoid censure, than to ain applause; for this may be done by one great r wise Action in an Age; but to avoid censure, Man must pass his whole Life, without saying r doing one ill or foolish thing.

Consider how apt Men are to be mistaken in the Judgment of others. It was a long time that democritus was taken for a Madman, and before corates had any Esteem in the World; how ong was it before Cato could be understood? Tay, he was affronted and condemned, and Peole never knew the value of him till they had ofthim.

Let no Man be confident of his own Merit; he best Err: And let no Man rely too much C 6 upon upon his own Judgment; for the Wifest are de Flowe ceived.

Who is so happy as to please all, and be envie of none? Who is fo good that none complain of? The Athenians were displeased with their & monides because he talked too loud: The Theban well of accused Panniculus for spitting too much: The Carthaginians spake ill of Hannibal because he were b Cen open Breasted, with his Stomach bare: Other hers, he laughed at Julius Cæsar, because he was ill girt. ended Before you censure others, see all be well a teration Home, otherwise you will prove such a Censurather m Morum, as was Manilius Plancus in the Roma Never Story, Qui nihil objicere possit Adolescentibus, qua fother non agnosceret Senex: Or you will be condemned our ow as the Physician was by the Tragedian, for presenting to heal other Men's Distempers, and a los at the same time his own Sores running. the same time his own Sores running.

Cum tua pervideas oculis male Lippus inunctis, Cur in amicorum vitia tam cernis acute?

I love not to Arraign other Men's Faults, an leave my self out of the Indictment; I am no curious to know what my Neighbour hath faid done, or attempted; but only what I do my felf that it may be Just and Honest.

When any thing displeases me; before I construed, demn it in others, I enquire if I be not guilty axims it my self; and by so doing, from whatever have the hear or see, I draw some Advantages; and thing we it; are at a good pass when one Man is the bette dhim, I When any thing displeases me; before I con for another Man's Faults.

One Man's Fault is another Man's Lesson buld her which made the Musician send his Scholars to Patience bad Player, to avoid his Faults.

Man is a Tree, the Fruit whereof is never not ked how but in the latter Season; his Nature cannot be vered, Be discovered while it is green; we must see the ying your Flowe talian. ife of Ben

houju

A C

ought t ed wort rstood: If I se ithout i ike too y felf d When

e, or spe rned,

nay, i at old

nvie

nplair

eir Si beban

The

Wen

irt.

ell a quo mned

r pre nd a

,

s, and n no

faid y felf

COL

OWE

re de Flower and Fruit of it: Is di loda la Sera, faith the talian, the Evening crowns the Morning, and the life of Man must be censured by the End.

Benot Censorious, for thou knowest not whom hou judgest: It's a more dexterous Error to speak vell of an evil Man, than ill of a good Man.

A Censurer is more than any other obnoxious Censure; for taking upon him to judge of o-Other hers, he is supposed less faulty than the repreended; they are invited to a more strict Confieration of his Life and Actions, and no less, but Censor ather much more to censure him, than he another.

Roma Never employ your self to discern the Faults. fothers, but be careful to mend and prevent our own.

Imitate Socrates, whose centure being a bat he of an unlearned Book, answer'd, That he of an unlearned Book, answer'd, as good nd worthy of commendation, as those which he un-enstood: Thus ought all wise Men to do.

If I see a Vice in a Man, I reprove the Vice. ithout reproaching of the Person: I love not to like too hard upon others, because I know I y self do often deserve Blows. When I am told that any Man hath reproached e, or spoken ill of me, I am not over much conmed, but behave my felf according to the ltyd laxims of Prudence and Charity; and confider ever have this but at second hand, I can hardly behing we it; or if he did say it, some body hath abuncette dhim, I am consident he hath no ill meaning in nay, it may be he faid it on purpose that I

Patience is a remedy against all Standers, and at old Courtier was in the right, who being at old Courtier was in the right, who being ripe ked how he kept himself so long in Favour, anothered, By receiving Injuries and ill Language, and eth ving your Humble Servant for them.

He

He

He that values himself upon Conscience, no Opinion, never heeds Reproaches. When I am ill spoken of, Itake it thus, if I have not deservit it, I am never the worse; if I have, I'll mend.

If a Jewel be bright, no matter who fays it is a Counterfeit: If my Conscience tell me that am Innocent, what do I care who tells the World that I am Guilty?

Malice may spit her Venom at me, but canno hurt me: A Scandal is only a flight stroke upon the Party injured, and returns with greater force upon him that gave it, like Arrows that are floor into the Air, and fall back to the Earth again.

Never speak ill of any Man; if of a good Man it is Impiety; if of a bad Man, give him you Launce Prayers.

Never carry a Sword in your Tongue to wound the Reputation of any Man.

The Anger of a Talking, Noisy Person is no much to be regarded; but have a care of provo king a close and referv'd Enemy; for there may b Danger in it.

There were too young Men that in their Cup fell very foul upon Dionysius the Elder, for hi Tyranny. He invited them both to Supper; and perceiving that one of them prated freely and foolifily, but the other drank warily and sparing ly; he dismissed the former as a drunken Fellow whose Treason lay no deeper than his Wine, and put the other to Death as a Close and a Disa fected Traytor.

Zeno being demanded how he behaved himsel when he was reviled? He said, As an Ambassal dismissed without Answer.

Whosoever is vexed at a Reproach, would proud if he were commended.

A Conceit upon a Squint Eye, a Hunch Back or any Personal Defect, passes for a Reproach lan is t and v Cal than a

Wh many (faid for my fice in t on me. regardi

The one M n Merc gainst .

Alexan If an hus and nfwer ther Far nly those There Congue. ather sta ne, that 'Tis K at the o ther. Let yo f no boo erty of a ack; if candal; at detra other v serves b nnot ob and why may we not as well hear of it as fee it? Calumny to a Virtuous Person, is no more than a Shower into the Sea.

When Petilius and Quintus accused Scipio of many Crimes before the People; On that very day (said he) I conquered Hannibal and Carthage: I for my part am going with my Crown on to Sacrifice in the Capitol, and let him that pleaseth Vote upon me. Having thus said, he went his way, not regarding them or their Accusations.

There is nothing so irksome to me, as to hear one Man back-bite another: Memnon hearing of Mercenary Soldier outragiously exclaiming against Alexander, he lent him a Blow with his Launce, saying, He had bired bim to Fight against Alexander, not to Rail at him.

If any one tells me such a Man slandered me hus and thus, I never Apologize for my felf, but nswer him again only thus, He knows not my rove ther Faults; if he did, he would never have reckoned as he had those you tell me of.

There is no Protection against a depraying Cup l'ongue, it's sharper than Actius his Razor; I had or his ather stand at the Mercy of a Basilisco, or Serpen-; and ne, than the Fury of an Outragious Tongue.

'Tis Kingly to do well and hear ill: if I can but It the one, I shall not much regard to bear the ther.

Dot

am

ry'd

d.

it is nat I

orld

nno

upon

force tho

n.

Man

you

ound

is no

y and aring

ellow

e, and Difal

imfel assado

roach

20

Let your Discourse of others be fair; speak ill f no body. To do it in his Absence is the Prorty of a Coward that stabs a Man behind his ack; if to his Face, you add an Affront to the andal; he that praises, bestows a Favour, but he at detracts, commits a Robbery, in taking from uld be other what is justly His; every Man thinks he serves better than indeed he doth; therefore you Back mot oblige Mankind more, than to speak well: an is the greatest Humorist and Flatterer of imself in the World.

I have observed, that no Men are so ready to fully the Honour and Reputation of others, a those who deserve the worst themselves; yet have so much Charity for them, to believe the many times they do it not so much out of a Principle of Malice, as thereby to gain a Reputation of Virtue and Justice! Wherefore if any Person thall speak ill of you, never disquiet your self but endeavour to live so virtuously as the World shall not believe that to be true which is reported of you; and you must understand, that many speak ill, because they never learned to speak well.

Your own Innocency will be a Back of Stee unto you, and a clear Soul, like a Castle again all the Artillery of depraying Spirits, is impress nable; however it will be your Wisdom to care a Counterpest or Antidote about you against the Poison of Virulent Tongues.

Government in a Nobleman of our own. A Doctor of Physick gave him the Lye; and the Earl vertemperately told him, That he would take any thing of him but Physick. This was a noble Gallantry of Spirit; for a Lye, like false and counterfeit Money, tho' a good man may receive it, ye he ought not in Justice to pay it.

I am not much concerned what the Common People think of me: Nay, if they tell me I am Fool: I can have the same Sentiments with the great Chansellor, who when Cardinal Woolfe told him he was the veriest Fool in the Council, God be thanked, said he, that my Master hathout one Fool here. I do desire to honour my Life, not by other Men's Opinions, but by my own Actions. Si vis beatus esse, cogita hoc primum contemnere, So contemni; nondum es felix, si te turba non deriserit.

Make your self agreeable to all; for there is n Per wer t my: spised Stre affift he Ea ay she Ox b e Priel ies to at one the o u will en en a Shor

the M

Wife Em chief, Il his f o' the T the Co ther th the otl

Si Ly Et ute Passion ithin u inion,

Latin

10 adv t

ers, a

yet

re tha

1 Prin

tation

Perfor

felf

Worl

porte

fpeal

11.

Stee

again

npreg

Carr

nft the

l good

l ver

e Gal

it, ye

nmo

am

h that

Voolley

ancil

th but

Life.

vn A

ntem-

ere is

110

Person so contemptible but it may be in his wer to be your best Friend or your worst Emy: No Enemy is contemptible enough to be spised, fince the most despicable command grea-Strength, Wisdom and Interest than their own. affift in the Designs of Malice or Mischief. he Eagle is not safe in the Arms of Jupiter, the ay she offends the little Beetle. Have a care of Ox before you, of an Ass behind you, and of ePriest on either side of you. If you do Couries to a Hundred Men, and disoblige but one, at one shall be more active to your ruin, than the other shall be to serve you. Therefore if u will gain respect, turn Usurer, and make all en enter into Obligations to you. The World a Shop of Tools, of which the Wife Man only the Master.

SECT. X.

Of Passion.

Wise Man is a great Monarch, he hath an Empire within himself; Reason commands chief, and possesses the Throne and Sceptre. I his Passions like Obedient Subjects do obey; o'the Territories seem but small and narrow, the Command and Royalty is great, and reaches ther than he that wears the Moon for his Crest, the other that wears the Sun for his Helmet.

Latius regnes avidum domando Spiritum, quam Si Lybiam remotis Gadibus jungas, Et uterque Pænus serviat uni.

Passion and Reason are a kind of Civil War ithin us, and as the one or the other hath do-inion, we are either good or bad.

He

He that can subdue his Passions, shall obtain more glorious Victory than if he placed his Standards in the farthest Consines of Asia and Asia and his Triumph is more renowned, than is had overthrown the Medes and Persians.

Fabius had never conquer'd Hannibal, if heh not first overcome himself.

They which have conquer'd Nations; drive Armies before them; and subdued all open En mies, have been conquered by their Passions with out any Resistance.

Alexander when he was Master of the Worl was yet a Slave to his Passions; and was led triumph by them.

If you can but tune your Passions, and reducthem to Harmony by Reason, you will rend your self as pleasant and easy, as the Birds a Beasts were in Orpheus's Theatre, when they it tened to his Harp.

As you are a part of the Universe, I would in have you by any disorderly and irregular Passions disturb the Harmony of it, and become a Jami String in so well-tuned an Instrument.

Heap up Gold, gather together Silver, and ral Pyramids of Honour; if you do not composed disorders of your own Mind, stint your Desire and deliver your self from Fears and Cares, yo do but rack Wine for a Man in a Fever.

The way to secure your Passions, is to subdayour Desires; if they be ill, not to permit the to advance; if good, so to moderate them, as not to expect for the future a greater savour than to nature of the thing, and the inconstancy of so tune will permit, always ballancing what you hope for, with what you fear; for a wise Ma ought to live no more in hope than in fear, up put it into the power of Fortune, to take at thing from, or add any thing to his Felicity.

It's and to Wisdo I wi hew m

A M

best Re ike a B

A wohis I

utragi

and mid force, I uin; ind difference the guibe capi be capi berhaps Man udges no med

Look nd you im; h

Hurrico

ut tea

When Anger, you sha your Eagure an Feature

Deform n this I It's the greatest Dominion to rule one's self, and to govern our Passions is the Triumph of Wisdom.

I will never gratify my Enemies so far, as to new my self concerned in any Passion.

A Mind transported with Passion, rejects the end Reasons and retains the worst Opinions: ike a Bolter which lets the Flower pass, and keeps nothing but the Bran.

A wife Man makes all his Paffions subservient ohis Reason.

Obtain

is Star

Africa

an if

f he h

drive

en En

IS Wit

Worl

s led redu

rend

rds an theyl

uldn

lions

Jarri

nd rail

oofet

Defire

es, yo

fubd

t the

, as no

nau t

of Fo

at yo

e Ma

ar, no

ke an

ty.

Of all Passions there is none so extravagant and outragious as that of Anger; other Passions solicit and mislead us, but this runs away with us by orce, hurries us as well to our own as to another's uin; it salls many times upon the wrong person, and discharges it self upon the innocent instead of the guilty, and makes the most trivial offences to e capital, and punisheth an inconsiderate Word erhaps with setters, insamy or death: It allows Man neither time nor means for desence, but udges a cause without hearing it, and admits of to mediation: It spares neither friend nor soe, at tears all to pieces, and casts humane nature to a perpetual state of war.

Look upon an angry Man in the fit of his rage, nd you may see all Africa and its prodigies in im; he is more savage than the Tigers there; low him into a flame, and you may see Volcanos, Hurricanes and Burafors in him.

When you are in the highest rage and fit of langer, presently run to your Looking-glass, there ou shall see your Blood boiling with Choler, our Eyes sparkling with Fire, your Hair standing an end, your Face distorted with Menacing seatures, insomuch as the Spectacle of your own Desormity will render you frightful to your self. In this Paroxysm of Rage, the best Antidote (that I know)

I know) against the malignity of this Distempts is, to apply Lenity to it, that will recompens all again, becalm the Mind, and keep it in such a becoming Temper, that it's not moved in self, nor suffers any passionate eruption or sally of the Spirits and Blood into the other Members that may cause any the least Indecorum.

The torrent of Passion is like troubled Waters in a great Tempest: Reason will be your best Pilot to bring you into a safe Port, but you must have a care you do not increase the Storm by an unwary Word or Action, or kindle a Fire while the Wind is in a Corner, which may blow it on your Face.

It was Pythagoras's Symbol, Cut not Fire with a Sword; adviting not to exafperate an angri Person; but to give way to him.

Have not to do with any Man in his Paffion for Men are not like Iron, to be wrought upon when they are hot.

Give place to the Torrent of Fury, and let in have its full Courfe; when it's at the highest, in will turn again; and then you shall have the Tide as strong with you, as before it was against you

I fear unruly Passions more than the Arrows of an Enemy, and the slavery of them, more than the Fetters of a Conqueror.

There is no furer Argument of a great Mind than not to be transported to anger by any Accident whatsoever: The Clouds and Tempests at formed below, but all above is Quiet and Serene which is the Emblem of a brave Man, that masters all Provocations, and lives within himself.

Obviate the first motion of Passion, if you can not resist the First, you will far less resist the Se cond, and it still grows worse and worse; for the same Difficulty which in the beginning might be surmounted, is greater in the end.

Paffion

Paffic

ind;

ed, th er rifes

trays t

lting

nown,

Vill ar

mmat

the fir

artific

le to u

a grea

ou so at no 3

You.

Ulyffe

ith the

Chair

Tild Be

Some

wit;

etion,

Anger

em Po

As D

nt you

lides h

an, fa

; but

or no

Be cir

if yo

erlook

hemen

trainii

ur Mi

proce

Passions are the Elementary Humours of the ind; so soon as they begin to be turgid and exed, the Mind becomes sick, and if the Distemple of the Mouth, and breaks into Anger, it trays the Tower of Reason to the sury of an inling Passion: When once your Passions are nown, all the Avenues and Sally-Ports of the Vill are discovered, and by consequence may be ommanded. And therefore I do advise you to try the first place to subdue your Passions, or at least artificially to disguise them, that no Spy may be le to unmask your Thoughts; here to dissemble a great Point of Prudence; for by this means on so cunningly hide all your Impersections, at no Eye shall be able to discover them.

You must keep your Passions in your Power, Ulysses did the Winds in his Bottle, and deal ith them as we do with Mad-Men, keep them Chains for fear of Mischief; for otherwise a fild Beast is not so ungovernable.

Some Persons are above our Anger, others bewit; to contend with our Inferiors is Indisetion, and with our Superiors an Indignity. Anger may make dull Men Witty, but it keeps em Poor.

emper

pensi fuch

d in i

r fally mber

Wa

ar bell

1 mus y an

While

it on e with angry

ffion

upon

let i

eft, i

Tide

you.

WSO

than

Mind.

Acci

Its are rene;

t ma-

felf.

11 can-

ne Se

; for

might affion

As Diogenes was disputing of Anger; an insont young Fellow, to try if he could put him sides his Philosophy, spit on his Face. Young an, said Diogenes, this doth not make meangry t; but I am in some doubt whether I should be or no.

Be circumspect in every thing you speak or do, if your Enemies stood at your Elbow, and erlook'd every Action: this will beget in you hement Desires and earnest Endeavours of the training your disorderly Passions; this will fill ur Mind with good Thoughts and Resolutions proceed in a virtuous course of Life.

Paffions

Passions are a great deal older than our Reason; they came into the World with us, but our Reason for follows a long time after.

There is not a more effectual Remedy against Anger, than Time and Patience.

A Servant of Plato having committed a great Fault, Speusippus, says he, do you beat that Fellow, for I am angry; so he forbore striking him, for the very Reason that would have made another Man do it.

When I fee my Friend in a great Rage against any Person, I pretend to be Angry too; and I join with him not only in the Opinion of the Injury, but in the seeming Continuance of the Revenge; by this means I get time, and by advising some greater Punishment, I put off the present, and so abate his Fury.

The first step to the Moderation of Passion, is to perceive that you are falling into Passion; by that means you enter the List with a full Power over your self, and may consider how far it's necessary to give way to Resentment; with this Reselection you may be Angry, and put a stop to it as you please.

If your Passions are duly consider'd, you should need no other Cure than the Consideration of them; let the first fervour abate, and the Miss which darkens the Mind will be either lessend or dispelled.

It's a fign of a rich flock of Sense to know how to prevent and correct ones Humour; fince it's a Disease of the Mind; wherein a wise Man ought to govern himself as in a Distemper of Body.

Take away the cause of Passion, and you will never sally into Passion. When a Stranger brought Cotis some earthen Vessels thin and brittle, but delicately shaped and admirably adorned with Sculptures, he requited the Stranger for them, and then brake them all in pieces; Lest, said he, my Passion affion ofe th He th mself, actife Plato hand 11 held stook m no that he th in his To be ble Ex unqui nman t remo es mo her Paí e Gun nger m t it rest ver an gry wi If you Com t any I Conv mour mmun Never

flion g

s in at stern.

He wh

orld to er othe

er you

affion should provoke me to punish excessively ofe that should break them.

He that would exercise a Power profitable to mself, and grievous to no body else, let him actife it upon his Passions.

fon:

Rea.

gain

great

Fel.

him,

ano.

gainf

and I ne In-

e Revising

c fent,

, is to

y that

Over

effary

in you

ease.

hould

on of

Mif

Tened

how e it'sa

ought will ought ut de-

Scul-, and

, my

affion

y.

Plato was about to strike his Servant, and while hand was in the Air, he checked himself, but I held it in that menacing Posture: A Friend of stook notice of it, and asked him what he meant. m now, fays he, punishing of an angry Man: that he had left the Servant to chastise himself. he thought it was not fit that a Servant should in his Power that was not his own Master. To be angry at Anger, is almost the only justible Exercise of this Passion; for it's an Affection unquiet and turbulent, that if it once seise us, inmans us by the transports of Anger; Evils are tremoved but made worse, and the very Anger es more hurt than the Injury we complain of; her Passions rise in us by degrees, but this slashes e Gun-powder, blowing up all in a moment:

nger may glance into the Breast of a wise Man, titrests in the Bosom of Fools. A good Man is ver angry at any thing but at Sin, and he that is gry with this Sin, shall never sin in his Anger. If you be naturally disposed to Anger, frequent Company of the Patient; by this means, witht any Labour, you will attain to a fit Temper; Conversation is of great Moment: Manners, mours, nay, Opinions are thereby insensibly mmunicated.

Never fink so below your self, as to let any flion get the better of you. When Passion ens in at the Fore-gate, Wisdom goes out at the stern.

He who commands himself, commands the orld too; and the more Authority you have er others, the more Command you must have er your self.

I cannot but admire at the temper of that Postian, who in his Fury threatned the Tempess, an whipt the Sea.

I do not love to see a passionate Man scours himself with his own Scorpions, and in the mid of his innocent Contentments, fondly to give himself Alarms.

It's the infelicity of many Men, to break or into the greatest Passion upon the least occasion not unlike that Gentleman, (tho' Learned, we none of the Wisest) when seeing the Man Plough stell into a violent Disorder, and we much incensed against him, because he did no Plough secundum Artem, in drawing his Furrow Mathematically, and in Linea Recta, as he sall a Friend of his standing by, told him, that he little Reason to be displeased, if he considered the sall difference between Errare and Arare.

I am not troubled, if I see a Butterfly in the Air, and cannot catch it.

Be thou like the Caspian Sea, which is fail to ver to Ebb nor Flow.

'Tis more Prudent to pass by Trivial Offerces than to quarrel for them; by the last you are even with your Adversary, but by the first bove him.

SECT. XI.

Of Injuries and Revenge.

When I have an Injury done me, I never the Beacon a Fire, nor am I troubled! consider who did it; if my Kinsman, he did it ignorantly; if my Friend, he did it against his Will, it my Enemy, it's no more than I expected; lever put a fair Construction upon any thing that happens to me.

Archeland

rchele and mistak Some have en int en W and w faries, not tr the far more: rown e us ht that bear t ce tha ent: s agair , and ourn an Ir e's no by to d with trial c ency c

still ci

, mus

fuch as

e confi

o long

e will ret him

er have

rebelaus, when one sprinkled Water upon , and his Friends aggravated the Crime; You mistaken, said he, he did not sprinkle it upon me, some other Person he took me to be.

have often found by Experience, that I have en into no great Inconveniencies when I have en Wrongs patiently.

t Po

ft, an courg

e mid

o giv

ak or casion

ed, y

Ian |

id w lid no

lrrow

e fait

heha

redth

in th

i age

aidne

Offer

of you

first ver fe

led:

did i

Will

; I eg that

helans

2.

nd we shew our selves greater than our Adfaries, when we let the World fee that they not trouble us. When Children and Fools the fame things to us that we fret at in others nore advanced Years, we pass them without own; which shews, that 'tis not the Acts eus by our Enemies, but our own Resentnt that injures us.

bear the Injuries of others with the same pace that a Physician does those of a Phrenetick ent: I can patiently sustain all outragious Ins against me; my defire is to arrive at Hea-, and I ever bless the Hand which shortens ourney.

f an Injury be done me, and if I do my part, e's no hurt done; it's in the nature of an Ely to do Mischief; and it's my Duty to requite with Good: I make use of it for the exercise trial of my Virtue; I confront it with the Inency of my Life, and the security of a good sscience; I am not much moved, but keep my still cheerful, and fixed in my Station.

Man that walks in the Streets of a Populous , must expect to meet with a slip in one place. p in another, a dash of the Kennel in a third; such are the Adventures of Life, and with the e confideration are they to be undergone.

o long as there are bad Men in the World, e will be Villany in it; and he that is resolv'd tet himself for whatsoever he sees amis, shall er have one quiet hour while he lives

I would

I would have you practife to be a good Wa ler; which will teach you to frand firm, w ever befalls you.

If you are injured, you do your Adversary much Honour to take notice of it, and the too meanly of your felf to revenge it; let me vise you to dissemble an Injury, when you not the Power to revenge it; and generoul forgive it, when you have the means to do it.

'Tis a noble way of Revenge to forget la ries; for Resentment doth but encourage Malice which Neglect would diffipate. La the Twelfth of France, being advised by some his Council to punish such as were Enemie him when he was Duke of Orleans; answered a Prince, That it did not fuit with the Glory King of France, to revenge the Injuries done in Duke of Orleans.

In Revenge we act the Executioner, butin longs to a King to pardon: In the one we flow a Favour, but in the other we betray Infirmity.

the Beafts or en He that pardons proclaims in so doing, the fears not his Enemies; but Revenge implies of what we defire upon that account to leffer

He that is naturally revengeful, keeps Wounds open; which otherwise would cles themselves.

When I am more powerful than he that in me, I never take advantage of him, for that mean, as for an armed Man to force his En to fight when he hath no Weapon; and if li no power to repel it, I never florm, for Ch without Power, is like a wind that makes and but cannot hurt, In his vincensus me oder, mid Pardon is a glorious kind of Revenge; my self sufficiently revenged of my Enemy pardon him. Cicero did more commend a pard ined pref of a Re tance the 's th and ge it does and mfelv e Ini nquef hone r and He tha felf, Av. 9 Dnce : the B nired the] wait z fented nuch 1 mich that

Fox d

ereupo pappe would Il; the th trai shad a bim, 2 ping be temper f and d Wa

n, w rfary

nd th

et me

youh

lo it.

get In rage f . L

fome emie

rered

Flory

me to 173 9

butir

e we etray the B e, the

liesa

leffer

reeps

dechell

ก่อยต

at in thati

is En

hifl

or Ch

Salu bires

4, 11

emy

nd C

pardoning Metellus, than for the great Victory ined against his Enemies. so liew doidw : ast prefer the Glory of pardoning before the pleaof a Victorious Revenge; for sometimes for-Revenge hath been the cause of future Retance; and the pleasure of doing Evilorupes the displeasure of having done it. or nor sliv rouli s's the work of Prudence to prevent and Injuand of a great Mind, when done, not to rege it: He that hath Revenge in his Power. does not use it, is the great Man: It's for and vulgar Spirits to ftorm and transport mselves: Subdue your Affections of one e Injuries with a brave Mind, is one half the nquest.

honour Epictetus more for his aveza & anteze, r and Forbear, than if he had built a Pyramid. He that doth an Injury to another, doth it to felf, and it's many times repaid with full In-Aw. one one

Ince upon a time the Lion being very fick. the Beasts of the Field came to visit him, only Fox did neglect to do his Duty; the Lion much nired the unkindness of the Fox; the Wolf the Lion, That many times he spake to the Fox wait upon bim, but could not prevail, and refented it with all disadvantages to the Fox, insuch that the Lion was much displeased; ereupon the Lion sent a summons to the Fox, pappeared; and being asked by the Lion, why would not give him a Visit knowing he was Il; the Fox told the Lion, That he had been th troubled that his Majesty had not been well, had consulted all the Physicians for some Cure him, who unanimously did agree that there was ing better, or would sooner deliver him from his temper which was upon him, than to get a fat I and flay him alive, and lay the Skin hot to his Body:

Body: The Lion thanked the Fox for his cannot regard of him. In some short time after, to Wolf came to wait upon the Lion, the Lione dered him to be apprehended and flay'd, and Skin laid hot to his Body, according to the rection of the Fox; by that means the Lion we perfectly recovered, and the Fox quitted Scot with the Wolf for his ill Office done him to the Lion.

Do Injury to no Man though never so mean, once in Seven Years he may have an Opportunity do the greatest Man much good or harm.

At a time a Mouse troubled a Sleeping Lio and disturbed him, and happen'd to fall under Paw; he desired the Lion to spare him, hew but a Mouse, and yet might live possibly to him a Kindness: But how soever he was not won his Indignation; thereupon the Lion let to Mouse go. Some time after the Lion was take in a Net, the Mouse hearing of it, in Grating came and eat a sunder the Net, and delivered to Lion, who for all his Greatness could not de ver himself.

I shall commend unto you St. Bernard's Leg cy, which if Story speaketh Truth, was engrave upon his Tomb: Tria vobis, fratres, observandant linguo, quæ ut potui observavi. Primo, Nemini Stadalum feci; si quando incidit, sedavi ut potui. Se cundo, Minus semper sensui meo quam alterius credit Tertio, Læsus de lædente nunquam vindictam pet Ecce Charitatem, Humilitatem & Patientiam bis relinguo. Brethren, Three things I leave unto to be observed, which as I was able I observed. Fit I never gave offence to any; if at anytime it happen I pacified it as well as I could. Secondly, I always the less Credit to my own Sentiments than to those of othe Thirdly, Being injured, I never revenged it; Behalleave unto you Charity, Humility and Patience fbut ll no rt yo f: T the r is w m O sand bre In nfion artest Catch ie wa nt, ti Hath nged;

Whe

It is not the begetting the comments of the co ve it,

for fam again Hath white word, res it,

King Aldiers Hangir Idiers, e King

When eased,

When you have an Injury done you, confider at it is that disturbs you; it's not the thing it fout Opinion; remove the Opinion, and you Il not think your self wronged: Nothing can it you, except you joyn with it to hurt your f: The Mind is safe and unaccessible, and out the reach of Injuries: the thing we complain is without us, and stands still and quiet; it's mopinion within us, from whence the Trousand Turnults do proceed; we make our selves ore Injuries than are offered us, and the apprention of wrong doth us more harm than the artest part of the Wrong.

Catch not too foon at an Offence, nor give too ie way to Anger; the one shews a weak Judg-int, the other a perverse Nature.

Hath any Man wronged you? be bravely renged; slight it, and the Work is begun; forweit, and it is finished: He is below himself t is not above an Injury.

his ca

fter,

Liono

and

the D ion w

d Scor

n to nean,

tunity

g Lio

nderh hew

y to ot won

let t

as tall

ratin

eredt

ot de s Leg

ngray

andan

ini Sca

ui.

credit

m pett

iam 9

Matoy

Fit

appene

aysga

of other

Beha

tience

Was

The best Remedy of an Injury, consists in the regetting of it; but many times we forget the emedy, and those things are best remembred, sich ought most to be forgotten: A Fool struck to; when he was forry for it, Cato had forgot for saith Seneca, Melius putavit non ignoscere am agnoscere.

Hath any wounded you with Injuries? meet m with Patience; hasty Words rankle the ound, soft Language dresses it, Forgiveness res it, and Oblivion takes away the Scar.

King Antigonus one Night hearing some of his oldiers railing against him, when there was but danging betwixt them; putting it gently aside, diers, says he, stand a little farther off for fear e King should bear you.

When an ill Office is done me, I am not difeased, because it shall not be in the Power of my Enemy to make me angry, or put me in Passion: I pardon others, as though I did do offend my self; and so abstain from offending though I pardoned no body.

D₃ my

All the Art that I use to vanquish my Enemi is, to do them all the good I can. all the

If you be displeased with every Peccadillo, will become habitually froward: Learn to be tient, by observing the Inconveniencies of limitience in other Men.

If you have any Infelicity upon you, by your patience you superadd another to it: He who mits to his Passions, at the same time is a Slave many Tyrants. I prefer the Freedom of my Mi and the Serenity of my Soul (not clouded w Passions) before the Empire of the World.

When I am injured, I never complain, to have observed that Complaints do rather ex a Passion to offend us, than a Compassion comfort us; they make way for those that he them, to do the same to us, that those haved of whom we complain; and the Knowledge the Injury done by the sirst, serves the second an Excuse; and complaining of past Injuring ives occasion for suture.

It will be the Test of Prudence in you with any Passion to endure the Injuries and Follow other Men; if you cannot endure them in othe you make them your own: for first you losely Judgment, and then offend your self; and sol sion will precipitate you into that ill which would avoid.

If any Man doth me an Injury, I am not flurbed, but must pity him; for he is the siell fended, and receives the greatest Damage, because this he loseth the use of Reason:

The severest Punishment of an Injury, is Conscience of having done it; and no Man does If you nge, gia W If an it, fo his please y dot e the atch Every ious F use 'ti make Lan ey are my K s mo

n res

may be at place times Action n and

Injur

vn Ac

For all more ceived

ian P

ed that ards to illed w w Fav

me in s more than he that is turned over to the Pain did da Repentance; it's better to compose Injuries in revenge them, for the Revenge of one Injudoes expose us to more.

Inemi

llo,

to be

of Im

yourl

whof

Slave

y Mi

led w ld.

in, fo

er exc

fion

that h

avedo

ledge

condi

Injun

with ollies

n othe

ofeyo

d fol

nich y

not first

becat

Ian fi

If you have at any time a purpose to take Renge, fall upon your greatest Enemy first, and gid with your extravagant Rage and Fury.

If an Injury be done me, I am never troubled it, for he that doth me an Injury doth it either his Pleasure or Prosit; and why should I be pleased if he loves himself better than me? If y doth me an Injury out of ill nature, it's but to the Brief and Thorn, which do prick and atch because they can do no otherwise.

EveryDay I meet with Bravoes, false and perious Persons, but they can do me no harm, beuse 'tis not in their Power to disquiet me, or make me act any thing dishonourable: Neither a langry or ill affected toward them, because ey are by Nature near unto me; for they are my Kinsmen by Participation of the same Rean and Divine Particle: If at any time I have Injury done me by them, I convert it to my on Advantage, I know how to avoid them; d they discover to me my own weakness, where may be assaulted, therefore I study to fortify at place: And if an Ass doth kick me (as matimes he doth) I never trouble my self to bring Action against him for't.

For all Injuries and Designs against me, I am more concerned, than Alexander was, who ceived in one Hand the Drink which his Physian Philip brought him, and with the other ewed him the Letter by which he was adversed that Darius had promised him great Reards to Poyson him. Injuries are never candled with new Favours, especially when the we Favours are less in value than the wrongs done: Favours are written in Glass, but in ries are ingraven in Marble.

D 4 done:

Study the Buckler as well as the Sword, you will be as good at Suffering as at Acting.

I speak this to you, not that I would have without sense; for Chi la sa Pecora, il Lumangia: He who maketh himself a Sheep, i Wolf will devour him.

It was a Maxim worthy of Cafar's Gallant

Nec inferre, nec perpeti.

Gulfardo made hot Love to Ambrofia, Gaspa volo Sagestraccio, a Rich Merchant's Wife, a after several Dodges and put offs he came to peremptory Point with her at last, Whether wou'd Touch or not; she consented in the Con clusion, that upon Condition he should swe Secrecy, and make her a prefent of Two Hu dred Crowns, which she had great Occasion in Gulfardo came to her Terms, and fent to kno when he might come and bring the Money w him; Her Answer was this, That her Husba was fuddenly to take a Long Journey, and should hear from her, so soon as he was gon and then let him come and welcome, and bin the Crowns along with him. Galfardo's Lo for the Woman did not hinder him from about nating fo mercenary a Proffitute; fo that as resolv'd on the one Hand to make the best of Mercat, he fet his Wits to work on the other how to be even with her.

A Day or Two before the Husband left the Town, Gulfardo went and borrow'd Two Hundred Crowns of him; and the Husband had a fooner turn'd his back upon his Wife, but Gulfardo had presently notice of it, with an Intimation that all things were now ready for him, but still minding him not to forget the Money. Gulfardo upon this Hint, makes Ambrosia a Visit, with a part partine for am, ared Chad why for hall greath and lair The wo L vere t Husbar Som thile i bgethe gain. luting WOF ut of on fo ered t eman em. ue, a as qu arvolo, eady at One ian of bi When ood to will ad M.

ith th

ame v

our to but in vord, Cting. nave w Labo

eep, allantr

Gaspa ife, an e to ether I he Co d fwe

o Hu son fo kne ey wi Tusbar and s gon d brin s Lo abom at as t of h e oth eft th Hun

had A

it Gu ntim m, ba , Wil a par particular Friend in his Company; fo foon as he formality of the first Greeting was over, Maam, fays Gulfardo, I have brought Two Hunred Crowns here for your Husband, and I think had e'en as good leave them in your Hands; thy fo you may, fays Ambrofia, and my Husband hall give you a Receit, for them, but let me be are they be right first, so she counted them over nd laid them by.

The Friend's part being now over, he was too nuch a Gentleman not to withdraw, and leave the wo Lovers to themselves. The Story says they vere very kind, and this Game lasted till the Justand came back again.

Some two or three Days after his Return, hile he and his Wife were standing at the Door gether, Gulfardo paffing by with the same Friend gain, as by Chance, took the Opportunity of luting Gasparvolo, and thanking him for the wo Hundred Crowns he lent him before he went ut of Town. But as it fell out I had no occaon for them, and in three or four Days I delitred them back to your Lady for you; this Geneman was there, Madam, when I delivered em. Oh Lord! Husband, says she, 'tis very ue, and if there be any Faith in a Woman, it as quite out of my Head; Well Sir, says Gaswoolo, I will give you a Discharge, and shall be ady at any time to serve you in a greater Matter.

One Ricciardo Minutolo had an excellent Woan of his own, and yet fell desperately in Love ith the Wife of Philipello Fighinolfia; whose ame was Catulla, a Person tender of her Hoour to the uttermost Scruple; but at the same me jealous to the Degree almost of Idle-headed. Then Ricciardo found her impregnable, and no ood to be done upon her by the common Arts nd Methods of Courtship and Address, he bethought himself of changing his Battery, and fall ling to work upon her Jealoufy, and the Course he took was this.

He gave it out that betwixt Necessity and Phil losophy he was now become Master of himself besides that he had a fresh Woman in H Eye, where his Love wou'd probably turn to better Account; but he carry'd it fair all this while to Catulla, as in Discretion and good Manners he was bound to do, Playing his Game h artificially, that every thing he faid or did, passed for Earnest.

It was now the chearful Time of the Year when the Sparks and the Ladies went common a Merry-making to the Sea fide. Ricciardo hear ing that Catulla was to be of the Party, refolved make one himself too; the whole Company bid ding him welcome, and Catulla amongst the ref He carry'd so much Haste and Business in his Face that the Ladies cou'd hardly get him to flay among them, especially falling upon the Subject of new Mistress he had got, which put every bod to the guess, who and who it might be: He took up fuch a form of Gravity upon this Discourse, if he had not known which way to look: A the Company were walking and talking promite ctiously one with another, it fell to Ricciards and Catulla's Lott to be together, and in that in terim Ricciardo's bolting out an unlucky Words an Amour of Philipello's, put Catulla to such's thand as if the had been Planet-Aruck; and after hort Pause, she brake out into this Exclamation, Ah! Ricciardo, says she, for the sake of the We man thou lovest best in this World, expound the Riddle to me.

Madam, fays he, I can refuse nothing to the Power of that Adjuration; but you must give me your Oath then, neither directly nor indirectly to discov ell y Truth s faci

W makes bi the Reaso witho Word or an t this her to Meeti d for was v disple out th his is ure in artly. mile h he Ba ll this only t hink . housa nemb he, in

The Bawd. hat fl he Be ng to wards

will, I

he far

Word

discover the whole or any part of what I shall tell you, to your Husband, till I shall make the Truth of it appear to your own Eyes: By all that

s facred, Ricciardo, says she, I swear it.

Why then, Madam, fays he, your Husband makes Love to my Wife, whether in Revenge of the Passion I had for his, or for what other Reason I know not; but there passes not a day without a Letter or a Message to her, and the Words I put in her Mouth she sends him back or an Answer; she has held him so long in hand t this rate, that he had the Face yesterday to press er to a final Resolution, and proposed a secret Meeting with her at a Bagnio that he had providd for that Purpose. Madam, says he, the time was when I wou'd not have run the Risque of lispleasing you to have gain'd the whole World, out these foolish Tendernesses are now over, and his is not an Intrigue for me to take much Pleaure in, so that partly to be even with him, and artly to do you Service, I made my Wife pronise him a Meeting betwixt Twelve and One at he Bagnio as he directed. You cannot imagine Il this while that I'll proflitute my Wife, but I paly tell you this to the end, that if you shall hink fit to supply her Place it may prevent a housand Inconveniencies; but by the way, renember your Oath. Well, well, Ricciardo, (fays he, in a transport of Jealousy) come of it what will, I'll take your Wife's part upon me, and by he same Oath over again, I will be as good as my Word.

The Mistress of the Bagnio was no better than a Bawd, and so much a Consident of Ricciardo's, hat she took his Instructions about the Room, he Bed, the Bath, and every thing else according to his Appointment: Catulla went home towards the Evening in a most Insociable Humour,

D 6

and

Courfe id Phinimfelf

nd fal-

in Haurn to this Man-

me lo passed

Year mould be heard to he reft s Face aimong Si of a y bod e took nrse,a c: As romil iardo's hat in fuch a aftern ration, e Wo

nd this to the ve me

dil.

and found her Husband (as the fancy'd at least) in his A in a worse. The Thought of the next day's Ad what menture kept her waking all that Night, and in order a the Morning up she gets betimes, and about Noot e laid away the goes, with her Maid-fervant to waitup on her to the Bathing-House. Pray, Mistres, fan Catulla to the Women of the House, is Philipell here? Madam, fays the, if you are the Womanh looks for, you will find him in that Chamber there pray go in; fo on the went into a Chamber as darke Pitch, and there was Ricciardo ready to receive he

They had no fooner interchanged the Paffin Tords nate Raptures of the first Greeting, but Catalinat the rung him such a Peal upon the Miseries of inno cent Women, and the falleness and ingratitud of Men, that his very Ears were dinn'd at the the V Noise of it; No no, says she. Thou Months y hon of a Man, this is Catulla, and not the Wife of Rad falling ciardo, that you expected here, and by all that sho ly, I'll make thy Infamy as publick as the Sun, Ricciardo did all that was possible by fair Words such and Caresses to lay the Storm, but to no purpose ounce at all: No no, says she, thou perjur'd Wretch, lainder am not fo to be coaks'd and wheedled out of m Senses. Tell me, thou abandon'd Sot, is there not as much Youth and Beauty, as agreeables Conversation, and as good Blood in the Veins of thy Catulla as in that Blowze thy Mistress Ricciardo wou'd have been torn to Fieces beforehe wou'd have us'd me thus; but I'll do your Er rand to him upon my Faith, and give you up to hall co the Revenge of the whole Family.

This outragious Fury went so far, that Ricin ardo had no way left him to prevent a work werere Mischief but to discover himself. Upon the site blush Word toward it, for she knew his Voice, he less, a gave such a leap from him, and with such an Out ch Vice cry, that if he had not immediately secur'd her a Con e Ca te R ood; ne ca ace (usband Stake ld to 1 nvicti died ciardo.

ent Pr neque

s in th

leaft) 's Ad and in

Noon

ait up.

s, fam

rlipell

nanh

there.

larka

ve her inno

titude

at the onfler

of Ria

t's ho

Wistor Vord

rpole etch,

of m there able Veins tres!

orehe r Er up to

Riccia

worfe

e firt e. the

Our

d her 10

his Arms and stopt her Mouth, no body knows that might have come on it; but having her now nder a kind of Force to give him the Hearing, e laid before her the whole State and Reason of e Case. Madam, says he, I am the unfortute Ricciardo, you are dearer to me than my ood; and confider, I befeech you, that what is me cannot be undone, your own Honour and ace (nay and perhaps the very Life of your asband, for it will come to a Quarrel) are all Stake, this Advice was accompanied with Paffin Tords and Actions so moving and generous, ld to the Reason of the Discourse; though that inviction was not sufficient to support her unthe Weight of that Calamity, for the went her y home without speaking one Word more; falling soon after into a mortal Melancholy, died of it. Upon the tidings of her Death. ciardo, being at that time a Widower, fell insuch a Horror for what he had done, that he ounced the World upon't, and spent the short nainder of his days among the Woods and Des in the Solitude of an Hermite.

SECT. XII. Of Virtue.

hall commend unto your Practice that excelent Precept of Pythagoras, Nil turpe commitneque coram aliis, neque tecum; maxime omniverere teipsum: And believe it, a good Man blush as much to commit a Sin in the Wiles, as upon a Theatre. Those Defeats ch Vice give me, they are rather a Surprize a Conquest, they overcome me not, but rather by my own inadvertency of them, I over come my felf; the less the occasion of Sin, a greater is the nature of it; and to justify a Fau is a greater Sin than to fall into it: And let a tell you, Sin is Masculine, and begets the like others; and many times like Venom, it insees the Blood, when the Viper is dead which gathe Wound.

It's the triumph of a brave Soul, to have S in Power, and Virtue in Will; Virtue is the S of the Microcosm, and a good Conscience is Hemisphere: There is nothing which setteth a Throne or Chair of State in the Soul of M.

but Virtue.

Virtue stands in need of nothing but it self, renders Man Illustrious in this Life, and Glos ous after Death; 'tis not Gray-hairs that begarespect, but a Life virtuously passed confers Glay. It's a strange Fatuity in Man, that he need takes thought how to live virtuously, but is we careful how to live long; when it lies in the power of Man to live well, but it's out of his power to live long. It's the bounty of Nature that live, but of Virtue that we live well; which is greater Felicity than Life it self.

An honest virtuous Man lives not to the World, but to his own Conscience; he, ast Planets above, steers a Course contrary to that the World.

It's no small Pleasure for a Virtuous Person fay to himself, Could a Man enter and seein my Heart, yet should he not find me guilty ther of the Assistance or Ruin of any body, a culpable of Envy or Revenge, nor tainted with Innovation, Sedition or Schism, nor spotted with the falsisying my Word; I have always lived to my own, all my Desires have been terminal within my self, Non te quasiveris extra, hath be my Rule.

There tues 1 n mov You n that t is th in, for m him e can God w ns, bec the Er y were Alexan ering ti Fair . but the other, nquero A Virt orld we he never others: He is leth throng: Rod for (

orld as iness a govern

fue, ye He stand himself an were observe

Crimes, are; no led from led from

.

OVE

in, th

let m

Like

infe

h ga ave S

the St

ce is tethi

f M felf,

Glor

: bege

rs G

e new is ve

ne por

POW hat I

ich i

to t

251 that rion

ee in ilty

y , 1

d W

ed wi ved v ninst

th be

Ther

Therefore take care that the bright lustre of your tues may enlighten the whole Sphere wherein move.

You may receive Honours from your Prince, that is to be gallant in Livery; it's Virtue t is the only Nobility. I love Virtue in any an, for it will fecure me against any wrong m him, and will assure me of his good Wishes, it cannot lend me his Assistance.

God would not bestow Heaven upon the Rous, because they were Pagans; but be bestowthe Empire of the World upon them, because ywere Virtuous.

Alexander was not so truly Glorious for Conring the Indians, as for refusing to force Dari-Fair Daughters; for in the one, he Conquerbut those who were less than himself; but in other, he conquered himself, who was their inqueror.

A Virtuous Person looks upon the whole orld as his Countrey, and upon God to be as these and Judge of his Words and Deeds; he governs his Life and Thoughts, as if the whole orld were to see the one and to read the other. He never opens the Door to the least Evil, for tothers which lie in Ambush should come after the is much of the Nature of the Sun, which seth thro' many Pollutions, yet remains pure as ore: Rather than do an unjust Act, he will be odfor Cannon: Let Vice be robed in Cloth of sue, yet he discovers it.

He stands not more in awe of other Men than himself, nor commits more Offences tho' no m were to know them, than if all Men were observe them.

Crimes, tho' they may be fecret, can never be are; nor doth it avail an Offender to be conled from others while he can never be conled from himself. World know it; but if otherwise, what doth fignify to have no body know it, so long as know it my self? Sin is its own Torment, the fear of Vengeance pursues those that escape stroke of it: Nature hath set up Racks and sets in the Consciences of vicious Persons.

He that is guilty of any enormous Sin, lives perpetual Terror, and whilst he expects to punished, he punishes himself; and whosoevers terves it, expects it; what if he be not detecte he is still in apprehension that he may be so.

The Wages of Sin is Death; it's poor Wathat will not make a Man live; as Virtue is own Reward, so Sin is its own Executioner.

The Soul of a wicked Man, is like Paper for led all over with the Characters of Vice; Soul refembles the City Poneropolis, so called King Philip after he had People it with a Country of Rogues and Vagabonds; He that looks dilige ly into the State of a vicious Man, will see Canker at his Heart through all the false and ling Splendor of Greatness and Fortune: At tuous Man can never be Miserable, or a wick Man Happy.

Men love the evil in themselves, yet no M loves it in another; and tho' a Man may be a Frie to Sin, yet no body loves the Sinner.

Mankind is entred into a fort of Confedera against Virtue; it's dangerous to be Honest, a only profitable to be Vicious.

We live in the rust of the Iron Age; Piety self is in Exile, Integrity gone, and the Brand of the most flourishing Virtues are all lopped; as rare in this Age to meet with a Virtuous Ma as it was formerly to meet with a Poet in Pato's Common-wealth.

It's Virtue that makes the Mind invincible, a nt of t at all id he. fopher ve Fo hic his If I v me M onquei ongli I or the c a Grot in a (Felicit e dig here w Mind Socrate ng of is furn ppines es of Virtue f in al he be i tile the aces u ith Just Good my incess on services thackr

No Ca Virtue A Virt tunes,

plac

all

doth

ng a

ent,

capet

nd G

lives

ts to ever

etede

fo.

Wa

ue is

ner.

er fc

ce;

alled

a Cr

dilige

fee i

andd

: Av

wick

10 M

a Frie

edera

eft, a

Piety

rand ped;

is Ma

in P

ble, a

plac

S.

aces us out of the reach of Fortune, though not at of the Malice of it: When Zeno was told at all his Goods were drowned: Why then, id he, Fortune hath a Mind to make me a Phisopher: Nothing can be above him that is anye Fortune; no Infelicity can make a wife Man his Ground:

If I were led in Triumph, I could bear the me Mind, and be as Virtuous and Great as the onqueror; place me amongst Emperors, or a-ongst Beggars, the one shall not make me proud, or the other ashamed; I can take as found a Sleep a Grot as in a Palace, and think my felf as hap-in a Galley, as in the Elysian Field.

Felicity is not in the Veins of the Earth where e dig for Gold, nor in the bottom of the Sea here we fish for Pearl, but in a pure and virtus Mind.

Socrates being asked if he accounted not the greating of Persia Happy? I know not, saith he, how is furnished with Virtue: Conceive that true uppiness consists in Virtue, not in the frail Donates of Fortune.

Virtue hath an illustrious Theatre to shew it f in all Fortunes; a Man that is condemned, he be innocent and doth not vex, he doth excise the Virtue of Patience; if he be guilty and thacknowledge himself so, he doth co-operate ith Justice.

Good and virtuous Men in this World suffer my inconveniences; but Virtue, like the Sun, es on still with her Work, let the Air be net so cloudy.

No Cloud whats'ever can obscure her light; Virtue's a Glow-worm, and will shine by Night.

A Virtuous Person in the thickest of his Mistunes, is like a Quick-set-hedge, the more he is cut and male-hack'd, the better he thrives a

A wicked Man is afraid of his own Memorand in the review of himself, he finds only a petite, Avarice or Ambition.

Vice hath its certain Period, after which ith comes desperate and incurable and a of emon

All the Virtuous Actions which I can here ter do, will no more expiate my former Trangressions, than the not contracting new Descan be accounted Payment of the old.

Though Virtue gives a ragged Livery, yet!

gives a Golden Cognizance. Se anily move

Those that least practise Virtue in outward a pearance, cunningly make it the mark where all their Actions level; there must be the Sign ture of Virtue on the worst of Actions, one wise they would not be passant, and received tertainment.

Virtuous Persons are by all good Men one ly reverenced, and even silently by bad; so my do the Beams of Virtue dazle even unwill Eyes.

The Heart of a Virtuous Person is a Paradisesto which the Serpent never enters, but received fudden repulse.

In Navigation we ought to be guided by the lot, in the course of Life by the virtuous.

Obstrue quinque Fenestras, ut luceat domus; si the Arabian Proverb, A Wise and Virtuous M souts his Windows that he may see the better.

The smallest Desect or Fault in an accomplished Person, obscures the whole Orb of Virtues.

He cannot transgress, but like the Eclipse the Sun, every one takes notice of him

A Virtuous Man is Bonorum maximus, Magnorum optimus.

fit; if at whee, it?

You

e, bu

come

Quid ju Si fi

If you in I do go efeat on; him, at is i ould en ma nce ye Every firmit I fin

y felf
I shal
r his ught u
I can

ithout ty to V ery. Aristi ere ab

ere ne

eson of

Memor Only A

ich ith

r Tran w Deb

yet for ard A where

e Sign , other eive E

ope fo mu nwilli

dife, i

y thel . us; la

r. accord

liple

ery.

us, a

You must labour and climb the Hill, if you ill arrive at Virtue, whose seat is upon the top it; it's a great encouragement to Well-doing, at when you are once in the Possession of Vire, it's your own for ever.

Its easy to continue Good and Virtuous, but to come so is hard; Nature doth not give Vire, but it must be acquired, and it's a kind of it to become good.

luid juvat innumeros scire atque evolvere casus; Si fugienda facis, & facienda fugis?

If your Mind at any time seems to stagger, and in suspence what to do, fix on some grave id good Man, and suppose him always to be esent with you, and do all things as if he lookton; then because of the Reverence you bear him, you will fear to offend or act any thing at is ill, for fear he would find fault with it. If Scipio or Lalius were but in your Eye, you ould not dare to transgress; why do you not en make your self such a Person in whose Pre-nce you dare not offend?

Every Night I call my self to an account, What firmity have I mastered to day? By this ScrutiI find my Vices abate of themselves, and I y self become better and more Virtuous.
I shall ever reverence the Memory of Chilo, r his Nequid nimis, who in two Words hath ught us the Summa totalis of all Virtue. I can be honest in the Dark, and Virtuous ithout a Witness; I have such an inbred Loyty to Virtue, that I can serve her without a Li-Aristippus being asked wherein Philosophers exlled other Men, answered, Though all Laws ere abolished, we should be just and lead the same ives: And if Men would be Virtuous and Just, ere need no Laws. VirVirtue will make you Noble, without the he of Heraldry, and will get you Veneration will out an Apotheosis; it will gain you Esteem; a Esteem to Virtue, is like a fine Air to Plan and Flowers, which makes them blow and proper.

Let Integrity be the Ballast of your Soul, a Virtue the Lading; you may be deprived of h nours and Riches against your Will, but not your Virtues except you consent.

Demetrius Phalareus, had 360 Statues erected the Athenians, for his Governing their Commo wealth ten Years with great Virtue and Prudem But when he saw those Statues which were rail by Gratitude, soon after destroy'd by Envy, said, They may pull down my Statues, but they not overthrow my Virtues for which they were rected.

Change not Virtue's immortal Crown, for whole Mine of Gold.

Gold is uncertain; but what you possess. Is still your own, and never can be less.

Boccalini fancies a great Prince that had the Fotune to meet Philosophy naked, and wou'd new out of pure Modesty and Compassion, throw Royal Mantle over her: But that illustrious dy begg'd his Majesty's Pardon with all due Respect, giving him to understand that she had shame to hide, nor any Deformity to cover.

SECT. XIII.

Of Friends and Friendship.

ONE Friend alone makes not a Parad therefore I desire few but Virtuous Friend dout But let ar Fri lor; for ager w

Out o

Quod.

ne So

Never first A that es into y, and s too ot up se require it be as i Friendutthi Do not whice whice one, of mathrigh nmy

be don the othing adship.

, 'tis

Virtu long the he Out of your Acquaintance chuse Familiars, n with dout of those pick Friends.

m; a But let me advise you, never make a Coward Plan or Friend, or a Drunkard your Privy-Counndpo or; for the one upon the approach of the least ger will desert you, and the other will discoall your Secrets; both are dangerous to Hune Society.

of H

oul, a t not

d-iit

0 .05 WIF I

ver.

Paradi Frien Quod in Corde sobrii, id in Lingua ebrii.

ected Never make a Friend on the sudden; for the? first Affection makes the deepest Impression, that Love is held most Permanent which es into the Soul by soft degrees of mutual Sowere so too soon contracted, like Plants which were pt up too fast, are not of that continuance as for the requires time to consider of a Friendship beeit be contracted; but that Resolution once en, entitles him to my very Heart; I look n my Thoughts to be as fafe in my Friend's the for Friend is your very felf, and so treat him: do not make your felf over to too many; Marious to which is the strictest of Friendships admits one, and indeed inferior Friendship admits of many more: The Tide of love cannot bear high when divided amongst several Chan-, 'tis great odds but that amongst many we be deceived in some; then we must be put n the inconvenience of Repentance, which othing is so uncomely and inconvenient as in ndship.

e that you mark out for your Friend, let him Virtuous Person; for an ill Man can neilong love, nor be long beloved, and the

Friendships of wicked Men are rather to be cal led Conspiracies than Friendships.

Every Man is capable of being an Enemy, in not a Friend; few are in a condition of doing Good, but all almost can do Mischief.

Friendship is a sacred Thing, and deserves or tenderest acknowledgments.

The World is united in Love, and Men Friendship; without which the Universe won be the most uncomfortable Desart in Natur nor is there any Content upon Earth comparab to the Union of Minds and Interests.

Harmony of Temper, begets and present Friendship; but difagreeing Inclinations are improper Notes in Musick, that serve only spoil the Consort, and offend the Ear. A.M.

Where there is a Difference in Religion, the is rarely an Agreement in Affection; but if Ime with an Honest Just Man, let his Persuasion as Religion be what it will, I can put him in my B form, without thinking of the Snake in the Fable

A Friend is a great Comfort in Solitude excellent Affistant in Business, and the best Pr tection against Injuries: He is a Counsellor Difficulties, a Confessor in Scruples, and a Sa ctuary in Distress.

Amongst all Humane Injoyments, nothing

Amongst all Humane Injoyments, nothing rvants rare, so valuable, and so necessary as a true Frien that his The Roman Losses by Water or Fire, August meth, could quickly supply and repair, but for the Lagon all of his two Friends he lamented them his who I am not be the could provide the second supply and repair. Life after.

All things in the World are but Bawbles, cept Old Friends to converse with, and Old Boo to read. agning b

A true and faithful Friend is a living Treate inestimable while we have him, and never enou to be lamented when he is gone; there is nothing ore dif anted re: 7 th of a th of t ore or at hat h Tho en his

He ha

In the lversiti vn, an any g afe in My Fr Dum

Ni i llove nks I c Theref t Philo Frien When at he ir rvants lav, and termina os me o d bring ong us.

Whatfo ind; th

mo

ny, bu f doin

res on

Vature

are li only

n, the fime

on as my B Table ude.

est Pr ellor a Sa

hing Frien August he Lo s who les, d Boo reafor

enou

mo

be call ore ordinary than to talk of a Friend, nothing ore difficult than to find one; and no where more anted than where there feems to be the greatest re: The greater a Man is, the more need he th of a Friend, and the more difficulty there is th of finding and knowing him. a malbase

He hath made his first approach to Comfort, Men b at hath gain'd an Opportunity of communicating would Thoughts; but he that wanteth a Friend to en his Grief unto, eats his own Heart.

paral In the kindness of my Friend, I sweeten the eversities of my.Life; by his Cares, I lessen my reference, and repose under his Friendship; when I any good befal him, I rejoyce, and thereby inalemy own Happiness.

My Friend is a Counterpart of my felf.

Dum similis simili sociatur pax fit utrisq; Ni mibi sis ut Ego, non eris alter Ego.

llove my Friend before my felf, and yet menks I do not love him enough.

Therefore I cannot but hug the Resolution of t Philosopher, who when he was dying, ordered Friend to be inventoried amongst his Goods. When one came to Alexander and desir'd him the might see his Treasure, he bid one of his rvants take him, and shew him not actueis ráhis Money, but rds piass his Friends; it meth, he put a greater value upon them, than on all the Wealth which he had.

I am much pleased with Pythagoras's xolva ra and many times wish that Property were terminated out of the Family of Love; for it me of the happy injoyment of my Friend, d brings nothing but Trouble and Dissention aong us. and the se

Whatfoever I posses, my Friends may comnothing and; there is no relish methinks in the possesfing

fing of any thing without a Partner; if the Tree fury of the Samnites, or the Territories of the Universe were offered me, only to keep them my self, I would resuse them.

A Dish of Coleworts or Lupines with m Friend, is a Feast to me; when I eat alone, m Table, methinks, is a Manger, and my self in Desart.

I have great Satisfaction in me to fee my Fried pleas'd, but its much more to make him fo.

When I consult the Comfort and Happine of my Friend, I provide for my own: In Friends are the whole World to one anothe and he that is a Friend to himself, is also a Friend to Mankind.

A Friend, like a Glass, will best discover you your own Defects.

Phocion told Antipater, You are deceived, Sir, you would have me your Friend, and expect I show play the Flatterer.

If my Friend falls into any notorious Vice, I have a regard for him; for though the Friend gone, yet still the Man remains; and though hath forfeited my Friendship, yet still I owe him.

Charity.

I carry my felf with a great Decorum, and a gular regard to my Friend; but if I fee him a out into Vanity, I apply reprehensions to him, pungent and acute Medicines, with no other into than the Recovery of the Patient.

It's no more honourable to do a Friendakin ness, than it's unworthy to omit a good Off when he stands in need of it.

True Friendship is made up of Virrue as athle lovely; of familiar Conversation, as pleasand Advantage as necessary.

Do good to thy Friend that he may be more! Friend, and unto thy Enemy, that he may become thy Friend.

Vext r nIfiri 's be mies certa nies a you hes or er lea ny: T dinal g adv g a C g Pope ation. you (

My Ca

to fe

fufficion To fon, e built lever in Feast.

here a

he For

er that is of and if to flow to the

Fis Co to A Scales

r's fin metick

ing ea

ly Care is to speak well of my Enemies, but to secure my Friend.

lext my Friend, I love my Enemies, for from nlfirst hear of my Faults.

's better to decide a Difference betwixt out mies than our Friends; for one of the Friends certainly become an Enemy, one of the Enies a Friend.

Tres

Of th

hemi ith m ne, n elf in

Frie

fo. .

appine

: Tn

nothe

Frien

over

, Sir,

I from rice,

riend

ough

himn

and A

him l

him, er inte

dakin

d Off

sath

leafan

noret becon

f you have a good Friend, never wish him hes or Honour; for if he hath them, he will er leave your Friendship or become your Ey: This made the Emperor say, who had a dinal of the Court of Rome his great Friend, gadvanced to be Pope, That of a trusty Friend g a Cardinal, he would become a deadly Enemy Pope; and it fell out according to his Exation.

fyou cannot make a great Man your Friend, sufficient to keep him from being your Ene-To fix your felf in the Favour of a great on, except he be Virtuous, is like the Moufe built her Nest in the Cat's Ear.

lever feek for a Friend in a Palace, or try him

Feast.

here are few Friends of the Person, but many he Fortune: A Friendship of Interest lasts no er than the Interest continues; whereas true e is of the Nature of the Diamond, it's lastand is hard to break.

oflowly to the Feafts of Friends; but make to them in their Misfortunes.

is Commerce not Friendship, that hath reto Advantages: Friends should not be like Scales of a Balance, the one rising upon the r's finking; but rather like Numbers in Ametick, the leffer and greater helping and iming each other.

E

Never purchase Friends by Gifts; for is leave to Give, they will leave to Love.

Love is built upon the Union of Minds, the Bribery of Gifts; and the more you the fewer Friends you will have.

But I can admit the retribution of good to not so much for the Benefit, as that my Fi may have the Pleasure of doing a good Office

An Enemy is better recovered by Kinds than a Friend assured.

Have a care in making any Man your Fritwice, except the Rupture was by your of Mistake, and you have done Penance for it

If the League of Friendship be once brothen is the Cabinet of Secrets unlocked, and fly about like Birds let loose from a Cage: upon every Rupture between Friends, secret nemies that lie upon the watch, blow the and when the War is once declared, old Findbecome the worst of Enemies.

When you have made choice of your Filexpress all Civilities to him; yet in Pruder would advise you to look upon your profession, as in Possibility, to be your future!

my.

Aristotle's of pixos & pixos, Amicinon amici, me think, that he is a happy Man, that he Friend at his need; but he is more happy, hath no need of a Friend.

He is none of thy Friend that draws thee any thing which may be prejudicial to thy or Estate; neither art thou thy own Frienthou dost hazard either of them for another's cern.

Be flow to chuse a Friend, and slow change him; courteous to all, intimate with scorn no Man for his Meanness, nor humou for their Wealth. Proff y Ba Theren C e, al hant wer, wer,

Vi

w you
for

Countrie mov

n ou conf

riend There le he

h him imm ing t

ncher ixisti i Me fi

never a first f true L any tin ect of

do pro have ind, th

ion for her, as

Vulgus amicitias utilitate probat.

rosperity is no just Scale, Adversity is the y Balance to weigh Friends.

for if you g ood tu

my Fri

Office

Kinda

ur Fri

your o

for it.

ce brok

d, and

Cage: 1

1ecret the H

1d Frie

our Fri

Pruden

ur pre

uture

nici, m

that h appy,

s thee

thy C

Frien

ther's

"flow

with umou

e. linds,

Therefore I pay much Honour to Plato, that en Chabrias his Friend being impeached for his e, all deferted him but Plato: Crobulus the Syhant met him accompanying Chabrias to the wer, said unto him, Do you come to help others, w you not that the Poyson of Socrates is reserfor you? Plato answered, When I fought for Countrey, I hazarded my Life, and I will now as much in duty to my Friend

In Friends are like Spirits and Sinews, the moves with the other; and the Love between mought to resemble Templum fidei, which constantly clear, nothing seigned, and withany Coverture.

riendship multiplies Joys and divides Griefs.

There are Persons, like Crotto's Mouse, which le he was in Prosperity, it sed continually hhim; but his House being set on Fire, it immediately from him; whereupon he obing the ungratefulness and incertainty of encher Amity, framed this Distick.

ixisti mecum, fortuna Matre, Noverca Me fugis: At poteras æqua & iniqua pati.

never have for saken my Friend, but when he first for saken himself and Virtue (which was true Lovers Knot that first united us;) and if any time I renounced his Familiarity, yet in ect of my former intimacy, I retained an afion for him, and wish'd him well.

do profess my self a Citizen of the World, have such an aversion to any thing that is ind, that I look upon an Injury done to aner, as done to my self.

her, as done to my felf. E 2

And

And many times when I have heard that Friend was Dead, how have I drown'd my E in Tears! And I could as passionately have we over his Urn, as the Grecian Matron did for the of her Mother; but then I considered, it was many Kindness in me than Prudence; for I might as fonably have wept that my Friend was born sooner, as that he should live no longer.

All that we know of what is done above By blessed Souls, is that they fing and love.

There was a couple of young Sparks, for A Birth and Breeding much alike, and their Na Spinelloccio Tavena, and Zeppa di Mino: The Blades living within a door one of another, walmost perpetually together, and a Brace of whandsome young Women they had to their Wi The Freedom of this Conversation was made of for the countenancing of an Intrigue between Spinelloccio and the Wife of Zeppa; which a unluckily to be discover'd by a Mistake as followed.

Spinelloccio comes to the House of Zeppa, pretence of a neighbourly Visit, and asks the if her Husband was at home, she tells him, taking for granted that he was gone out: So the Coast being clear (at least as they imagi away went they together and lock'd themsel up in a private Chamber. After some short there, Spinelloccio goes his way. Now as the vil wou'd have it, Zeppa was all this while Closet in that very Room; and within dilla of feeing and hearing whatever pass'd bet them. Spinelloccio was no sooner out of the Ho but Zeppa bolts into the Chamber where held his Wife setting her Head to rights again. what's here to do, Sweetheart? fays he, tis even as you fee, says the Woman. Yes Gossip, says the Husband again, I do see, and

at h
lt, b pl=H pa, c ed ov prder be we n I a ich ff
up in 'd her
pinello g after crept

e pe

re of

case

the Vide of or e's Spirit the Vide of or e's Spirit the for a omes

Com

he go pa tak upon in the the I mber,
ch put
! The

riend () Patiend d that my E lave w or the wasm ght asi s born r.

2 love.

, for A eir Nar 0: 1 her, w ce of v eir Wi made ie betv s follo bpa, v s the V him, t: So hich a

imagil hemfel : fhort as the while n diff d bety

e perhaps to my own Sorrow than you are re of. They fell to Words: But to be short, case was so clear, that the Woman threw her at her Husband's Feet, and confess'd her lt, begg'd Pardon, and withal told him the History of the Amour Well! Wife, fays pa, do but as I direct you, and all shall be ed over yet:

order the matter so, says he, that Spinelloccio be with you about nine to morrow Morning n I am abroad, and upon my coming home ich shall be soon after) contrive the locking up in that Chest there, till I go out again. She 'd her Promise, and was as good as her Word. pinelloccio came at his Hour, and Zeppa not after him: The hint being taken, the Gal crept into the Chest, the Wife locks it, and omes the Husband and fets himfelf down upon Come, Wife, says he so loud that Spinelloccio ht over-hear him, how long to Dinner? O, the Wife, 'tis not I hope that time a Day yet, we'll hasten it all we can. Ay, but what shall to for fome good Body to bear us Company; e's Spinelloccio dines abroad, he tells me; but I think on't, prithee get his Lady to make

he good Woman comes at the first Call, and pa taking her by the Hand, and placing her by upon the Chest, bids her heartily Welcome, in the mean time gives his Wife a Wink to e he formber, but Zeppa bolts the Door after her, in. When the Woman into a frightful Ehe, V !! The Lord blets me, on, rays me, yes lintend to do? Is this your way of expressing riendship to my Husband? Have but a lit-Patience, Madam, says Zeppa, and upon my for a Man and his Wife alone makes no Mu-

Honour you shall have no cause to comple Your Husband dealt but yesterday with Wife, as I intend this Morning to deal with and with these Eyes of mine, I saw the wh Scene, fo that the same Liberty betwixt you me upon this Occasion is but Justice in us both on him, for abusing, as well your Bed as mi The Woman had nothing to oppose to the Equ of the Thing, only she would make this in Bargain, that the Croffness of this Advent should cause no Rupture betwixt the two Fa Zeppa fign'd and fealed to this Condition and promised her a rich Jewel over and abo What pass'd afterwards Spinelloccio, who was in Chest, best knows. When they came now the performance of Covenants, Zeppa opens Box and makes a Present of Sp. nelloccio to hiso Look you Madam, fays, he, this is Jewel I promis'd you. It's not my Business Tis sto tell how Spinelloccio and his Wife stood staring at another upon this Surprize. Let it suffice , and the Friendship was not only pieced up again, fo improv'd, that they were four Couples in out of two; for two Men had each of themt Wives, and the other two Women had each them two Husbands.

SECT. XIV. Of Frugality and Expences.

STudy not only to preserve your Estate, justly to encrease it: Money is the Hei Fortune, and the Lord paramount of the Wo Riches are the Keys to Greatness, and n the Access to Honour more easy and open Man without Money, is like a Wall withou s be 1 you une.

a hom

fs. f

Navig ence. igft th agree feriou don, b

El seni ws, Ti all one

Highne to fe ir is t do my do to I tian th im; at

Addre

wisest: to be know when I most e a Ship into (ney go your

Vind;

compla With withh the wh kt you s both as mi he Equ his in

Advent wo Fa was in opens o hiso this is

tate, e Hei e Wo ind m

open withou Cr

s, for every Man to draw upon: let your she never so great, without a Golden Tincyou will be no more regarded than a Cuckow une.

ahominum Pelagus, Regina Pecunia nauta est, Nevigat infælix qui caret bujus ope.

ence it was, that there being a Contest aight the most Eminent Poets for the Laurel; agreeing, it was referred to Apollo, who upserious Advice gave it to an Alderman of ondition don, because to have most Wealth was a sign nd about the Wit.

e now Elsenner dinero par un gran Cavallero.

ws, Turks and Christians several Tenets hold; all one God acknowledge, that is, Gold.

usiness Tis storied, that a Noble Man of Venice made taring Address to Gosma de Medicis, Duke of Flouffice e, and fignified to him, that he understood ligain, lighness had the Philosopher's Stone, and deples m to see it. 'Tis true, saith the Duke, but my themt it is this, never to do that by another, which I d each do my felf; not to do that to Morrow, which I. do to Day; not to neglect the least things. The tian thanked his Highness, and took his leave im; and by the Observation hereof, became wisest and richest Man in Venice. If you purto be rich and wife, take this Elixir.

know a generous Man least regards Money, when he hath it not, he wanteh it most; and most excellent Person without an Estate, is. a Ship well rigg'd, but cannot fail for want Vind; if your Estate be but small, come selinto Company; but when you do, let your ney go freely.

your Means fuit not with your Ends, pur-E 4 fue those Ends which fuit with your Men Have a care you do not imitate his Forth who labouring to buoy up a sunk Ship of anothe bulged his own Vessel.

Make other Mens Shipwrack, Sea-marks your felf.

Belisario became blind, that others might ceive fight; and the Moon of De Luna. fell into an Eclipse, that it might

Those Men which have wasted their of Estates, will help you to consume yours: The like the Fox in the Fable, who having lost Tail, persuaded others to cut off theirs as to blesome.

It was a smart Reprimand of Queen Elizabe who being invited by a Noble Man (that spent great part of his Estate) to his House, who was very magnificent, and over the Portal of Door was written in Capital. Letters, On Vanitas: the Queen coming into the Courty and near entring the House, asked the Nobleh what that was which was written above; her ther; the Queen asked him what was the reathat he made his Omnia so short, and his Van so long?

I have read there was a Goddess fastned to Oak in a Grove, who for a long time had m Worshippers; but when the Tree was read fall, none would come within the shadow of Statue.

Love and Respect are rarely found in loss tunes, and Adversity seldom meets with the turns of Friendship.

That which we call Kindness or Affection Interest; and we love one another only for own Ends.

Charity, though a Saint, is yet without em, but ormy And les to ltar i

len,

y hav Neve ain:

oods, t fear i Mone m in eceffit

Amass bonne

A seaso ke a go The U urch t

Quant Tant u

Balanc

r ow:
's spen
t's go Stone Stone
rodiga

h: Fri ortun ertain their F

out th

A

ar Mea Fortu anothe

-marks

might n of & might

heir o s: Th

Elizab (that use, wh

rtal of s, On ourt-w oble

; het he rea is Van

ow of

toff

th the ection

y for A ltar in the World; you will meet with many en, which have much of the Heliotrope in em, which opens in the Sun-shine of Prosperi-, but towards the Night of Adversity, or in ormy Seasons, shuts and contracts its self.

And believe me, none will be so severe Enees to you in Adversity, as those that in Prospeyhave been your Friends.
Never spend presently, in hopes of suture in: Merchants, during the Adventure of their ods, do not increase in Domestick Expences, fearing the worst, affure what is in hand. ng lost Money in your Purse will credit you, Wiss as to min your Head adorn you; but both in your eceffity will serve you.

> Amasser en Saison, despenser per Raison, font la bonne Maison.

I seasonable Gathering, and a reasonable Spending, ke a good House-keeping.

The Venetians make an Arch of Saint Mark's urch their Treasury, and their reason is,

Quantum quisque sua Nummorum servat in Arca Tantum habet & Fidei--- ned to Balance your Expences by the just weight of had me rown Estate, and not by the poise of anoread 's spending.

t's good Advice of the Philosopher, Measure Stone by your Rule; and not your Rule by Stone.

rodigality is of the nature of the Viper, and out the Bowels of that Wealth which gave it h: Frugality and Industry are the two Hands ortune.

ertain young Men being reproved by Zeno thou heir Prodigality, excused themselves saying, Er

They had Plenty enough out of which they did the Will you excuse a Cook, saith he, that should oversall your Meat, because he hath store of Salt?

Prodigals may be compared to Fig-trees growing upon a Precipice, whose Fruit Men taste not but Crows and Vultures devour.

Prodigality is ever attended by Injustice an Folly.

Keep a Mean, and a Mean while keep you; you go beyond that which is necessary, you must have first a Shoe buckled with Gold, then a Vervet Shoe, then an Embroidered one, for the thin that once exceeds the Mean, runs eternally with out Limitation.

A good Layer-up makes a good Layer-out, as a good Sparer makes a good Spender. No A chimy to faving.

Diogenes asked a Thrifty Man but a Half-pe ny, of a Prodigal a Pound; The former, he sai might give him often, but the latter would short have nothing to give.

Getting is a Chance, but keeping a Virtue.

He that is sparing in every thing is a Niggard; that spares in nothing, is Profuse: I love to spain things least necessary, that I may be the most Generous and Liberal in what is most required my Station.

He that is profuse in some kind of Expend must be saving again in some other; for he to is savish to all Purposes, will with much difficul be preserved from Decay. Get a habit of Frug lity, for that will gain as well upon your Mind upon your Estate.

A Man ought warily to begin Charges, who once begun will continue; but in Matters to return not, he may be more magnificent.

By Four things is an Estate kept; First, by derstanding it: Secondly, by not squandring ga of If of erfort e Int way eck'r

At tow Samuel

ho h f an l ld hi

Plat

Your rear the Wa Mak

ou fin I wo re the ut to the lates

ine in That oftry b ay be a gerti The value

y: It's orhis H Nail d

Your.

did it s grow Me not ice an

you; iou mul ou mul on a Vel ohe thin ly with out, an No Al

lalf-per he fait ld short

ue. gard;l

he mo quired Expend

he the difficulation of Fruga Mind s, whi ters th

t, byu ndring aw way before it comes in; Thirdly, by frequent eck'ning with ones Servants; Fourthly by keepga quarterly Audit.

If out of Kindness you have lent Money to any for let him not continue it over-long for

If out of Kindnels you have lent Money to any erson, let him not continue it over-long, for e Interest of an old Debt is usually paid in ill Anguage.

At the first Entrance into your Estate keep a w Sail; you may rise with Honour, but you muot decline without Shame.

Plato seeing a young Man of a good Family, ho had spent all his Estate, sitting at the Door san Inn, feeding upon Bread and Water, he ld him, If you had dined temperately, you need wer to have supped so.

Young Gentlemen think it good Policy to ear their Lands upon their Backs, to see that Waste be done by their Tenants.

Make not the Sail too big for the Vessel, lest ou fink it.

I would advise those who have the World bebrethem to be good Husbands betimes; for it's to late to spare at the bottom, when all is drawn at to the Lees.

I have seen some Persons who have had great states left them, to break their Fast in Plenty, line in Poverty, and Sup in Infamy.

That which by sparing is saved, may with Inastry be improved; and what is so improved, ay be again spared; Frugality alone is but simegerting, but joined with Industry is double.

rhis Horse, who sold him but for a Half-penny Nail doubled.

Add many lesser Numbers in Account, Your Total will to a great Sum amount.

E 6

A little

A little Estate is a great while in getting? In a great one is soon gotten; for when a Manhat raised his Fortune to a considerable Pitch, grows rich apace.

SECT. XV. Of Riches.

Was never born to be rich; and it is no gra matter; for the more a Man hath, the mor

Riches were defirable above all things, if the brought Content, as well as Content brings them after of if we covet them for necessary Uses, he that need tate, b the fewest things is the richest Man, and come t rich nearest to the Fulness of God himself, who want at you nothing.

The common Gifts of Fortune are the la many times of the unworthiest of Men; but Man's own folid worth is that which begets his Glory: Nobility and Riches are reputed to make Men happy; yet deserve not much to be com mended, being derived from others: Virtue an Integrity, as of themselves they are lovely; so they also give a fingular Lustre to the most of cellent Person.

Crassus accounted him a rich Man, who had Estate to maintain an Army; but he that hatha Estate to maintain an Army, had need of an A my to maintain that Estate.

Get the Possession of the whole Earth, and (as Archidamus told Philip of Macedon) if yo measure your own Shadow, you shall not find one jot longer than it was before.

When the Prophet Zachary, chap. 6. faw th Vision of the Four Empires, he asked of the And, all vi m, Ist Vinds: the V Christ em W das th Provi r Adv r, Na rth, a rice an To be te that he th little, ttle fee little. The br le; bu r Men f you n you be fo

1, Qu

n, but ft tell eafurer. Confide the t

s Thor Riches dhow

nd and of, Qui funt isti? What are these? Who told m, Isti sunt quatuor venti; These are the four linds: To shew, that all the Riches and Glory the World, are but a Blast.

Christ himself gave us to understand what Etem we ought to have of Riches, when he gave das the Bag.

is pa

an had ch, h

O gre

mon

if the need

come

Want

ie Lo

but ts his mak

COM

fod

oft en

had a ath a

an At nd y

f yo find

w th

e An

Providence hath placed all things that are for ar Advantage near at hand; but Gold and Siler, Nature hath hidden in the Bowels of the arth, and they were mingled with Dirt till A-rice and Ambition parted them.

To be content is to be rich; and this is an Ete that any Man that will may make himself after of. To be rich, is not to increase your tate, but to retrench your Desires. You are t rich or poor by what you posses, but by at you desire; for he is not rich that hath much, the that hath enough; nor he poor that hath thitle, but he that wants more. He to whom ttle seemeth not enough, a great deal will seem thitle.

The bravest Minds might be content with a le; but they stand upon their Honour, and o-

Men make them pay for it.

f you have more than you use, you have more in you need, and only a Burthen to you: If it be sollicitous to increase your Wealth, you is the true use of it; there is nothing your in, but what your self makes use of: And I stell you, a Rich Fool is but a Wise Man's rasurer.

Consider the Life of Man, how full of vexais Thoughts it is; with thinking first, how to Riches, and then how to keep them; afteradhow to encrease them, and then how to and and preserve them; add yet in the concluand, all vanishes and falls to pieces.

A 18 18 18 18

The Rich Man, betwixt the Desire of Getting and Fear of Losing, lies exposed to all the Alfaults of Fortune: The Poor Man is Rich even in his Poverty, his Desires are squared to his Ne cessities, he fears nothing, because he hath nothing to lose that he cares for.

The Fear of losing our Riches, is a great trough ruse ble, the Loss of them a greater; and it's yet made to for greater by Opinion. Nay, in the case of no discessary rect Loss at all, the covetous Man loses whath iches of doth not get.

It was Avarice that made Theft fo Capital Crime; it having with us a greater Punishmental lotted to it than Adultery: Why Adultery should not be punished with Death, as well as Thest, know no reason but only this; whereas Ma accounts of his Wife, but only Flesh of his Flesh and Bone of his Bone; he values his Coin as the Soul of his Soul.

Virtue, which is the universal Medicine again all the Distempers of the Mind, contributes a more to the cure of this Phrensie of Covetou ness, than St. Bellen's Key did to the cure of ma Dogs, when the Priests burnt them on the Ford head with it.

In the whole Pharmacopæa there is no Recen against this Disease.

The New World hath in a manner outdoor the Old; for it hath fown Covetousness in a Minds, and hath quite extinguished Love as Kindness amongst Men; for all are wretched in love with Gold.

A Covetous Man seems to be profuse by who he possesses, when he is the most fordid Wrett if you consider what he uses and enjoys.

Riches well gotten are not altogether to contemned; but he that grows rich at the confine of his Honour, loses more than he imagines.

eat Fo he me To d ches; ants n eir use t fo n iches o A littl d less, It's be e that at he h bugh, i Alexar at he v ing mo at which ot suffic Cleobu be pre ch Min You r es: I a y felf. Ivalue do Alex What. al Fuci en or it ma nd not

Natur

Natur

A Ric

Man, bu

istred 1

Neighbo

the Al

ch eve

his No

nothin

at trou t mad no di v hat h pital

shoul heft,

s Ma Fleh

as th

again

tes n retoul of ma

Fore

ecei

tdon

e an

hed wh

to b e co

atur

Setting Nature hath not confined our Happiness to eat Fortunes alone; I can laugh and spend my ne merrily, and yet am no Duke or Peer.

To defire little makes Poverty equal with ches; he who wants, is not rich; nor he who ants not, poor; Riches are to be measured by eir use: I cannot call large Possessions Riches, t so much as is necessary; and that which is ceffary every Man may have, which is the ches of Nature.

A little Wealth, will suffice us to live well, d less, to dye happily.

lt's better to have enough, than to have much: e that hath much, defires more; which shews at he hath not yet enough; but he that hath ebugh, is at rest.

Alexander after all his Conquests complained at he wanted more Worlds; he defired someing more, even when he had gotten all; And at which was sufficient for humane Nature was ot sufficient for one Man.

Cleobulus's Métogy aessor, a Mean is best, is be prefer'd before an Imperial Crown, or the ch Mines of the Indies.

You may come to be rich by being poor in Dees: I account no Man richer or greater than y felf, except he be more Virtuous.

I value Apuleius's Ass no more for his Gold, than n ou do Alexander's Great Horse for his Trappings.

What are Riches and Honour, but a superfial Fucus, or Varnish, to dazle the Eyes of Chilten or Fools? I defire to live in this World, so s it may hang about me like a light Garment, retd nd not be tied too close to it.

A Rich Man is no way happier than another Man, but that he hath more Opportunities milistred unto him of doing more good than his Neighbour.

Riches

Riches and Greatness add nothing to me, h to illustrate my Humility.

Should a Courser that is adorned with Impings of Gold and Purple, and carries a General in Triumph to the Capitol, take a Pride in the Arches, the Shouts and Acclamations of the Paple? Or rather complain of his Accourrement which are a Burthen rather than an Ornament him; Gold as it's glorious, so it's ponderous to Alas, there are few that talk with you, but will your Fortune only; sew that make Obeysancer you, but to the Dignity you bear; therefore a share remains to you, no more than to the Stea but the Pains and Burthen.

Riches were invented for the Ease and Commodity of Life; but as Man hath made then they serve for the greatest Trouble and Vexation he that hath them in the greatest abundance, hat the greatest Cares, and ever the greatest Losses.

Nothing is richer than a poor Man; this I fa in my self, who have not much; but while la joy a quiet and serene state of Mind, I posse the Treasures of the Universe.

All Men are Idolaters, some of Honour, other of Riches; I bless my Stars, I never bowed m

Knee to any of those Idols.

Money is useless to me, any farther than to supply my Wants: It was made to serve me, there fore I never act so below my self, as to subject my self to my Servant.

My Soul is too noble an Apartment to be filled with Trash; 'Hs a Monstrosity in Nature, to be in love with Drofs.

Themistocles finding himself tempted to look upon great Treasure, blushed at his Error; and turning to his Servant, said, Take thou that Money, for thou art not Themistocles.

Bias made himself rich, by abandoning his Goods;

oods;
ifed his ofterity nortality reatest
of lesse is King mph, is an Gen
aving of It wa

Eneas.

Aude bo Finge L The r s Rich atiently Meth fhis H ny Diff e Stone at we What me, i am a] y Clo nd Col spect r chave : reafur picius:

,) wi

ould i

Iam

r with

oods; and his Omnia mea mecum porto, hath ised him a glorious Pyramid of Honour to all offerity, and fet him under a Canopy of Imhortality.

Tacitus observes that Vespasian had equalled the reatest of the Roman Heroes, if his Avarice had ot lessened his other Virtues.

Perseus out of love to his Treasures lost both s Kingdom and those too; being led in Trimph, in the Company of his Coffers, by a Roan General, who gloried, and is yet famous for aving died almost a Beggar.

It was a brave Speech that Evander used to Eneas.

ne, b

Tra

Gener

in t he Pe ment

nenti

us to

at wi ance

ore n

Stee

Con

then

ation , hat

ffes.

Ifo

e I en

oossel

other

ed m o sup

there

abjed

filla

to b

100

and

Mo

his

ods;

Aude hospes, contemnere opes, & te quoque dignum. Finge Deo-

The rich Man lives happily, so long as he useth s Riches temperately; and the poor Man, who atiently endureth his Wants, is rich enough.

Methinks, when I fee a poor Man drink out this Hand, I could with Diogenes, throw away by Dish; and many times wish with Crates, That e Stones were Bread, as well as the Water Drink, at we might have a certain Provision by Nature.

What is beyond that which is purely necessary me, is useless; if I have a Groat in my Purse, am a Debtor to Providence for its Kindness: If y Cloaths be sufficient to defend me from Heat nd Cold, or my House from Wind and Rain, I tpect no more; if I find any thing beyond, I can chave my self with Indifferency; I value not the reasure of the Samnites, or the Delicacies of picius; neither would I, (if it were in my pow-,) with Dionysius the Sicilian, reward those who ould invent any new pleafure.

I am not ambitious with Scipio, to be Magnus; with Fabius to be Maximus; nor do I affect great

great Riches or Honours, but look upon the as pretty little Toys and Nuts, which Fortun throws out to Men; just as we do to little Children, pleasing my self with tasting now and the one, which some Accident hath slung even to me, whilst that others are struggling and controls; whilst that others are struggling and controls.

tending who shall get the most.

Abundance is a Trouble, Want a Misery, Honour a Burthen, Advancement dangerous, but Competency a Happiness: I have as much as desire, if I have as much as I want; and I have as much as the most, if I have as much as I desire; yet many times I admire my self at a greater rate than I deserve; not thereby to detrait from my Neighbour, but to heighten my Debtu my Maker.

He lives well, that lives in Peace; and he fafely great that is great in his own Virtues. I do not admire Estates or Territories; for seeing Man is born Lord of all the World, I will not retrench my own right, by glorying in so little a part of it, as that which will happen to my share.

I am not much delighted with the Regalios of Gaity of the World; I can do by them, as Princes do by great Banquets, look on them, and touch them, and so away: There was no Magick in that beautiful Face of Darius's Lady, which could have inchanted me; neither could the Eyes of Cleopatra have triumphed over the Powers of my Soul, as they did over Cafar and Anthony; for this I am beholden to my Stars; Saturn was Ascendant in my Nativity; I am but slow and dull, yet I can say at any time with good Heart, that Verse which Cleanthes hath made samous.

"Αγεδέ με ζεῦ κὸ σο πεπρωμένη.

Quoc Tuqi

For a and of ge ever inblies equent! When where I cause staining lusick a Contentilosoph incrure e Disease mper.

Of all ho hav ean La they a Howe
our Est ou shal ave, w

And voncerne an you orn; the ving.

What nd stary lnemy? ou leav

Who

Ouocunque voles, Jupiter, me ducito, Tuque necessitas.

For a Wilderness to me is as pleasant as the and of Promise; my Mind can find an Hermige every where, and in the most numerous Asinblies of Men, in the greatest Cities, I very equently find my felf in a Defart.

When I hear the Nightingale fing in a Wood where I often retire) I do envy her Happiness, cause she is perched on the Pinnacle of her high-Felicity; free from Care and Toil, and entaining her felf in her Solitudes with her own lusick and warbling Notes.

Content is the Elixir of my Life; the true hilosopher's Stone, which infuses a Golden incture into all inferior Metals; and cures all e Diseases of my Soul, by reducing it to a right mper.

n the

ortun

le Chil

nd the

to m

d coa

, Ho

s, be

h as

I have

Ide

grea

etrad ebt to hei

S. eeing

1 no

little

m

)S 00

rin-

and

Ma-

ady.

uld

the

and

ITS;

but ha

de

Of all Persons, I look upon them to be happy, ho have their Estates in their own Hands, (I ean Labourers) for as they never gain much, they are fure never to want but little. However, let me advise you to make use of our Estate while you live; for when you dye bu shall leave it to the greatest Enemies you ave, who wished your Death when you were ving.

And when you are dead, you are no more oncerned in that you shall leave behind you, an you were in that which was before you was orn; therefore get well to live, and study to live rell.

What madness is it to enrich a Man's Heir nd starve himself, and to turn a Friend into an nemy? for his Joy will be proportioned to what ou leave him.

Who shall receive the Interest of your Money? Those 108 Humane Prudence.

Those that laugh at you for keeping your Co for others to enjoy it.

Many times, with Chancer,

I scratch my Head where it doth not itch, To see Men live poor to die rich.

I have often observed some Men to enjoy ke of all kind in their Riches, than others do i their Poverty.

Ambitiosus honos, & opes, & sæda voluptas, Hæc tria, pro Trino numine, mundus habet.

I am of Thales's Opinion, that a Philosophe may be rich if he will; but a Man must not lear Philosophy to be rich, but must get Riches a learn Philosophy; for to the Poor, the Cabineto Nature is never opened, yet he that hath it is the Child of Providence.

Honour and Riches are the two Wheels up which the whole World is moved; these are the two Springs of our Discontent.

I defire not great Riches, but fuch as I mayge Justly, use Soberly, distribute Chearfully, as leave Contentedly.

SECT. XVI. Of Ambition and Great Places.

A Mbition is never so high but it still thinks to mount, and that Station which lately seemed the top, is but a Step to her now; and what be fore was great in desiring, seems little being one in Power.

He that is a Tribune would be a Prætor, the Prator a Conful, never reflecting upon what he was but only looking forward what he would be.

Ambi

Ambition of, and hrough forld colors and H

Hac C Ad sua The w

ugh for Ambiti it is am y Man it is not Some l fulius

th Q. C fuaded ight he a be banis
I do no onour,

obe of other]
He wh ion will An annual when

orfe, o Ambiti ve a ca God g oy her

And rife hig tle con e Solsti Ambition explains Ixion's Wheel, Phaeton's Chaot, and Icarus's Wings feigned by the Poets: brough Ambition only, the three Parts of the Yorld could not fill the three Corners of Cays and Pompey's Hearts.

Hac Crassos, hac Pompeios evertit, & illum, Ad sua qui domitos deduxit flagra Quirites.

The whole World was not Elbow-room e-ugh for the Ambition of Alexander.

Ambition puffs up with Vanity and Wind: He t is ambitious will be tormented with Envy at y Man that gets before him; for in that case he t is not first, is last.

Some Men are so ambitious of Honour, that y had rather not be Good, than not Great Julius Casar when he stood in Competition th Q. Catulus for the Pontificate, his Mother suaded him from it; He told her; That e'er ght he would be either the greatest Man in Rome, he had a set of it.

be banished out of it.

oy le

as,

bet.

Sophe

l lear

nes t ineto

is th upo

are th

nayge

7 20

nkst

eeme

nat be g one

e Pra

e was

e. Ambi I do not defire to advance to the Meridian of onour, that's but to undertake a Voyage to the obe of the Moon, from whence I can expect other Benefit than the danger of its Influences. He who flies too near the Sun of Honour, Amion will melt his Wings.

An ambitious Man will do any thing to rise; d when he is up, must do all things that are orse, or else I know his Fate.

Ambition rides without Reins; wherefore, we a care lest you catch a Fall.

God gives Wings to the Ant, that she may de-oy her self the fooner.

And many Men, like sealed Doves, study rise higher and higher, they know not whither; the considering, that when they are mounted to e Solstice of their Greatness, every step they set

is

is paved with Fate; and their Fall, how gent foever, will never fuffer them to rife again.

Let it be your Ambition to be Wise, and you Wisdom to be Good: Reject Faction and Sedion, and you are like a Ship in the Harbour, is

A wise Man, like Empedocles's Sphere, is roun and all like it felf.

What is Honour, which the ambitious Mafeeks after? It's but a short-liv'd Ephemera; it like a Rose which in the Evening makes its Tom of the Scarlet, of which in the Morning it maits Cradle: And where is that Dignity which the next Moment may not be laid in the Dust?

The Fortune of the greatest Men run not won the Helix that still enlargeth, but on a Circle when arriving to their Meridian, they decline Obscurity, and fall under the Horizon again.

The World is a Comedy, the best Actors a those that represent their Parts most naturally but the Wisest do not always act Kings and gre Lords, and are seldom the Heroes in the Play.

Advancements and Honours are not given a cording to Merit, but Pleasure, and fortuited ly: Philip Comines tells us, that at the Battel Mont'hery, fought between Lewis the XI. France, and Charles Duke of Burgundy, some their Offices for flying, which were bestowed up on others that fled ten Leagues beyond the Luynes from a Gentleman in Decimo Sexto, we made a Duke, a Peer, and High Constable of France.

Euripides, when his Father told him he we Knighted, made his Reply, Good Father, you hat that which every Man may have for his Money.

How many Players have I feen upon a Staffit to be Noblemen, and how many Nobleme fit only to represent them? Why, this can for tune do, she makes some Companions of he Chariot, who for desert should be Lackies to Ladyship.

The wour them urs of onative rts of Many ravia a le high eir Na Stam ve their ble.

He wayernet avour eed Inthers, the le lifery a Confidered Page ing .Pt Iacedon aptain ays of y, the l erfons for at had to be Worl

Tantor, Sunt sa

And no But las den in

The wisest Heads are not always the greatest vourites of Fortune; it's Satisfaction enough them to deferve, though not to enjoy the Faurs of Fortune, and being enriched with higher onatives, cast a more careless Eye on the vulgar rts of Felicity.

gent

in.

nd you

Sedin

ar, faf

roun

is Ma

ra; it

Ton

it mad

nich th

4.

not u

Circl

cline

gain.

ors a urally

nd gre

Play.

ven a uitou

attel

XI.

melo ved u

then

0, W

Frand

he W ou ha

a Stag bleme

n Fo

of h stoh

T

Many times it's in States at in the Balance. avia descendant, Levia ascendant; but like Apes. e higher they mount, the more they discover eir Nakedness; and at best they are but the Roy-Stamp set upon base Metal; the King may ve them Honour, but not make them Honouble.

He who groweth great on a fudden, feldom verneth himself in the change: Extraordinary wour to Men of weak or bad Deferts, doth eed Insolency in them, and Discontentment in hers, two dangerous Humours in a State.

When you are mounted to the Zenith of Glo-, the least wrong step Casts you to the Nadir of lifery and Infelicity.

Confider in what great Honour and Reputation ved Parmenio with Alexander, Eusenides with ing Ptolomy, Aratus Signonius with Philip of lacedon? What an illustrious and renowned aptain was Aetius in Grace and Authority in the ays of the Emperor Valentinian? Confider, I y, the Requital and Infelicities of these gallant ersons for their noble Actions and Services; Men at had seen the Scenes of the greatest Actions in eWorld, yet every one of them might have faid,

Tantorum mihi præmium laborum Sunt sapere & pænitere.

And now for all my Labour what's the Prize, But late Repentance and to grow Wife?

len in great Places must meet with some itrokes strokes of Missortune, from the ruder Agestalive in; as the highest Mountains are most subject to the Storms of Thunder, and the Battery Hail; so those that are placed on High, are set as Buts for Envy and Malice to shoot their rows at.

Those who are culminant, and in the On Glory, must consider that Princes Favours perillous, and that it's a difficult thing to stands firm on the Ice; and if his Feet begin to sip, own weight will down with him; and when is fallen, a whole Volley of Accusations are charged upon him, and every Action of his mined and urged according to the Passion of Complainants, and must be sure to hear of manualts than his own.

Demosthenes, after a long Government in Commonwealth, is reported to confess to Friends who came to visit him, that if, a beginning, two ways had been proposed be him, the one leading to the Tribunal of Aurity, the other to his Grave; if he could be foreknown the Evils, the Terrors, the Camnies, the Envies, the Contentions, the Dang that Men in such Places must customarily newith, he would much rather with Alacrity posted on to his Sepulchre than to his Graness.

Plenitudo potestatis est plentitudo tempestatis.

A Man in great Place had need of a gent Patience to bear the Calumnies and Malice others: It will be Prudence in him to have for ambitious Person about him which may served Skreen to keep off the Indignities and Assorbich may be offered.

He that is advanced to Grandeur, must need farily contract Envy (which is the Canket of B gesthe Lubje ttery refet neir

Orb Ours and lo flip,

when are his e n of of m

nt in Is to f, at d bear

f Autold he Calu Dan

rily in crity in is Gr

estatis. gener

Malic ave for ferve Affor ust ned er of h for Advancement is like the growth of Trees, (which casting a great Shadow, hine young Plants from increasing) it makes in the Grandees, and despair among Equals. nour being desired of many, upon Necessity at aspireth to it, must for his Advancement vied by many, and for his Authority hated; llthings be well managed, yet they persuademselves that they might be better acted, and g they might be worse, conspire the ruin of hat doth enjoy it.

e greatest in Trust of Publick Affairs, are shot at by the aspiring of those who deem selves less in Imployment than in Merit. ones may secure themselves from Guilt, ot from Envy.

e Malicious are never without some secret is and Mines to turn Envy and Hatred upe Ascendent and Man of Honour.

that is in great Place, had need have as mayes as Argus to watch, as many Hands as sus to dispose and order Things, and as many as Briareus to defend himself against Calumd Malice.

eatness stands upon a Precipice, and if Proscarries a Man never so little beyond his, it over-bears him, and dashes him to much safer and quieter living upon the l, than by laborious climbing up the craggy s of Ambition, to aspire to Sovereignty. e rising to Honour and great Place, is many by winding Stairs, and it's rarely but there nixture of Good and Evil Arts: If you be a your Place, you displease the People; if t, God; and more Men are undone for their les, than for their Vices.

How

How desperate is our Fate, What hazard do we run? We must be Wicked to be Great, And to be Just, Undone.

Those that are carried away with the Whi wind of Ambition, when they are raised to get Place, their Motto is Sursum, and the first they practise, besides their Pride, is to forget their Friends; this made an Italian Gentlem to write to a great Friend of his upon his A vancement to be Cardinal; That he was very so of his Advancement for the Cardinal's own sake, he was serry that he had lost so good a Friend.

The ambitious Man to mount to Honou cringes to all People, but so soon as he is mouted, it's usual with him to take his Revenge huffing every Body; his Employment requires the should be free to all Men, but his Pride and Humour make him acceptable to no Man.

Ambitious Men are of all Men most miseral for they are wholly taken up with expectation suture Things; and they being uncertain, are petually afflicted with anguish of Mind and Fear and at last perceiving they are fallen from the Expectation, which their Hopes held out to the they become most grievously perplexed.

Cares and Infelicities are Attendants in ordin ry to Greatness; high Regions are never with Storms: Honours, like great Ships, are ever den with Troubles and Cares.

If those that are mad after Honour and go Place, could but look into the Hearts of the that now enjoy them, how would it startleth to see those hideous Cares and Crimes that we upon ambitious Greatness?

It's true, they have now and then their lights, but not without heavy and and ughts are fu need o very l ly pr had unha he me it's in iety a onou e that ant; Woma thy P en in while i me to rtuná. Life v nd M. The E pry, but at enters out ein the

Though

he Fro

ty, or r over is later Pain hat is (look us fet it their nany (Pale a

ughts, even in their Enjoyments; their Feliciare full of Disquiet, and not Sincere; and they need of one Pleasure to support another.

very Misfortune of Men in great Place, comly procures them as much Dishonour as if had been Perfidious in their Practice, and unhappiness is deemed for Crimes.

he most Illustrious State, how Glorious soeit's in Shew, hath at the bottom of it only iety and Care: Princes, Palaces, and Temples onour, are but empty Names.

ethat is in publick Place is by Duty a publick ant; otherwise it may be said to him what the Woman said to Adrian the Emperor; Renounce thy Place, as thou dost thy Duty.

en in great Place are Strangers to themselves, while they are in the puzzle of Business, have me to tend their own Welfare: for In magrtuna, est minima Libertas.

Life without Rest is painful, like along way einthere is no Inn:

Whi

to gre

rst thi

orget ntlem his A

perygl

ake, h

Ionou

s mou

enge

airesth

e andi

tation

arep

d Fean

om the

to the ordin

Witho

ever

nd gr

of the

tleth

hat W

heir D

anxio hough

n. iferabl

> he Front of the Palace of Honour is Splennd Magnificent, but the back Parts are not he Entry into Dignities is crowned like a bry, but the Exit many times Tragical; and at enters by the Gate of Favour, commonly s out by the Door of Difgrace.

strange for Men to seek Power and lose ty, or feek Power over others, and to lose r over a Man's felf; the rifing into a high is laborious, and by Pains they come to er Pains, and by Indignities to Dignities.

nat is Grandeur but Speciosa Molestia? They look upon a Diadem, and the Lustre of the s set in it, may apprehend somewhat to t their Eyes; but could they understand nany Cares are lodged and concentred with-Pale and Circle of the Crown, I may fay, in the Words of a great King, They would for take it up for the wearing, though it lay intheir

F 2

the

It was no doubt a fad Experience which we those Words from Cafar's Mouth, When would express a Mass of Cares and Crosses, Ca Cæfarem, think upon Cæfar. W add savo ban

· And tho' you fee them fend out great Na command Legions, and compassed with Fait Guards, yet you must not think they all lived or do partake of real Pleasure, for all these but ridiculous Pageantry and real Dreams: I and Cares are not Things that are afraid of Noise of Arms, nor stand in awe of the bin ness of Gold, or splendor of Purple, buth intrude themselves into the Hearts of Prince Potentates; and like the Vulture which the? talk of, gnaw and prey upon their Hearts.

What are all Titles of Honour? They are thing but a more glorious Sound: Equipage Honour, though they may feem Splendid an lustrious, yet our Understanding tells us the only out-side.

When we shall put off this Robe of Morn and walk among the Stars, and shall from Theatre of Heaven look down upon Earth shall we be surprised to behold the Palace Princes, the Pageantry of the Court, the me sho mires of Ambition, and the Fantasticos of

I am a Man of no Title, yet I am Great make a good Figure in my own Microcolin

I am Master of my self.

It's Wisdom in him that hath been exalted Sphere of Honour, and hath acted Thing Grandeur, to secure the Glory of them to here draw in time; a continued Prosperity is alwis bod ar be suspected. be fuspected.

It's the Policy of a cunning Gamester, to envenie whi ning i 's bet I the barles by a e, by fortur aref e form much b faid, red th e defi defire ald de ow, t te me am n en I at Urn viden ne to taph, igh, if

ove F

; Hu

When

rinces the P

S. M

ey are nipage lid and as the

Morte from

Earth Palace the s of reat

cofm

altedi

Thing n to salwa talls f

while he wins; when Prosperity is a Game when hing is so certain as ill Luck.
Ich will be better to sit down with Honour, than to at-the Changes of an unconstant Fortune.

s, Co harles the Fifth, that eldest Son of Glory, triharles the Fifth, that eldelt son of Glory, triphed over the World by his Fortune, and at by a glorious Retreat, triumphed over Forth Fait e, by moderating his Ambition.

Tortune's like Pyrates that wait for Vessels till their pare full Fraught, the Counter-plot must be to e some Port betimes.

The big of faid, he had obtained all Dignities before he and had left them all before they but he red them, and had left them all before they e desired of others.

desire no Honour nor Preserment, for that ald declare that I prefer more what others can ow, than what I possess my felf; nothing can te me greater, being Virtuous: I am high e-gh, if I stand upright; I am not born under Sol ove Honour, but under Jupiter to love Busis; Humility shuns Honour, and is the way am not ambitious to have a rich Mausoleum en I am dead, a stately Sepulchre, or a beauti-Urn for the Repose of my Body, or that my me should be engraven in Brass or Marble; if ovidence shall bless me that I may have a little one to cover me, I desire this Word for my taph, may be engraven upon it, EVASI.

I have escaped all Honours.

There was a delicate smooth Brook betwixt a ood and a Meadow, that serv'd both Birds and alts for a common Rendezvous, as well for nveniency as for Pleasure. Among other Conversations versations there was a mighty kindness struck betwixt an Ermin and a Hern, and in great miration they were at the Plumes of the one, the Furr of the other. As they were one discoursing upon this Subject, there happen's pass by them a Cavalier, bravely mounted accoutred in a Velvet Cap, set up with a T of Hern Tops, and a Coat of the same Stuff ed with Ermin. Pray will you mind that Bla fays the Hern, how he vapours in our Live Ay, ay, fays the Ermin, that Coat of his has our Family dear; so it has, says the other, ic makes my very Heart ake to think how many o ir Peoples Lives have been facrificed to Wretch's Vanity and Pride; but they thath no Friends at Court, either with the Eagle or Lion, must fit down with the Loss, and have remedy but Patience. But keep up a goodh however, for all this, fays t'other; for the one that is more above them than they are a us, and one that will avenge our Caufe, w we least think on't.

S E C T. XVII. Of the Art to be Happy.

T O be happy is a bleffed State; and thater Man may have if he pleases.

If you will be happy, correct your Imaging to Nature.

Tranquillity of Mind, and indolency of Bo are the compleat Felicities of Life.

Happiness consists not in Sovereignty, or Port or in great Riches; but in a right composure of Affections, and in directing all your Actions cording to right Reason.

Ther fire a inst L ports alts it It's R ice of rately ews u anqu So o esires, ries o e fo fe Fort t Thi en tho ough ient f Happ It's th eatest e of th the ti adv. l alw il nimi What fire no

When

pect I

To be

Prud

em pr

I am

Joyce He is

e Rich

ftruck great e one, e one ppen'd unted th a T Stuff. nat Bla er Live is has o ther, oodH

r then are ab fe, w

thaten

Imagi e acco

of Bo

or Pow reofy Rions Th

There are two principal Diseases of the Mind, fire and Fear: Temperance is my Buckler anst Desire; Fortitude against Fear: The one ports the Mind, when it defires; the other alts it, when it fears.

It's Reason which rescues us from the Vioce of Desires and Fears, and teacheth us temrately to sustain the Injuries of Fortune, and ews us all the ways which lead to Quiet and anquillity.

So order your felf, that you cut off all vain esires, and contract your self within the Bounw many ries of Nature, which are Necessaries; they ed to be so few and small, as hardly any unkindness that be fortune can rob you of them; they that cogle of things useless and superfluous, enjoy not adhave en those that are necessary; every place yields ough for Necessaries, and no Kingdom is suf-ient for Superfluities; it's the Mind that makes Happy in a Defart.

> It's the Infelicity of many Men to covet the eatest Things, but not to enjoy the least; dee of that we neither have or need, takes from the true use and fruition of that we have al> lalways fet before me that Delphick Oracle il nimium cupito.

> Whatfoever I defire, I always have; because I fire nothing but what I can have.

> Where our Desires are unreasonable, we must pect Disappointments.

> To be moderate in your Desires, is an instance Prudence; and not like Sanmo in the Comedy, em pretio emere.

> I am never troubled for what I have not, but joyce for what I have.

> He is richest who is contented, for Content is e Riches of Nature.

I can

I can be as content, and think my felf as han in a Galley, as in Paradife, nothing is forpled to me, as a serene and secure State of Mind, distracted with any Passions. To Bolle Care

A contended Mind is more worth than all Spice and Treasure of both the Indies: and that is Master of himself in an Innocentia Homely Retreat, enjoys all the Wealth and id my riofities of the Universe. The world is a serve ment I can

An inward Peace of Mind does more than tone for the want of outward Felicity. W

I envy the Happiness of none, because la contented with my own. de Gour. I covet nothing; I had rather beg of my he A Found to defire any Thing, than of Fortune to ate, a flow it: If I might have the whole World he I feel asking, I would not defire it. wells wels

What are Riches? Riches are but Cyphers, it the Mind that makes the Sum: What am He the better for a great Estate, if I am not conteme Min better for a great Estate, if I am not could need with it? The desires of having, will quickly need to Sich ta away all the Delights and Comforts in post fing; Alexander upon his Imperial Throne, with of Sa Restless and an Ambitions Mind, is in a word elewoon a Restless and an Ambitions Mind, is in a wor Condition than Diogenes in his Tub.

ondition than Diogenes in his Tub.

He that doth not think his own Estate, he little and small soever, to be sufficiently ampl though he should become Lord of the who World, will ever be miserable; for Miseryist Companion of Want; and the same vain Opini which first persuaded him, that his own Estatem not sufficient, will continue to persuade himi one World is not sufficient, but that he was more and more to infinity.

If in the Lottery of the World, it be my Fo tune to draw a Prize, I am not proud of my god Luck; if I draw nothing but Blanks, I ama troubled at my ill Fortune.

If all erfe of be Let which my nfide atisfaction of the rown e Got arse a ight to

Asal

t is fi ies; 1

illity (

or Ac The V

t Miss

No M

nst al

Extre

bt ba

ermine

If all the Glories and Excellencies in the Unipleate eric were contracted into a Point, they would ind, a ot be worth the Thoughts of a brave Soul.

Let my Cloaths be never to Fine and Rich, which is the Pride of others) they add nothing my Content, but much to my Grief; when I sent as a content when I were first made to content.

and of my Nakedness.

I can wear a Thred-bare Cloak, with as much than a tisfaction as if it were Fresh, and made of the nest Wool: I never heard that an Imperial rown cured the Head-ach, or a Golden Slipper e Gout.

use la ne Got

A Fever is as troublefome upon a Couch of ate, as upon a Flock-Bed.

I feel no want of Scarlet, Diamonds, Pearls, wels or rich Embroidery, so long as I have but arse and easy Garments to keep away the Cold. He that bounds his Desires is happier than all outen e Mines in Peru can make him. I can be as oklypt intent in Ragusa, as in the Seraglio. I value to scillian Table to eat at, or Dionysius's Chamne, with of State to sleep in; let me have a Dish of sawal selevorts to my Dinner, and a Truss of Straw at ight to sleep on, and I shall not envy the Grand ight to fleep on, and I shall not envy the Grand te, he ignior.

y ample As a Wise Man ought not to desire any thing a what is superstuous, but confine himself to Necesteryist ies; so a brave Man must not suffer the translatem or Adversity what soever.

The World may make a Man Unfortunate, but the was a Man unfortunate, but the was a Man can be happy that doth not stand firm a my forms all Contingencies; and say to himself in my for all Contingencies; and say to himself in my god Extremities, I should have been content, if it am a sht have been so, or so; but since it's otherwise ermined, God will provide better.

He

He that will live happily, must neither to to good Fortune, nor submit to bad; he must prepared against all Assaults.

A wife Man will be happy in all Conditions for he subjects all Things to himself, because submits himself to Reason, and governs himse by Wisdom, not Passion.

He that is not content in any State, will be con tent in no State; for the Fault is not in the Thin but in the Mind.

A brave Man hath Fortune under his Feet: I be troubled as little as may be, is an useful & ence, and the Sum of all the Happiness of or Life.

I only enjoy that which is present; I have regard to the future, for that may not be: How or Fears never perplex me; I rest satisfied wi what I have, and by that means want nothing.

I never torment my self afresh with the Mem ry of what is past, or afflict my self with the appr hension of Evils to come; for the one doth not no concern me, nor is the other yet come; and the may be Remedies provided for the Mischies happen, for they give us warning by some Sig of their approach.

It's folly to fear where there is a Remedy: that troubles himself sooner than he needs, grien also more than is necessary; for the same weaking that makes him anticipate his Misery, makes inlarge it too: the Wise fortify themselves by Re son, and Fools by Despair.

It's a ridiculous thing to be miserable before hand, for fear of Misery to come; for a M loses the present, which he might enjoy in pectation of the future: Nay, the fear of low any thing, is as bad as the loss it felf: Miseries endless if we stand in fear of all Possibilities.

When I am furprized with the fear of any M

The l Gran guile hecks, brtune mes a f to d e Mod Com rtui

is fe

re i

Ne

me

ome

du si

bt an

con

ou do

Wh

ith w nce?

le, a happ

not

Tis

me,

lt; w diver

him le on bot

e Gam

ews of

anada

No M

in the ve fuffe ver coi her tro mult

ditions causel s himle

1 be con

e Thin eet: T eful So s of or haven : Hope fied wi ning. Memo he appr not no and the chiefs ne Sign edy: , griev veakne akes hi s by Re befor a Mi

y in e of loss Ceries 2 es.

any Mi fortun

rtune, I a little qualify my fears with Hopes; is serves to palliate my Missortune, tho' not to re it.

Never antedate your own Misfortunes; it's me enough to bear Misfortunes when they ome; the ills which you fear you may suffer, ou fuffer in the very fear of them; and there is bt any thing that you fear, which is fo certain come, as it's certain that many things which budo fear, will not come to pass.

Why should you torment your self at present. ith what, perhaps, may happen out forty Years nce? This Humour is a kind of a voluntary Difse, and an industrious Contrivance of your own happiness, to complain of an Affliction that you not feel.

'Tis time enough to lament when the Mischief is me, and in the interim to promise your self the It; what do you know but something may delay divert it?

The Moor Abal, Brother and Heir to the King Granada, being taken Prisoner in Solobenia, to guile his Misery, used sometime to play at necks, (a true representation of the Game of prtune;) he was no sooner set down, but in mes a Courier to tell him he must prepare himf to die; Inexorable Death comes always post; Moor defired him to respite for two Hours; Commissary thought it too long, but yet granthim leave to play out his Game; he play'd and on both his Life and the Kingdom; for before Game was ended, another Post arrived with ews of the King's Death, whereby the City of anada presented him with their Keys.

No Man hath reason to complain when we are in the same condition; he that escaped might ve suffered, what soever may be any Man's lot, ver complain if it be your own.

Lam

I am prepared against all Misfortunes and line licities, expecting whatsoever may be, will be

Must I be poor? I shall have Company: Ma I be banished? I'll think my felf born there; and the way to Heaven is alike in all Places.

Have I any Injuries done me? they are but many Robes of Honour, which I can chearful wear; and out of the greatest Infelicities; I a raise Trophies, and a Triumphal Arch: I has this comfort in my Missfortunes, that wheresome I go, I have the same Nature, the same Property of the same Property and I carry my Virtues along with me.

If I have lost any thing, it was adventitions and the less Money, the less Trouble; the less haven, the less Envy: Is your Treasure stollen in not lost, but restored; he is an ill Debtorm counts repayment loss. What is it that I labout fweat, and solicit for? When it's very little to I want, and it will not be long that I shall not any thing.

Whatloever happens to me, I am never in prized at it; for I have ever in my Thoughts, in whatloever may be, will be; and that which me fall out at any time, may fall out this very Day.

All Infelicities and Sufferings are easy to me because I make them familiar to me in my contemplation; what wonder is it to lose any thing at a time, when we must one day lose all?

When I fee any infelicity to fall upon another; I conclude, that tho' the Mischief fell upon another, it was levelled at me: when there are many Thousands of Dangers hovering about what wonder it is if one comes to hit me at last.

Calamity and Affliction can never shake or a sturb a brave Soul.

I can patiently undergo the Tympanism of the Greeks, or the Petalism of the Athenians; and a triumph more for the honour of my Suffering nm b ho f Cat Pha

ason orth a 1 Gr It's

me

ver a He e Inf r, an

All ey ha ort all me t

Miss or or or or or

pirit 1 locks cean

Mist

ity. Then f Mar let th

If your general section of the secti

ne, a hearful es F I c : I have erefoeve e Provi me ititious

otor the labou ittle th nall nee or med

n and ty. ll upor e aref laft

2 of th and ca ffering

than

and Information and I am concern'd for the pain I suffer; for this ambeholden to those gallant Heroes, Metellus; by: Mu ho suffered Exile resolutely, Rutilius chearfulere; and Cato Death constantly.

Phalaris's Bull, and a Bed of Roses are all one re but me; I must confess while I am in the Bull, by orth a Groan; but my Mind is impassible above

It's the excellency of a great Mind to triumphyer all Misfortunes and Infelicities.

He that gallantly encounters Misfortunes and eInfelicities of the World, is as valiant as Heceless r, and may stand in competition with Cafar for strings Virtues and Bravery.

All the Distempers of this Life, if they be long, ey have their intervals, and give us some ease; if ortand violent, either they dispatch us, or conme themselves; so that either their respite makes em tolerable, or the extremity makes them easy. Misfortunes and Troubles should no more difits, the rest or break a couragious Heart, than those Rods with the Noble Persians Skins, which whipped Days beir Cloaks instead of their Bodies: A generous by to me pirit must resist all Encounters constantly, as the content locks do the Waves of a great and tempessuous ig atal

Misfortunes are a bird of Different Constantly.

Misfortunes are a kind of Discipline of Huma-

There are Tempests and Hurricanes in the Life f Man; it's prudence to put into a safe Harbour bout w let them blow over.

If you fall into any great Misfortune, define or age your felf as well as you can, creep through ofe Bushes which have fewest Briars.

They who least shrink at the Storms of Forine, are alway most Virtuous and Victorious in he end.

When I have any Infelicity fallen upon m to abate my Discontent (if I have any) I have two Remedies; Diversion of my Thoughts from the Intelicity, and an Application of them to thought things which I know to be grateful and pleasate to my Mind.

I always bear my Mind above the Clouds Tempests cannot reach me; I am not shaken with Winds, nor battered with Thunder.

The discontent which we receive from any la felicity, is not founded in Nature, but merel in Opinion, and so become great or small according as it's apprehended; and they have the great est share of it, that believe they have it; if the pinion were right and sound, we should never moved at any such Infelicity; for that all the things are extraneous to us, and touch us not it deed, but only by the Mediation of an Opinio we have framed to our selves.

How is it? I have a Ship at Sea, laden with rich Cargo; and this Ship is cast away by a greater Tempest, and I know it not; I am not a whiles cheerful and merry, than if it were not can away; is it not then Opinion only which discontents me? for if Nature did it, at the same Minute wherein the Ship was cast away, my Minwould be struck with the sense of the loss of my Ship: And the like would be perceived in the los of any other thing.

It's the part of a wise Man to foresee Mis fortunes, and to prevent them before they come of a valiant Man to order them well when the come.

Diato,

f the R

·vels. bad see ow call latura, e faid, ho fir ards to fe to fi Vorld ed at 1 Weh oon Su oreto happy Vita n Comedy er the I We d nd Am nd our Ian m empera is Life ad Die fick I ake; 7

Doors:

uxury, idulging

Every

Man is robatu

SECT

on m

I hav nts from

to tho

pleasar

Clouds en wit any Ir

merel

accord

e great

the O

ever

1 tho

not it

pinio

with a grea

a whi

ot ca iscon

e Mi

Min

of m e lol

Mis

ome the

SECT. XVIII.

the Regimen of Health, and of Temperance and Sobriety.

Diato, when he returned to Athens from his Tra-vels, was asked by the Philosophers there, If had seen any notable thing in Trinacria, which is ow called Sicily? Answered, Vidi Monstrum in latura, Hominem bis saturatum in Die; and this e faid, because he saw Dionysius the Tyrant. tho first invented to eat at Noon, and afterards to sup at Night. In ancient times they did fe to fup, and not to dine: All Nations in the Vorld did eat at Night, only the Hebrews did ed at Noon.

We heap Suppers upon Dinners, and Dinners on Suppers without intermission; it costs us pore to be miserable, than would make us perfecthappy.

Vita nostra est instar Comædiæ, our Life is like a lomedy; the Break-fast is the Prologue, a Diner the Interlude, a Supper the Epilogue.

We do not eat to fatisfy Hunger, but Luxury nd Ambition; we are dead while we are alive, nd our Houses are so much our Tombs, that a lan might write our Epitaph upon our very loors; We are poisoned in the very Pleasures of uxury, and betrayed to a Thousand Diseases by the dulging of our Palate.

Every Man is his own Atropos, and by his inemperance lends a Hand to cut the Thread of is Life: Excess may be good Physick, but it's ad Diet; give me the Man that takes his Meat as fick Man doth his Phyfick, merely for Health ake; Tiberius's Aphorism is good, That every Man is his own best Physician, and his Life sets a robatum est to it. Observe Cato's Rule, eat to live, not live to eat. We pass the Bounds of N ommon and to ture, and fally out into Superfluities; in form that it's now adays only for Beggars to conte themselves with what is sufficient among don

Pulfe and Leguminous Food was a great p of the Diet of our Forefathers before the Fino and the Romans which were called Pultifugi, much on Pulse for fix hundred Years, ave view

Many other Nations, as the Japannefes, C Turks, live chiefly on Rice and Fruits of thes of they live very long and healthfully. In more am am am It's a pleasant Hunger to eat Herbs, and day rasshop ty Thirst to drink Water. When Darres has do: A Cup of cold Water given him he raised neses, the Africans in fundry Regions, and,

Cup of cold Water given him, he received onghe thankfully, and profest it was the best Draws Man thankfully, and profest it was the best Drang than that ever he drank in his Life; but peradvenus ere is E Darius was never thirsty before.

I value not the Persian Luxury, the Delicacion inks for the Fisher delicacion, the Calydonian Wine, nor the Fisher delicacion delicaci Barley-Bread and Water are highly pleasant, I f Ma taken only when we hunger and thirst. Artaxerxes, the Brother of Cyrus, being over onld be thrown in Battel, was constrained to fit down with dried Figs and Barley-Bread, which upon proof, he found so good, as he seriously lament ins for ed his Misfortune, in having been so long time When a Stranger to that great Pleasure and Delight suces a which Nature and simple Food yields, when it e best meets with true Hunger.

Temperance augments things that are pleasant in for a and maketh the Pleasure it self greater; and on oper. dinary Fare is made equal in sweetness to the The T greatest Dainties.

For my own part, when I eat coarse Bread weet-m and drink Water, or sometimes augment my racies b Commons ht in hich a eafts: / cocled able fo elicity Imust Peace fie Ter r Confe eir Cou

ind to

ommons with a little Cheese (when I have a ind to feast extraordinarily,) I take great deput in it, and bid defiance to those Pleasures s of N fo mu conte hich accompany the usual Magnificence of hich a alls: And if I have no more than Maze, Lentils, moded Barley, and clean Water, I think my able so richly furnished, as that I dare dispute eat p Floo feen f licity even with Jove himself.

I must confess, as to my Diet, I am not very and, it rious; if I lived in France I could eat their thes of Frogs, Toad-stools, and Snails: When ts ; an an am amongst the Jews, I can eat Locusts and la dai ashoppers and think them to be pleasant Viis had de And to speak freely to you, If I were aived ongst the Canibals, I could without any disgust)raugi Man's Flesh, for all things are in every thing; enter ere is Bread in Flesh, and Flesh in Bread. Happ

Happy is that Man that eats for Hunger, and like for Thirst; that lives according to Nature; dby Reason; not by Example; and provides ruse and necessity, and not for Ostentation d Superfluities.

licaci

Fine

ordin

cacies

int, i

10, V

Over

dow

Upó

mem

time

eligh

hen i

a fam

d or

o the

read

nons

If Mankind would only attend humane Nare, without gaping after Superfluities, a Cook ould be found as needless, as a Soldier in time Peace: We may have Necessaries upon very fleTerms: whereas we put our selves to great ins for Excess.

When Adas Queen of Caria sent Alexander uces and Sweet-meats delicately prepared, by e best Cooks and Artists, he said, I have bett Confections of my own, viz. My Night-travely for my Dinner, and my Spare-Dinner for my oper.

The Thracians, when Agesilaus marched thro' eir Countrey, presented him with Corn, Geese, weet-meats, Cheese-cakes, and all sorts of Decacies both of Meat and Drink; he accepted the

Corn

•

Corn, and commanded them to carry back the rest as useless and unprofitable to him; but the importunately pressing him to take all, he ordered them to be given to the Eldwis the Slave and when some asked the Reason; he replied They that professed Bravery, ought not to med with such Delicacies; and whatsoever takes with Slaves, cannot be agreeable to the Free.

The more simple the Diet is, the better is the Chyle; for Variety of Meats and Drink, do beget various and diverse Spirits, which have conflict amongst themselves.

By a moderate Diet, the Strength of the Bo is supported, the Spirits are more vigorous a active, Humours attenuated, Crudities and 0 structions prevented, many Infirmities check and kept under; the Senses preserved in their tegrity, the Stomach clean, the Appetite and gestion good.

If you have as many Diseases in your Boas a Bill of Mortality contains, this one Recei of Temperance will cure them all.

The Caridians, by reason of their singular Terperance and Sobriety are free from an infininumber of Indispositions whereunto other Nations are subject; nay, they are so vigorous the Extremities of Age, that when an Hundre Years old, they commonly beget Children, a have no gray Hairs.

The present Egyptians, who are observed (Alpinus) to be the fattest Men, and to he Breasts like Women, owe much, as he conceives, unto the Water of Nile, and their Diof Rice, Pease, Lentils and white Cicers: As we read in Daniel, how Pulse and Water must the Four Children fairer in Countenance, as fatter in Flesh, than they which fared on the Roal Provision.

nd the ittle I heir Bhis bravelt of The

The

The Conf Lenters of Le

orth st

But the Scenario we like pon D

It's st ved to ut Brea

are.

But hy Chair are whom from Now reatest Vorld; san) vinich a hey dest nach,

The Perfians, in their time the most vigorous nd the best disciplined People on Earth, eat a ttle Nasturtium, Cresses or Wild Mint, with heir Bread, and that was all the Victuals that his brave Nation used, when they made Conrest of the World.

The Thracian Women, that they might bring orth strong and healthful Children, eat nothing ot Milk and Nettles.

The Cynick in Athenaus makes iterated Courfes f Lentils, and prefers that Diet before the Lux-back th

but the e orde Slave

replie

med kes wi

er is i

k, do

have

he Bo ous a

and 0

check

theirl

andl

r Bod

Recei

r Ten infini

er N

rous

undr

en, a ved (

o ha e co

ir Di

: A1

r ma ce, an

e Ro

T

ry of Seleucus.
But the Oeconomy and Order of living, and e Scenes of humane Life are fince much changed; we live temperately, it's for Ambition, and pon Design, not to serve the Intentions of Naare.

It's storied of Pope Sixtus, that before he arved to that Honour, he eat and drank nothing ut Bread and Water, saying, > Panis & Aqua, Est Vita Beata.

But having once feated himself in the Porphy-Chair, he refused to stoop to such a coarse are when it was offered him, giving his Reaon from the Counterposition of the Words;

> Aqua & Panis, Est Vita Canis.

Now adays, instead of Water (which was the reatest part of the Drink in the Ante-diluvian Vorld; and very congenial to the Temper of lan) we drink Brandy, Usquebangh, Aqua Vita, thich are pernicious Drinks, if commonly used; hey destroy the Calidum innatum, prey upon the oscid Juice, change the natural tone of the Stohach, the Texture of the Body, and the Crasis Of

of the Parts; hence come Atrophies, the Imbe cillity of our Nerves, and Trepidation of our Members, which is affected by the diforderly Motions of the animal Spirits, being impulsed an agitated preternaturally by the Spirits of from Liquors. Wine is an excellent Liquor if mode rately used; it's a great Refresher of decayed Neture, it fortifies the Stomach, strengthens the netural Heat, helps Digestion, carries the Food all the Parts, chears the Heart, and wonderful refresheth the Spirits.

The Ancients called it Lac Senum, the Milke old Men; but by modern Practice it's found, in if they suck too much of it, it will make the Children.

Nothing can be of worse consequence to an than the constant and immoderate use of it.

Sapientia in Sicco residit, non in Paludibus & L cunis; Wisdom's Residence is in a dry Region not in Bogs and Fens.

Heraclitus left it for a Maxim, Lux siccam mæ sapientissima; A dry Light makes the wish Mind, but it becomes madida & macerata, bei

Strength and Beauty are the Goods of the Body, Temperance and Prudence the Crown

Old Age.

Il Vino non ha timone; Wine, says the Italia hath no Stern: Discretion is not then any long their Pilot, nor the light of Reason the Pole, which they should direct their Actions to a start Harbor.

The Vine beareth three Grapes, the First Pleasure, the Second of Drunkenness, the Thin of Repentance.

The Jewish Rabbies observe, that Noah whe he first planted Vines, took the Blood of an Ow of an Ape, and of a Lion, and watred the Root owl, a pers like ious. If it if wertake he Sch fhis V

when t

Si noc Hoc t

If ove An Thou No

Sobri Il Diffe or the leeds of By So oction laboral roper Body is heir per of Nat verted luices of Blocand the

Abst

are T

the Button of mour, ocrity.

this Vines with them; hence it is, that Men hen they are drunk with Wine, some play the wi, and fit up all Night, Bite and Scratch; oers like the Ape and Lion, are antick and furegreated overestationally by the Spirite of ious.

If it shall be your unhappiness at any time to be vertaken with Wine, observe the Directions of he School of Saturn.

Si nocturna tibi noceat potatio Vini, Hoc tu mane bibas iterum, & fuerit Medicina,

If over Night thou tak'st a Dose. And findst thy felf amis; and and and and Thou must next Morn another take, when No Remedy like this.

Sobriety is that which will fecure you against Distempers, and make Life pleasant to you; or the Harvest of Diseases doth arise from the eeds of Intemperance.

Imbe

of ou

ly Mo

fed an ftrai

mode

ed N

the n ood

derfull

Milk

id, the

e the

to an

E L Region

eca an

wife

, bein

the Bo

wn (

1-1150

Italia

longe

ole, b a fat

irft o

Thir

whe

OW

Root

By Sobriety there is a good and perfect Conodion made; the Meat you eat, when it's well laborated and transmuted in such manner as is roper for each Digestion, then a good habit of Body is established; the Mass of Blood hath it's are Tincture, all the Liquors of the Body have heir peculiar Properties suitable to the Intention Mature; but if the Crasis of the parts be pererted by Intemperance, then the Alimentary vices do degenerate from their Purity, the Mass of Blood and the Nervous Liquor are deprayed, and the whole Habit of the Body disordered.

Abstinence plucks up the cause of all Diseases by the Roots, in the inward Veins it takes away he Butomia, which is caused by the ill Disposition of the Stomach, and that melancholick Humour, which is feated in the Tunicles thereof, and reduces the natural Temper to a just Mediocrity.

By Temperance Men shut up their Days like Lamp, only by a pure Consumption of the Radi cal Moisture, without Grief or Pain.

If the World confists of Order, if our Life depends on the Harmony of Humours, it's no wonder that Order should preserve, and Disorder destroy.

A spare and simple Diet contribute to the Prolongation of Life.

Mangiera Piu Chy manco Mangia; He that will eat much, let him eat little, because by eating lin tle he prolongs his Life, and so eats much.

The Emperor Augustus died at the Age of sixt fix, in all which time he never purged or le Blood, neither did he use Physick; but every Year he entered the Bath, every Month he did vomit every Weck he did forbear to eat one Day, and every Day he did walk one Hour.

If you will have a constant vigorous Health, perpetual Spring of Youth, use Temperance.

The Sect of the Estenes among the Jews, by reason of their simple and abstemious Diet, di usually extend their Life to an hundred Years.

The Stoicks and Cynicks are very long Livers in Laertius.

There was a Priest was made a Dean, and by reason of his spare Diet, lived to 186 Years of Age, and when he died had this Epitaph, Hic jacet Edentulus, Canus atque Decanus, Rursus dentescit, nigrescit & bic requiescit.

One Brawn, an Irish-Man, but a Cornish Beggar, who lived to a great Age, by reason of his simple course of Life, had the Honour of this Inscription upon his Grave-stone,

Who ome S Such lle wa

Here E

Ale a and coz He b

lequepe gala, and A eve Fe oriogi do th ure, ar ht live lly Im mori, be ev Fall he by deg that A fequen upon f his Abt ny oth

lth. nd Ada Tree o appear le, lest of life, rtepheu. nes, He ure, an

, did g nty five like a Radi

r Life Con

forder to the

at will ing lic

of fixty or let y Year

, and alth, a

ce. ws, by t, did ars.

ers in ars of

Beg. of his

f this

Here

Here Brawn the common Beggar lies, Who counted by his Tale, Some Six-score Winters and above, Such Virtue there's in Ale.

tle was his Meat, his drink and Cloth, Ale did his Death reprieve; and could he still have drank his Ale, He had been still alive.

Kequepeer, a Moor, who lived in the City of gala, Anno Dom. 1586, by reason of his Austeand Abstinence, lived 300 Years, if we may eve Ferdinand Lopez, the King of Portugai's periographer oriographer.

do think that Man, if he lived according to ure, and duly observed the Regimen of Health, ht live to a long Duration; for Man is nally Immortal, that is to say, he hath a Posse mori, as appears both before the Fall, and live evident after the Resurrection; yea, after fall he could live near a Thousand Years; by degrees the length of Life was abbreviated, that Abbreviation of Life was accidental, and sequently may be repaired in whole or in part; upon search we shall find the accidental cause his Abbreviation, was not from the Heavens, my other than the desect of a true Regimen of lth.

nd Adam after his Fall, if he had eaten of Tree of Life, had lived for ever; and this appear, Gen. 3. Let us drive man out of Pack, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the of life, and eat and live for ever.

Tepheus having found out the Virtues of repheus having found out the Virtues of les, Herbs, &c. both for the Knowledge of lire, and especially for the Prolongation of did glory that he had lived one thousand lity five Years.

If the humidum radicale, & calidum innatu be kept in their right State and due Temper they may be) I fee not (for any thing that is Nature) but Man may extend his Life to age

Age.

I have lived in the Reign of five Kings, ye can by no other Calculation, than that of Sins, be found to be old; by reason of the R gularity of my Life, I have a perpetual Spri in me; I never met with an Autumn, or kne any thing of the fall of the Leaf; but Vigor Strength like the Sun in it's Glory, visit all Quarters: After a small Pittance, I find a sou and quiet Sleep all Night long; and at peep the Day I get up as fresh as the Morning it sel

The Ground of all our Diseases, and thesh tening of Life, is from the exceffive eating Flesh and other Meats.

How many warlike Nations, and strong ties that have stood invincible to Attacks Sieges hath Luxury overcome? Confider the mans when they came to their Jecur Anserin their Porcus Trojanus, Sumen, Uvedula, h dula, and their generous Wines, Cecuba and lerna, they became effeminate, and by them w more overcome, than formerly by their great Enemies.

There are many Impressions and Alteration made upon our Bodies by the Food which rish them, and change the Constitution into Complexion.

Those who eat of the Flesh of a Cat, (b) provoked into a Fury by beating of her,) those rabid that eat of it, and like Cats with Claws will lacerate one another.

Chickens fed on four Grapes, are harder Flesh, and more difficult of Concoction, are most Water-Fowls.

Vhy nner h an lating ts ou iful t hem fo, Foo ut if not fund e; b tak > that ay, I of B or the tion, Naru by e ented. here v me, t Age. d, tho Obstra

, trye out an Flesh in tw ound bad a s, and Vigour. ow thi Enquir he tim innatu mper (hat is o a gre gs, ye the R 1 Spri

or kne igor a fit all t peep it felf thefo eating er the nferin læ, fi a and l em w r great teration nich no into it, (be r,) m withth harder

on,

Vhy are the Tartarians so barbarous in their mers, but because they eat and drink the h and Blood of Horses?

ating of Creatures which have no Blood. ts ours; those Plants which are barren or ful (as Porta observeth) do render those that them barren or fruitful.

fo, how careful ought we to be what Meats

Food we eat.

ut if you would eat Flesh, I would advise not to dress it by the Fire as Cooks do, for funders the best from the worst, which we a for le but, like Philosophers, a quite contrary taking the best which is now fost, and leaay, I fay, to strip off all groffness and foulof Bodies, the Seeds of all Diseases.

or the Virtue of things taken from them by Serong (kion, is better than joyned with their Bodies. acks: Nature could be nourished some other way Nature could be nourished some other way by eating, all Danger of Diseases would be ented.

here was a Person of much Honour, who me, That his Grand-father, by reason of his t Age, had had his digestive Faculty so enerd, that whatever he eat turned into Crudities Obstructions; he being a Person of great Knowtryed many Experiments to repair it, but out any effect; at the last, he applied a piece of Flesh to his Stomach, fastened it to it; and so in twelve Hours applied fresh; in some time ound Nature abundantly satisfied therewith, had a Rejuvenescency and Renovation of all s, and lived many Tears after in good Strength Vigour, without eating or drinking any thing. ow this may comport with Reason, is worth inquiry: We have observed for Drink, that he time we sit in the Water we shall never thirst; for Nature, by the Pores, doth suck a draw in aqueous Particles to satisfie Thirst; a why may it not draw from the Flesh a succus tritius, which will support and preserve Nature.

And upon this reason the Physicians present nourishing Clysters to their Patients, and Ba of Milk in Hectick Fevers, when the Body extremely low.

Paracelsus tells us, That a Man, of his Kno lodge, by applying of fresh Sods to his Stomach, with the stomach, with the ent Hunger lived half a Year together.

Nature is able to draw through the Pores in parts of the Body, such Food as she desireth; therwise how comes it to pass, that many some shave lived a long time without eating a Meat.

Paracelsus, Licetus, and Cardan (Men who made great Figures in their Days,) assure us, it they knew some Holy Men that lived twee Years together without eating any Meat; He molaus Berbarus, and Joubertus have delivered us, that one in Rome lived forty Years only the Inspiration of Air: Hence it was said by Cosmopolite, that there is in the Air a hidden For of Life.

Ficinus, Crollius, and Rundeletius tell us, the in the East Indies, near the River Ganges, there a Nation called Astomares, that have no Mout they live only by the Air and Smells which that are in at their Nostrils, from Roots, Flower and wild Apples which they carry with them long Journies.

The Air is full of Balfamick roscid Atomand is ever sprinkled with a fine foreign Fame which may perhaps be sufficient Food to now the fine part of our Frame, wherein the Te per of Man and his Life standeth.

tare i a pui Bodi nated moge nit of Is also urished Olympi ew a whol ly in t f oth fame fon bu h Mar There t's in dy·(he an Eag allow, hover ing no

Name

reason

ound the Che cating

ing and that the onths; te the V nch the his Din as an ethe sa many 1 n have uck ?

irft; a

uccus

Natur

prescri

nd Ba

Body

is Kno

ich, wi res in ireth;

any P iting a n whi

e us, t

twe

at; H ivered

only

id by

len Fo

us, t

, there Mout

nich th

Flowe

them

Ato

Fatne

nou

ne Te

lis impregnated with a saline Spirit; in this tare included the seminal Virtues of all things; a pure extract drawn by the Sun-beams, from Bodies it darteth his Rays upon, and it's sub-mated to such a Height of Persection, that it's imagenial to all things; and, in effect, is the mit of Life, not only to Plants, but to Anils also. Licetus and Quercetan think they are wished by the Air.

Olympidorus the Platonist assures us, that he ew a Person who lived many Years, and in whole Life neither fed nor slept, but stood ly in the Sun to refresh himself.

f other Creatures, whose Life hangeth upon same hold, do fast a long time, there is no son but the same common Nature will suffer Man.

There is a Bird in the Moluccas, Monucodiaca Name, as Aldrovandus informeth us, which reason it hath so large Wings in so small a dy (her Wings are as large almost as the Wings an Eagle, when her Body is no bigger than a allow,) is born up by the force of the Wind, hovereth and hangeth in the Air continually, ing no other Food (as alas, how can she) than bund there.

The Chamæleon will live a whole Year withleating any thing, but by taking in the Air by ing and shutting his Chaps: And Ælian assures that the Goats of Gimanta do not drink in six onths; but turning towards the Sea, they rete the Vapours with open Mouth, and so they not their Thirst.

his Discourse of Temperance will be look'd n as an extravagant Phancy, and I my self ethe same Opinion of it; but yet it is agreed many learned Physicians, that Men and Won have lived many Years together without eating any Food; but that Death did not follow taking away of the Appetite, to me is wond ful. Langins thinks the cause to be the Relation of the Nerves in the Orifice of the Stome but this cannot satisfie a rational Enquiry. Sometrus conceives that such Bodies are almost mortal, and little or nothing exhal'd from the because they consist of a tenacious Humour work compacted and growing fast together, and not yield to the Action of Heat that seeds on Nourishment, and their Heat is most mild gentle, and requires not much Nourishment; I pray, consult the Adepti, those Sons of I and let me understand their Judgment.

G 2

SECT. XIX. Of Suits of Law.

IF you design to your self Happiness, and Improvement of your Estate, let me ad you to avoid Suits in Law; if you engage in ny, you put your self into a House of Corre on, where you must labour stoutly to pay y Fees.

If the Case shall go for you, there are the who will tell you, that Victory is a fair Ga but you must give them leave to divide the State

If it shall be your Missortune to engage in ny, have a care of a rich Fool; for there is thing more dangerous, as to Mischief, than an obstinate Fool, in the Hands of a cunning Kna and have a watchful Eye over him that hath two or three Causes (if he be a busie Fello for he will give you Trouble enough; an incliderable Mouse may give disturbance to a so Lion.

ding t ion; e out Clien hein : nds fo e neve rs, if. to cu eth bet ou re upon to ma a care Was g bee at bave t Lawy ed, eve ogo t e, who Box-ke

here

know

Is the

them

the S

Advo

and

e; bei

that t

ak no

effion

ute of

heir In wond

Wond

Rela

Stoma

Ry. S

Prooft i

Mand w

and w

and w mild

ent;

s of A

s, and

ne ad

gage in

Corre

pay y

are th

air Ga

he Stal

gage it

ere is l

than at

ng Kna

t hath

e Fello

an inc

to a no

Th

there were two Lawyers very passionately ding their Clients Cause, to their great Satission; when the Cause was done, the Lawyers to out of the Court, and hugged each other; Clients much admired their Behaviour; one shem asked the Lawyer, How they could be the passion of Tush, Man, saith the Lawyer, we have Foes, for we Lawyers are like a pair of its, if you open them, and pull them down, they to cut one another; but they only cut that which the between them.

ou remember the Fable of the Vulture, fitupon a Tree to fee the Lion and Bear fight, to make Prey of him which fell first; have a care you do not make the Moral.

was good Advice of Christ, If any Man will bee at the Law, and take away thy Coat, let have thy Cloak also; the reason is evident, lest Lawyer should come between and strip you to, even of your Shirt.

ogo to Law, is like a Lottery, or playing at e, where, if the Game be obstinately pursued, Box-keeper is commonly the greatest Winner: at not this to restect upon that honourable essent to which I shall ever pay the greatest ute of my Service.

know there are many excellent Persons tois the Law, if it be your Fortune to meet them.

the State of Venice, some Years since, all Advocates were Noble men appointed by Grand Council, to the Number of twenty, and had all of them allowance from the e; being forbidden to take Presents or Mothat the Nobleness of the Profession might be sullied, and that in all Process it might be fullied, and that in all Process it might be such as the profession of the Profession might be sullied, and that in all Process it might be such as the profession of the process it might be such as the process of the process it might be such as the process of the proce

If you will be sure, at every Market in the G3 Countrey, Countrey, to find some Fairies, Elves and the Spirits with hawking Bags or Snapsacks their Sides, wherein they have their Familiations with green Coats, others with yellow which they send forth to the Disquiet of gotten into his Bottle to the disturbance of World.

These are like the Sun in Aries, which mo but not remove the Humours.

Et pluet super eos Laqueos.

And it shall rain Snares upon them; which Rabby interpreted to be the multitude of Adcates, Proctors and Solicitors, which were Sn to catch the People.

Certainly these Elves are much of the most of an Ant, very good for themselves, but ceeding pernicious in the Garden of a Communication.

wealth.

If ever you should fly to these for Success the Sheep do to the Bushes in a Storm, will be sure to leave a good part of your behind you.

These, like a Quartan Ague, will never you, as long as any Humour be lest in you; if you shall have need to make use of them, will stir no more without a Fee, than all without a Lure.

I have often admired at the Genius of a bleman of France, who was much delighte troubling Men with Suits; Lewis the French hearing of it, offer'd to ease him of his Suit putting an End to them; he thanked his Ma but earnestly besought him to leave thirty of the behind, whereby he might merrily pass the time.

tion e and to g end y od-F fyou d par o, or Upon Left ulurp urt w ty, bu of M s not nch, to e for Polter m that ges, A

fo of other

e on b umoz

beir l

My I

y yo

Ext Su avoid

's; or a umours are Men's Religion, Power their Laws; beir Wit Confusion, and their Will their Cause. My Advice to you, is, that you seriously emy your self in the study of the Laws of this tion (being the most excellent for their Jueand Wisdom) if not to Practise the Law, to gain so much Knowledge therein, as to end your Self and Estate from the Robbin-od-Fellows of it.

fyou be not so disposed, you must lay up one d part of your Estate to preserve the other o, or else you will be assuredly undone.

Jpon a Controversy betwixt the two Hands, Left commenced an Action against the Right, usurping a Privilege above the other: The urt was for the Plaintiff upon the Point of E-ty, but the other having been in Possession time of Mind, infifted upon Prescription, which s not to be controll'd. But now, says the neh, to shew the World the Reverence we e for Mercy and Justice, we shall recommend Posterity to see this iniquity redress'd; and m that Day to this it has been the Practice of ges, Advocates, Attornies, and their Clerks, so of Physicians, Court and State Officers, others that have the fingering of Money, to e on both fides, and use both Hands alike.

SECT. XX.

Ext Suits in Law, (which are but jactus alea) avoid Gaming; it hath no Satisfaction in it, ides a fordid coveting of that which is anotis; or a Prodigality of that which is your own:

G 4 It's

; which mo of Adderee Sn the na s, but Comm

s and pfacks Famili

ow V

of g

h he ice of them, n a H

s of a elighte French

torm,

your

never l

you;

French is Suit nis Ma nirty 0 país

Hun

It's a Madness beyond the Cure of Hellebore, cast a Dye whether your Estate shall be your or or not; if you have not a care, (I can, without Augur, tell what will be your Fate), this, i a Quickfand, will fwallow you up in a M ment; and Goods, which are so gotten, are Pyramids of Snow, which melt away, and dissolved with the same ill Husbandry that did get them; and, believe me, you will find it me chargeable to you, than the seven deadly Sins Remember that one Crown in your Pursey do you more Honour than ten spent.

Plato seeing a young Man play at Dice, he proved him; he answered, What, so small am ter? Custom, replies Plato, is no small thing.

SECT. XXI. Of Marriage.

THere is one step more to make your l comfortable, and to advance your Fortu and that is, well to dispose of your felf in M riage; certainly a Business which requirethen Confideration.

Ride not Post for your Match, if you do, may, in the period of your Journey, take Som for your Inn, and make Repentance your Holl

If you marry, espouse a virtuous Person celebrated Beauty, like a Fair, will draw Ch men from all Parts.

Make choice of your Wife by the Ears, the Eyes.

He that in the choice of a Wife, doth beli out her Portion in his Thoughts takes the

Iwo er Be hich : Nev od I te a l ease y ing w Si vi an u

wh

uch si nd to het F Bé fu late; ve, T arry;

e hap

fore t

Love the P inds. Young nate, There daF mous 10 For A No ay his th his the, i's no imond purp Woma Mod my fe

debore, your ow ithout this, li in a M

, and a lat did dit mo y Sins. Purse w ce, he all am

your L Fortu f in M rethgr a do, y e Sorre ar Holl

erson aw Ch Ears,

th beli ho tell the V un upon Content, not examining her Condition, whether she be fit for him.

I would not advise you to Marry a Woman for Beauty; for Beauty is like Summer Fruits hich are apt to corrupt, and not lasting.

Never Marry so much for a great Living, as a lod Life; yet a fair Wife without a Portion, is to a brave House without Furniture; you may ease your self with the Prospect, but there's noing within to keep you warm.

Si vis nubere nube pari; those Weddings are e happiest, where the Parties are first matched fore they marry. If a Man marries a Woman uch superior to himself, he is not so truly Husnd to his Wife, as he is unawares made Slave het Portion.

Be sure you love her Person better than her late; for he who marrieth where he doth not we, will be sure to Love where he doth not mry; and Love without Ends, hath no End. Love is the Child of Folly; it's the strongest the Passions, and often found in the weakest inds.

Young Men are amorous, middle Age affec-

There is a great difference between a Portion la Fortune with your Wife; if the be not mous, let her Portion be never so great, she to Fortune to you.

A Noble Roman being asked why he had put as his Wife, she being beautiful and tich, put the his Foot and she wed his Buskins; Is not this, he, a handsome and complete Shoe? yet no Man, my self, knows where it pinches me.

I's not the Lustre of Gold, the sparkling of monds, and Emeralds, nor the Splendor of purple Tincture that adorns or embellishes Woman, but Gravity, Discretion, Humility Modelly.

G 5

A young Lacedæmonian Lass being ask'd by:
Acquaintance of hers, Whether she had yetembred her Husband? made Answer, No, but he he embraced her.

As there is little or no use to be made of a Mi For, though in a Frame of Gold, enchased with all the sparkling Variety of the richest Gems, usels it renders back the true similitude of the mage it receives: So there is nothing of Prost a great Portion, unless the Conditions, Tempand Humour of the Wise be conformable to Disposition and Inclination of the Husband, a that he sees the Virtues of his own Mind exact represented in hers.

Chuse such a Wise as may simpathize with y in your Missortunes, for Marriage is just like Sea Voyage; he that enters into this Ship, m look to meet with Storms and Tempests.

I knew a Gentlewoman, a very fantastical a conceited Person, and one who was not or kind to her Husband; she had a Daughter of fame Tone and Temper with her felf, to who her Father had left a very confiderable Portion commended a very worthy and fober Person the Mother, to be a Husband for the Daught but she did not like the Gentleman; some ti after there came a vain under-headed Fellow, Suiter to the Daughter; the Mother entertain him with all kindness. One Day the Mot came to give me a Visit, and with great Pleas told me, such a Person was a Suitor to her Dau ter, a brave Gentleman, of excellent Parts, one that is the Cream of the Countrey, and as me how I liked him; Truly, Madam, I faid he be the Cream of the Countrey, as you fay he is, is the fitter for your Daughter to make a Fool of; Gentlewoman reply'd, And so she shall, if it pl God it be a Match; And she was as good as Word.

elent Vane Si

Wh

of t

Phia le Fo fy tw e to k

The loes, to stay a

Thale t mar ing fo as too l

When Dru Monk, and tion of

The Te Combildrer th the m; he will p Plato

r, You to is the

Every all the ve much refore.

nich is oft hors When I read that ingenious Epigram of Ausoniof the Echo, it doth methinks graphically refent atalkative prating Woman;

Vane quid affectas faciem mihi pingere pictor? Simihi vis similem pingere, pinge sonum.

Phidias made the Statue of Venus at Elis, with the Foot upon the Shell of a Tortoise, to figfy two great Duties of a virtuous Woman, which to keep home, and be filent.

The Egyptian Women anciently did never wear oes, to the end they should accustom themselves stay at Home.

Thales being asked by his Mother why he did tmarry; said, It was too soon; some time after ing solicited again by her to marry, said, It wtoo late.

When I think of the Cares, the Bus'ness, and e Drudgery, of a married Life, I wish my self Monk, sometimes, and under a Vow of Chastinal and that Nature had provided for the Propation of Mankind without the help of Women. The Troubles of Children are many and great, comforts few and small: It's better to adopt hildren then beget them; he that adopts a Son, the liberty to make choice out of many that a Good and Virtuous, and which will please m; he that begets one, runs the hazard whether will prove such or no.

Plato seeing a Youth over-bold with his Fat, Young Man, taithhe, will you undervalue him ois the cause you overvalue your self?

Every Man is more obliged to his Parents, than all the World besides; to other Persons he may be much, but to his Parents he owes himself; refore, if Ingratitude to others be hateful, that lich is shewn to Parents must certainly be the off horrid and detestable.

G 6

And

not of er oft to who ortion erfon Daught ome ti ellow, tertain e Mot Pleast r Dau arts, and as I faid y be is, ol of; if it pla od as r'd by et embr

ut he h

of a M

ased wi

ems, u

of the

Profit

Temp le tot

and, a d exact

with y uft like

nip, m

stical a

S.

And let undutiful Children be affured, that they be preserved from the Gallows, they are ferved to be tortured by their own Posterity.

If you be able to live of your felf, and out Debt, and defign to marry, have a care you ma not too great a Joynture out of your Lands, eld cially if you have Children by a former Wife; you do, it will be more fatal and calamitous your Family than any Debt.

Provide for your Reliet a Competent Estat but not so as to impoverish your Children, so that's to destroy a quick Hedge to make a dead on

If you have Children it's better to leave them competent Estate with a Profession, than gre Riches without it; for in the one there is a pla for Industry, but the other, like a Lure, brin all Birds of Prey to devour them.

He that breeds his Children well, though!

leaves them little, gives them much.

Have a regard to a good Bishop to satisfie you Conscience; for an honest Lawyer to settleyo Estate; and marry into a good Family to keeps your Interest

Where Man and Wife are Unisons in Affect on, there is the best Musick; there was such Harmony in Affection between Ulyffes and Pen lope, that rather than for sake his dear Penelope, refused Immortality at Calipso's Hands.

Rubius Celer commanded to be engraven on Monument that he lived with Caja Ennia Wife, Forty three Years, eight Months, and th fine querelá, without any Difference, Complai or Jar.

The Ancients placed the Statue of Venus by the of Mercury, to fignifie that the Pleasures of M trimony chiefly confist in the sweetness of Co versation.

They who facrificed to Juno as the Goddess Wedloc orth, 1 ying, Repr olds O King Voma et me Worn e Can en, he Affec ith the If you

Vedlo

er pa

Meth on hi on he red the aith he

Vomar

d one

arry; cet the Samp The Po s, und dered,

A Ger ked hir k very nk your ook fo u

The il ies fay, her sel Tree t

, that y are r y. . .

d out ou mal ds, esp Wife; nitous

t Estat ren, f lead on e them sfie yo

nnia t and th

s by th of M

dess edloc

Vedlock, never confecrated the Gall with the oer parts of the Sacrifice, but having drawn it orth, they cast it behind the Altar; thereby imlying, that all passionate Anger and Bitterness Reproach, should be terminated from the Thresolds of Nuptial Cohabitation vol subsigeou ion King Philip of Macedon pulled and hawled a Toman to him by Violence against her Will: t me go, said she, for when the Candles are out, Women are alike: A virtuous Woman, when e Candle is taken away, and her Body not to be en, her Chastity, her Modesty, and her peculi-Affection to her Husband, ought then to shine an gre ith the greatest Lustre.

sapla If you will be happy, never have above one, brin Joman in your Bed, one Friend in your Bosom, d one Faith in your Heart.

ought Methinks the Zeal of that Priest did trespass on his Discretion, when in a Wedding Seron he much commended Marriage, but comttleyou red the Woman to a Grave; For as every Grave keept with he) hath a Hic jacet, so when you come to ary; Hic jacet the Wisdom of Solomon; Hic Affed cet the Valour of David; Hic jacet the Strength fuch a Sampson: Here they are all buried.

Ind Pen The Poets have unhappily represented all the Fuelope, s, under the Notion of Women; and expressly dered, that Erinnys should be Fæminei Generis. en only A Gentlewoman feeing an old Friend of hers, ted him if he was Married; he said, No; You kvery well, said the Gentlewoman, I am apt to mplai wkyou make use of Vipers: No, Madam, the reason ok so well, is because I have nothing to do with Vi-

The ill Temper of many Women, made Dioof Columbia, that when he faw a Woman had hangher self upon a Tree, That it was the best bear-Tree that ever he saw in his Life.

Ican

I can have no kindness for these morose Cv nicks, who fully the Glory of the richest Jewe in the Cabinet of Nature.

But I could build a Tabernacle, and burn In cenfe to the Memory of that excellent Menanda for his Tauffor agerns yerrana yorn, a generous an brave Woman, is the Exchequer and Treasur of Virtue.

I must confess, I ever had a noble Affection for that excellent Sex, as great Instruments Good, and the Prettinesses of Society; and eve thought, that of all Follies in Man, there is not more excusable than that of Love; but I fin by my felf, that Paffion will grow old, and we out in time.

The Adventures of Pedro and Angelina area mantique and diverting enough; they were bo Romans, and exactly well fuited for Years and greeable Humour, only the young Man had t better Blood in his Veins; but what the La wanted in Extraction and Quality was amp fupply'd in the good Graces of an excellent Pe fon and an untainted Virtue. Pedro had t greatest Veneration in the World for the Charn of Angelina, and, as he had ordered the Matte there was no Love lost betwixt them. Whe they had advanced the Intrigue in a dark way, far as little Arts, Letters and Messages wou carry it, Pedro went to work frankly and about Board, and propounded the Match to his F ther; who was not only averse to it himself, as Difgrace to his Family, but he likewise caution Angelina's Relations to give no heed to his Son Pretentions. Pedro finding by this time that the was no good to be done upon the Square, we fit, and to his Mistress with the Story; and the your Angelia People, upon second Thoughts, came to a Resol tion of trying their Fortune another way, that

o fay, b ed . Alag Friends, They ourney ame ou Castle, h he first beed in ook to ve Turr er was hiddle c ismoun y the Tl s they W on, the logues, J hould th Thieves , iifting e edro be forfe an nd mou ding up alling a ne most are. O nother vas possi

When he

affing in imself a

Beafts; i

o Place.

erfectly

o fay, by running away together to a place caled Alagna, where Pedro had some particular riends, and so take Sanctuary there.

fe Cy

lewel

rn In nande

us an eafur

ectio

nts d

d eve

s non I fin d we are r e bot

and a

ad th

Lad

amp it Pe

ad th

harn

Tatte

Whe

ay,

WOU

abov

s F , as ion Son the

Wel oun

They fet out early one Morning upon their ourney, and about four Leagues from Rome ame out twelve Horsemen upon them from a alle, having mistaken the Road. Angelina took he first alarm, and struck over the Fields full peed into a Wood; Pedro Spurring after her to ook to his Charge. When he had passed several re Turnings, and reckon'd upon't that the Daner was over, he found himself coup'd up in the middle of his Enemies, where he was seized. ismounted, stript, examined and condemned ythe Thieves immediately to be hang'd up. they were just upon the point of doing Execuon, they heard an Out-cry of Kill, Kill the liques, spare not a Man of them, &c. And what ould this be but a Band of five and twenty new hieves, robbing the former. While they were ifting every Man for himself upon the Pursuit, edro being left alone made bold with his own forse and Clothes again, and when he was drest admounted, away he went in quest of Angelina, ding up and down backward and forward, and alling after her like a mad Man; being in Truth ne most afflicted and inconsoleable Person in Naare. One while he was afraid of the Wolves; nother while of the Thieves; and whatever it Then he had spent the whole day toyling and assing in a fruitless hopeless search, he betook imself at Night to a Tree for sear of the Wild easts; in short, he tyes his Horse to the Body fit, and up he gets.

Angelina was wandring all this while from Place Place, she knew not where nor whither, and hal effectly at her Wits ends for fear of Pedro. Toward Night she happen'd upon a Tract that brougher to the sorry Habitation of a poor aged Coupl where she enquired how far it was to Alagna, what other place near Hand where she might that Night. The old Man told her that Alagna was about a League off, and no other Lodgin near enough for her to reach by Day Light, that with the leave of the Master and Dame the House, she took up in that pitiful Cabin, wi what Food and Quarter the Place afforded. But Lady, says the old Man, these Woods are might infested with Troops of Robbers, and in case any Thieves breaking in upon us, we are not also to protect you. As for that, says Angelina, I mustand the hazard of it.

ward

Toward Day comes a Gang of Ruffians up the Place, and upon the first noise of them awaruns Angelina by a Back-door, and hides her self a Hay-Mow. The Thieves press'd into the Pasage, and seeing a Horse saddled and bride there, ask'd to whom he belong'd. The old Matold them he came running in there last Night just as they sound him, and that they knew nothin of his Master. Upon this they search'd the Place took what they had a mind to, and carry'd awathe Horse. One of them striking his Launceins the Hay as he pass'd, upon a Suspicion of som Body hid there, came so near the Mark that is grazed upon her left Pap.

When it was now fair Day, and the Coast clear out comes Angelina from her Retreat. The poor Man and his Wife being overjoy'd to see her safe they gave her an Account of what had happened and the Thieves taking away her Horse; but yet, she wou'd venture upon a Walk of some two Mile and a half on Foot, they wou'd carry her to the Castle she enquired for. Angelina most thankfully embraced the Offer, and by seven or eight that forning aftle wa van exc as at tha well k ariofit y reat a T then she Now t long e loon lig lorse to) ftreffes ether to bout bre elfwhat distance nd ther haking r They 1 rifh, and ney conc na was g The fi

ake care ofoone
he Caftl is Arms
out of th
House do
Check fo
But yet
ul Delivence of he Lad
emnity

Husband

ents.

Jorning they got thither. The Owner of the affle was a Man of eminent Quality, and his Laan excellent Woman, who, by great Providence, as at that time there. And Angelina, as it fell out, well known to her, that it gave her a longing priofity for the History of her Adventure, and as reat a Tenderness both for her self and Pedro, then the had heard it.

Now to return to Pedro upon the Tree: He tlong enough there to fee, by the Benefit of the loon light, a matter of twenty Wolves tearing his lorse to Pieces, and himself abandoned to all the Afresses of Body and Mind, that ever came tother to make any Man perfectly miserable: But out break of Day, as he was casting within himess what Course to steer, he discovered a Fire at distance, quitted his Tree, and went up to it. nd there he found a Jolly Company of Shepherds haking merry about it.

They made him as welcome as his Heart cou'd with, and when he was well warm'd and refresh'd, rey conducted him to the same Castle where Angena was got before him.

orong

Coup

gna,

ight !

Alag

odgir

ght,

ame

n, wi

. B

righti

case

Ot als

1 mu

up

awa felf i

e Pa

ridle d Ma

Vigh

othin

Place

awa

eint

fom

nat i

the fully that orn

The first thing he did after his Arrival, was to the care for the finding out of his Mistress; and osoner had he spoke the Word, but the Lady of he Castle delivered her in the same instant into is Arms, to the unspeakable Surprize and Comort of them both. Neither did the Mistress of the clear douse do them this good Office without a gentle poor Check for their Disobedience to their Parents. Safe But yet upon balancing Things, as their wonderened all Deliverance, and the miraculous Concuret, in the Charge and Society of Charge and Charg dile he Lady took upon her felf the Charge and Soemnity of their Nuptials, and to joyn with her dusband also in reconciling them to their Paents. All this was done effectually, and so they returned with Honour to Rome together, when they liv'd many a happy Day after.

There goes a Story of a Grave Sober Mai that had committed Matrimony, and on the We ding Night his Bride gave him the flip, and lea away from him our of the Bed. The Bride-groot let her alone a while, and when the had flav her felf cold, and weary, in Expectation to call'd back again, I hold you a Wager, fays h you shall not find me out now; that may ve well be, fays the Man, but I hold you two one, I'll never put it to the Venture whether can find you out or no.

There was a Prince, that upon a Character g ven him of a celebrated Beauty, invited himle to dinner to her. She was a Woman highly steemed for her Prudence, over and above to Graces of her Person; and no less for her like strious Quality and Virtue. So that laying a things together, as her Husband's not being home; the King's doing her the Honour of all fit at that time; his going so far out of the wa for't, and her felf wholly unknown to him, h cou'd not but beat her Brains to consider who might be the meaning of all this; and when the had duly weighed all the niceties of the Call with a regard to her Reputation, Duty and Re spect, she return'd an Acknowledgment suitabl to the Dignity of the Occasion, giving him likewif to understand, in a most humble manner, how set fible she was of his Majesty's Grace and Favour.

The King came according to his Appointmen the next Morning, and found every thing prepar ed for his Reception to the highest degree of Mag nificence. But the Lady her felf still more Glo rious and Surprising. While they were at Din ner, the King and the Lady of the House at on Table, and their Train at another; his Majell tate the ras high f the Se fthe W n with Vill, as night fer his was hoice a ther Ta ling col ation, t pon H This abu ancy'd t o put i am, fa swell a Hens do when th Answer lem of

WHe it deal jus Clear Man's d with

han he

nothing Tof

nest; fo

eter g nimse hly e ve ther Isla

ing a ing a f a V e wa

n, sh wha en sh

Cafe d Re itable ewif

v fen our. men

epar Mag Glo

Din one jest

Wa

ras highly delighted with the Variety and Order fthe Services, and, in short, with the Conduct fthe whole Entertainment; which was carry'd n with so free a Heart, and so great a good Vill, as to spare no Trouble or Expence that night ferve for an Ornament to the Treat: Now is was in a place where there was fo wonderful hoice and plenty of Fish and Fowl, and of all ther Table Curiofities and Provisions, that the ing cou'd not but take Notice with some Admiation, that the whole Meal was nothing but Hen pon Hen, several ways dress'd and disguis'd. his abundant Variety notwithstanding, the King mey'd to himself some secret meaning in it, and put it pleasantly enough to the Lady. Maam, fays he, does not this Countrey breed Cocks swell as Hens? Yes, Sir, fays the Lady, but our lens do not keep Company with strange Cocks when their own are away. The King took this answer by the right Handle, and apply'd the Emlem of it to his own Case, being no less satisfyd with the Address and Prudence of the Lady han he was with her Beauty.

S E C T. XXII. Of the Man of Honour.

WHen you come upon the Stage of Action, as it's your Duty, so it will be your Glory, to deal justly with all Persons.

Clear and round dealing is the Honour of Man's Nature; hate nothing but what is Dishonest; fear nothing but what is Ignoble; and love nothing but what is Just and Honourable.

To stoop to any sordid low Action, is to imitate the Kite, which flyeth high in the Air, yet vouch-

vouchsafes to condescend to Carrion upon the Ground.

Do Injury to none, for by fo doing, you'd but teach others to injure you.

Innocency will be your best Guard, and you Integrity will be a Coat of Mail unto you.

A good Conscience breeds great Resolutions and an innocent Soul is impregnable.

It's less difficult, and more safe, to keep the way of Honesty and Justice, than to turn awa from it; yet commonly our Passions lead us in to bye Paths.

And be affured, he that in any one Affair to linquisheth Honesty, banisheth all shame in succeeding Actions; and certainly no Vice covered a Man with so much Shame, as to be found sall and unjust, and be assured the Vengeance of Go rewards all unjust Actions with slow, but sur Payment and full Interest.

Whatsoever I act, I endeavour to do it, as it were my last Act; and therefore I do it wit Care and Integrity: I think on no longer Life than that which is now present; I forget all that is past, and for the suture (with an humble Sub mission) I refer my self to Providence; what of there shall say or think of me, or shall act against me, I do not so much as trouble my Thought with it. I fear nothing, I desire nothing, I admire nothing; yet I do even reverence my self when I have done a just and virtuous Action but to enrich my self by any sordid Means, I dan not; for in so doing, I distrust Providence, and become an Atheist.

I have in my own Nature such an Abhorrence of any thing that is vicious, that if neither Go knew when I do III, nor Man would punish it

I would not yet commit it.

I many times wish that Nature had placed Christ thriftal C hom I landor t Keep to eater, rm thir a just] Hono Think fore yo follow Genero ild a T Breakin ever ge He tha which v fidel u It was aptain, the St did fo : eded no To de u, is il nces har this is lay afic Upon Wort. out fo d faw love t e then

y being the C ade no

actly;

n th ou d

you

tions

ep th

awa

us in air re

n fud

veret

d fall

of Go

it fur

, as

t wit

Life

11 tha

e Sub hat o

again

ought

, I ad

y felf

Ction

I dar

e, and rrence

er God

aish it

aced a

hillal Casement in my Breast, that every one with hom! have to do, might see the Sincerity and andor that is in the Cabinet of my Heart.

Keep touch in small Matters, not to deceive in reater, but the better to dispose your self to permit things of Weight and Moment: A Promise a just Debt, which you must take care to pay, or Honour and Honesty are the Security.

Think an Hour before you speak, and a Day fore you promise: Hasty Promises are commonfollowed with speedy Repentance.

Generosity and Virtue made the old Romans

Breaking your Faith may gain you Riches, but ever gets you Glory.

He that breaks his Promise, forfeits his Faith which was the Security), and so is become an sidel unto him to whom he promised.

It was well faid by Monsieur d'Gorgius, a French ptain, who having burnt many of the Churches the Spaniards in Florida, and being asked why did so; told them, That they which had no Faith, eded no Churches.

To deceive one who is not obliged to believe u, is ill; but to cheat one whom your fair Prences have induced to believe you, is much worse; this is to murder one that you have persuaded lay aside his Arms.

Upon a time there was a Cat fallen into a Fat Wort, and was almost drowned; the Cat cryout for help; the Rats hearing the Cry, came d saw her Missortune; the Cat desired them in love to help her out, and such a Day she would be them a great Reward, which they did: The y being come, the Rats made their Application the Cat for their Reward; the Cat said she ade no such Promise; they proved the Promise actly; Well, said the Cat, I do not remember any fuch Promise, but if I did make any such Promise, was then in drink: And was highly displease with the Rats, and instead of rewarding them she fell upon them, and killed several of them. shall leave the moral Application to you.

A Man's Word, and the effect of it, ought be as inseparable as Fire and Heat; this the And ents decyphered to us, when they painted a Tong bound fast to the Heart.

It's known now adays what it is too keep one Word; if any do, they pass for old fashione People.

Great Men make Promises, and mean Me keep them.

Pollicitis dives quilibet effe potest.

Each Man's a Crœsus, Promises hath store, But in Performance, who's not Irus, poor?

Eucratidas the Son of Anexandridas, when or asked him why the Ephori's of Sparta sat every to determine Causes about Contracts? Replied That we might learn to keep our Word even with Enemies.

Look upon Faith and Honesty as the most facred Good of Mankind, not to be forced Necessity, or corrupted by Reward.

It's the Glory of a brave Man to be fuch, the if Fidelity was lost in the World, it might found in his Breast.

Have so much of a generous Soul in you, not to desert that which is just, but to own it.

Where are those noble Resolutions of our Forfathers? Where is the Roman Gallantry, who obliged M. Regulus to return to be a Martyr Wirtue, rather than stain the Roman Faith.

Faith is the Foundation of Justice, and Justice the stay of a State.

for odness in not to

A Just

us tha n his

King F

ished o

The gr

at in t

When

the En

ano

ad; Ca

nded th

mised ng in (

The Flo

er talk kept e

Credit

But cert

Prince

just pr

ltiply t

putation

tgoes a n faith

k him

ect that

t to co

There is n; het

never fe.

ora.

afion fro Serpent ve. mile.

oleafe

then hem.

aght i

And Ong

p one

hione

n Me

ore, ien of eryd

eplie

witho

e mo rced

h, th ight l

you,

it.

r For which

tyr fo

Justic

A Just Man should account nothing more preus than his Word, nothing more venerable in his Faith, nothing more sacred than his Prose.

King Francis the First said, That if Faith were ished out of the World, it should be found in his

The greatest and best of Kings have ever been at in the Performance of their Promises.

When there was a Reward promised by Augustine Emperor; to any that should bring in Cross, a notorious Robber, and Bandittee, or his ad; Croton presented himself; Augustus compaded that Sum to be given him, which he had mised to be given to the Person that should ag in Croton or his Head.

The Florentine tells us, that a Prince of his time er talked but of Peace and Faith; and if he kept either of them, he had lost his Reputation Credit.

but certainly nothing doth add more splendor Prince, than to keep his Faith, and to act by just principles of Wisdom; for all things hiply to humour a Prince that hath gotten putation for his Faith and Wisdom.

tgoes a great way towards the making of a maithful, to let him understand that you k him so; and he that does but as much as well that I will deceive him, gives me a kind of to cozen him.

here is nothing easier than to deceive a good in; he that never lies, easily believes, and he hever deceives, consides much; to be deted is not always a sign of Weakness, for odness sometimes is the cause of it: Have a not to be so good a Man, that others may take asson from it of being bad; Let the cunning of Serpent go along with the Innocency of the

A brave well-bred Horse, but lame of a Le past all Recovery, had the hard Fortune to s into the Hands of a coarse ill natur'd Groom As he was now upon the way to the Place of E ecution, he had the hap, in his Passage, to me with a Spanish Horse that had been an old A quaintance of his in the Army: The Spaniard of ferving that his Friend was a little out of H mour, took an Occasion to ask him how'tw with him. Well, fays t'other, You know much as I can tell you, how true a Servant was to my Master; so I shall now acquaint w that a matter of two Months ago, I had the Luck to break my Leg upon a Leap in the Pa fuit of a Stag, where I was fo tir'd out, that had not strength enough to go through with I shall tell you farther, that I am now going receive my Reward for all the good Offices have done that Master of mine. This Groo here has begg'd my Skin, and is now carry me to the Lay-Stall to clear his Hands of Carcaís.

Well, fays the Spaniard, how happy am I the Service of fo much a better Matter, for la as impotent as you; but my Patron is so get rous, as to take care still, not only of my Bo but of my Reputation too. He feeds me, col mends me, carries me abroad with him, and wards me in my Age for the Services of my You The barbarous Groom had no Patience to h one Word more, but hurry'd away the misera Jade with Blows and Outrages, beat out his Bial and turn'd his Skin over his Ears.

A Peacock, that wanted for no good Opini of his own Parts, had a great mind to shew hi felf to the World, if he cou'd but meet with Fellow-Traveller to his liking: He might ha had the Eagle along with him, but it wou'd well } Toll 1 e and en pre little on the vy and more ver ma s now Bord Adver turning me, it arge B newhat ck; th Majesti taken uty and Interv ch, th xt then rlasting mmunio his lon n Beak dest Di

k Wing o nasty: ufible as a Le e to fa

Groon

e of E

o me

old A ard o

of H

now

rvant

int y

the

he Pu

, that

With

oing

ffices

Groo

carryi

of n

am I

or la

o gen

y Bo

e, col

and

You

to he ifera

Brai

w hil

ht ha

well he Thought for a Subject to walk Check Joll with a Prince. There was a Nightine and a Gold-finch that he fancy'd would have n pretty Company, but he found their Size little for him; The Parrots were too much on the Twittle Twattle; the Estrich too wy and unwieldy; the Goshawke too sour morose; and the Vulture, a Bird that was ver made for Conversation. The Peacock s now advanced upon the Ramble as far as Borders of Ægypt, and so unsatisfy'd with Adventure, that he was just upon the point turning back again; but in this very nick of me, it was his Fortune to cast his Eye upon arge Bird by the fide of a River, the Bird newhat resembling a Stork, only the Plume ck; the Name of it Ibis, and the Motion Majestical, that the Peacock was wonderfultaken with it, as the Ibis no less with the my and good Graces of the Peacock. Upon Interview they exchanged two Hours of the dest Discourse that cou'd be imagin'd; infoch, that there was a League struck up ben them, as the Peacock understood it of an rlasting Friendship. Upon the close of this mmunication, the Ibis all on a suddain plunghis long Neck into the Water, and with his Beak gave himself a Glyster; the Peacock Wing immediately and flew, in detestation onafty a piece of Villainy, especially under so ifible an Appearance.

H

SECT.

SECT. XXIII.

Of the Man of Business

IN Business be active and industrious; form ny Men of large Abilities, relying wholly on their Wit, and neglecting the use of ordinameans, suffer others less able, but more active and industrious, to go beyond them.

Diligence alone is a fair Fortune, and Ind try a good Estate: Idleness doth waste a Man infensibly as Industry doth improve him; y may be a younger Brother for your Fortune, your Industry will make you an Heir.

Chi ha arte, ha parte, chi non corre non hail palli

Esop's Fisher could catch no Fish by his plaing upon the Flute; but was necessitated to p ferve his Being, to cast his Nets and Tackli into the River.

And you may observe, that in Heaven a moving Planets are of much greater Confidential ration than those that are fixed, and do not at all.

I cannot commend the Honour of the New litan Gentry, who stand so on the Puncto's their Honour, that they prefer Robbery best Industry.

Action is Noble; and not only the Celest Bodies are in continual Motion, but he that most high is purissimus actus; for besides the Cotemplation of his own Goodness, he is ever work in Acts of Providence and Government his Creatures.

There is nothing in the Universe stands si though the Earth moves not spherically (as spermicus phansied) yet there is a continual Mon woul ld, Qu am m his It otto, C d, the Before r, for Difho t Frie or, the And the r great ar Inn ge. 3 duct of Resolut cast; if much When

e in ar

ear any

Gallar

ficultie

e that npaniec

many t ection o

folution

langu

well i

ience,

n the co

ear in f

es.

that to y a M

that too, in her Productions; the idle Man is y a Mare mortuum.

would not have you like the Lillies of the

ld, Quæ neque laborant, neque nent.

ammuch pleased with his Device, who placed his Imprese a pair of Compasses with this otto, Constantia & Labore, the one Foot being d, the other in motion.

for m olly

ordina e adi

Indi

Man

n; y ine,

l palli

nis pla

to p ven t

Confid

not l

Nea

cto's

befd

Celeft

that

ne Co

ever

ment

s fli

(as

Mota

Refore you act, it's Prudence foberly to conr, for after Action you cannot recede with-Dishonour: Take the Advice of some pru-Friend, for he who will be his own Counor, shall be fure to have a Fool for his Client. and that you may act with Glory, I wish you great Virtues which make a Man. 1. A I Innocence. 2. A comprehensive Knowge. 3. A well weighed Experience. 4. The duct of all those, a steady Resolution.

Resolutions are the Moulds wherein Actions cast; if they be taken with over-much haste; or much Affection, they feldom fucceed.

When you have fully resolved what course to e in any Action, you must not after repent. lear any Difficulty, for fuch things will lessen Gallantry of your Mind: And altho' some ficulties do happen to arife, yet you must beethat every other course would have been acppanied with the same or greater Impediments, many times it's more Prudence to follow the thion of a present good Fortune, than the first olutions.

fanguine Complexion with its Resolutions, well in pursuit of Success; Flegm and its ience, do better in a retreat from Miscar-

es. n the conduct of Affairs you may shew a brave tit in going in; but your Wisdom will most ear in securing your Retreat, and how to come off; for there is fuch incertainty in all Hun Affairs, that that course to me seemeth best, wh hath most Passages out of it.

Therefore it was well observed by one, t the Turks being to make an Expedition in Per and because of the streight Jaws of the Moi way they should get in; one that heard the bate, said, Here is much ado how we shall get but I hear no Body take care how we shall get on

However, let me advise you to make the preselect the lick Good, as well as your own private Adve the m tage, the object of all your Undertakings; for have providing for your own particular, your the S wrong the Publick; but by effecting good for part of Publick, you must do good for your self.

If Success of business doth not at first ansi your Expectation, let no Fumes of Melanch possess you; use other Expedients and Address lowever for he that constantly makes head against the ; for saults of Fortune, shall be sure to be victorio allikely and attain his Ends. You must not give up to f Fo Game, because the Cards prove cross.

Every thing hath two Handles; if one pro hot, and not to be touched, you may take the ther that is more temperate.

Howfoever, in doing Business, apply y Thoughts and Mind seriously to it; but bet too eager, nor passionately ingage in it, nor p mise your self Success; by this means you w have your Understanding clear, and not be sturbed if you miscarry, which you must make count will often happen to you.

When a Business may turn to Disadvantage will be your Wisdom to temporize and dela and get what time you can by deferring; becautertain time may occasion some accident which may oftune time may occasion some accident which may move the Danger.

But if it ous, ar , whic at Acri The no ed, the And to ich mig to imit e in th en he i h, I'll v dertaki

; for any th dle cor rst. s there s in it hath fo was e tere cat Court nce. let son gs whi by For ortune at appe

But if it be for your Advantage, Delays are dan -Hun ous, and you must act with Secresy and Celet, wh , which are the two Wheels upon which all at Actions move. ne, t

The noblest Designs are like a Mine; if disco-ed, they are lost.

n Per

Mor d wh

the

the p t ansi

lanch

the

ne pro ke the

oly y

t be t

nor p

you w ot be

make ntage d dela

may

and to spend that time at gaze upon Business, ich might serve for a speedy dispatch of it, would to imitate that Musician who spent so much ll get get ou e in the tuning his Instrument, that he had ne left to exercise his Musick.

Adventile matter you undertake be doubtful, when if for have done your best, you cannot yet warou not the Success. Remember the Italian makes d for part of the Character of an English Man, en he is to undertake any thing, presently, he , I'll warrant you; but when he misseth of his dertaking, he faith, Who would have thought it? ddress lowever use Circumspection in all your Acti-; for he who intendeth what he doth, is chorio a likely to do what he intends; it's the only e up of Fools they never confider; half doing any thing is worse than no doing; and a dle course, in cases of extremity, of all is the > rft. s there is no Business so secure but hath some s in it; so there is scarcely any so desperate, hath some opportunity of Recovery.

was excellent Advice of Tiberius Cafar, Non tere caput rerum, neg; te in casum dare: Follow Courses by Reason, rather than happy by nce.

et some things must be ventured, and many gs which exceed the prudence of Man, are of-

by Fortune disposed to the best.

beca ertain it is, that he who will commit nothing ortune, nor undertake any Enterprize, whose mappeareth not infallible, may escape many

H 3 Dangers Dangers by his wary Conduct; but will fai as many Successes by his unactive Fearfulness

All that a wise Man therefore can do, is to tempt with Prudence, pursue with Hope, support intervening accidents with Patience.

It will be great Prudence in you, rightly take hold on Opportunities; for Opportunity mits of no after-game; and to those which lost their first Hopes, any thing that is sufferms best.

In management of Affairs stand not a niceties and punctillo's of Honour, but by Compliance gain your Ends: Heat and Pretation are ever fatal to all Business; a sobet tience, and a wise Condescension, do n times effect that which Rashness and Choler ando.

If you are to negotiate a matter with any fons, observe their Temper, and (as far as dence and Discretion will give leave) con with their Humour; suffer them to speak to pleasure freely, rather than interrupt them; woke them to speak; for they will, out of it rance, or inexperience, let fall something we may be for your Advantage.

Give fair Words, and make large Prom for they are the most powerful Engines to your Ends.

Converse with all Men as Christians; by you have to do with any Stranger, look thim as one that may be unjust (its severe, be will be your own safety) if he proves of wise, he doth but fail your Expectation; for lieve me (and I have found it to my Cost) thing will undo you more than to rely toom upon the Honesty of other Men.

And, if possible, order your Assairs so, the with whom you are to deal, perform sirst;

do at the dot at

at is d

ng, the nd thou cency fety; thens in ived by emfelv t I wo m with distru ffence, In all ting) to

Prude

nd if you off, you ir and it if it eafe.

Never

ay hind

When

hich ma e Impo

ake wo

e Worl e Centr

at is done, if you be deceived, you may thank ur self.

If at any time you shall be overmuch pressed do any thing hastily, be careful; Fraud and ence. eceit are always in haste; Distidence is the right eightly to of Prudence, Cavendo tutus.

Remember Epicharmus his Memento disfidere.

There is no better Antidote against Deceit than aution.

ill fai

alness! is to

ope,

unity

hich l is fu

not u ut by

Pre fober do n

oler

19 mg

any ar as eak t

em;

of i ng w rom

to W ok u

re, b

; for

Cost)

001

A; W

Where there is too great a facility of belieng, there is also a willingness to be deceived: nd though Belief carries with it a colour of Inkency, yet Distrust still carries Strength and sety; the greatest advantage of Deceit is other lens in Impersections; and Men are rarely deived by others, except they have first deceived emselves by trusting: to keep People in hope, Prudence, but to trust them is Indiscretion; I would have you so to behave your self to com m with whom you have to do, as not to feem distrust, for that passes from Incivility to an ffence, and makes him to be your Enemy.

In all great Actions take many (if you think ing) to your Affistance, but few to your Trust: nd if you trust any, be sure you trust your self ost.

If you be to go abroad, if the Weather be rand serene, carry your Cloak with you; s; bt t if it rains, you may leave it behind, if you ease.

Never suffer any rub to lye in the way, which es of my hinder the true running of your Bowl.

When you have a present good in prospect, hich may turn to Advantage, decline it not by e Importunity of others; if you do, you will ake work for Repentance. Let the Business of o, the World be your Circumference, but your felf e Centre.

If

If you meet with a Person that is more co placent or officious unto you than usual, have care; for he hath some design upon you, and either hath, or doth intend to deceive you.

A fairer look than ordinary towards the niard puts him into a present suspicion of own Safety: The Italian thinks himself up the point to be bought and fold, when he is b ter used than he was wont to be, without ma fest cause.

Never put your self into the Power of Person how he will deal with you; if you co to depend upon the Charity of others, y are undone; therefore always Rand upon w Guard.

When you engage in any great Concern let be with your Equals, not with them that much superior to you; if you do, they w have the Honour and Profit, and you the To and must be content with what they will go have P

At a time a Lion invited a Cow, a Goat, a Sheep to hunt with him, promising them, t what Game was taken, should be equally divid between them; they went out, ran downall and quartered it; each of the Companions sto eagerly expecting to receive his share, which the Lion into rage; I, faid he with a terri Voice, take the First part as your King, the Sea I claim as being strongest, the Third is my due a small Reward of all my Pains and Trouble; and that shall presume to refuse me the Fourth Share haking bere declare him my Enemy. His Companie hearing this, without daring to murmur, we shabit hungry away.

It will be Wisdom in you, to take advan of the over-fight of other Men; for the Fol of one Man is the Fortune of another; and thers; lease, ortun fthe I efultin Keep f the neet w And ave be ed any ou to ilance airit; y for 1

Ian p ut he mors At a olly a edence greed i ould b nent, llow a

Let

ommi eep, a

tionary

For

For a

ore con san prospers so suddenly, as by the Errors of thers; you may make your Fortune as you, and leafe, if you rightly manage Opportunities: ortune is nothing but an attentive Observation the & fthe Revolution of Affairs, and the Occasions of Fullting from them.

Keep an exact Diary of all your Actions, and f the most memorable Passages you hear or neet with.

And if in the conduct of your Affairs, you ou co dany Error your felf, it will be Discretion in on to observe and note the same, and the Deoon we illance, with the Means or Expedients to re-airit; this will make you more prudent and waein let y for the future.

For let me tell you, no Man is truly wife, hey we who hath been deceived; and your own he To brors will teach you more Prudence than the will gove Precepts or Examples of others.

At a time there was a great Contest between

At a time there was a great Contest between soat, a folly and Prudence, which should have the Premen, t edence; the Difference grew so high, that they y divide greed to refer it to Jupiter; who hearing what sould be said on both sides, at last gave his Judgment, That Folly should go before, and Prudence which the waster.

Let all your Observations and Remarks be be Sea committed to Writing every Night before you due a cep, and so in a short time you will have a Disconary of Prudence and Experience of your own share naking.

mpanit For wise Men now begin not to be content to ur, we shabit the World only, but to understand it too.

advan and

W

elf up

he is be ut ma

that

SECT. XXIV.

Of Council and Counsellors.

IT is easier to give Counsel, than to take it wise Men think they do not need it, and Foo will not take it.

It's no diminution of Grandeur, no Charact of Insufficiency to take Counsel; the Dignity the greatest Person is rather advanced than dim nished, when they sit in the Chair of Council.

The Counsels of a wise Man are the Voice an Oracle, which foresees things to come, an guides the Designs of Posterity.

It's Wisdom for great Persons to advise with others what they should do; but it's not necessary to declare to them what they will do; let the take the Advice of a wise Man, but let the Determination come from themselves.

Those Persons are not fit to advise other that have not first given good Counsels to then Telves.

The trust of giving Counsel, is the greate trust; therefore Counsellors, are obliged to a Faithfulness and Integrity, and they ought rath to be skilled in their Master's Business, than in Humour and Inclination.

Augustus lamented for Varus his Death, B cause, said he, I have none in my Countrey to t me Truth.

What wants a Sovereign? (says a flattering Courtier); Truth, said a serious King.

Heliogabalus required the Advice of a Couffellor, who gave him that Advice which did no please him: How darest thou be so plain? said He lingabalus: Because I dare die, said the Counsello

He nour a can b

A vi Minima vith th Cynosur

afque r natur; n sma Neve hadou fit pro Dishone It ha om, Cou think tter fo len of dventu The lesiastic neir dep nage pa Preti, The t be w is Natu atter hi

Solon 1

Id cou

ith diff

im for unft eith

r the can but die if I am faithful, and I must die though

He that gives a Prince Counsel to feed his Hunour and Desires; sets Interest, which cannot rr, by Passion, which may.

A wise Counsellor must take notice of the Minima's of Affairs, and as they are apparelled with their Circumstances, this will be the best synosura to direct his Counsels; for Optima cunsque rei Natura in portionibus ejus minimis obsertuur; and many times great Matters do hang upmsmall Wyers.

Never set your Heart upon advising a Prince adoubtful Enterprize which concerns his State; it prosper the Glory must be his; if it fail, the lihonour will be yours.

It hath passed anciently for a Maxim of Wisom, Consilia Senum, Hastæ Juvenum; old Men or Counsel, and young Men for Execution: But think Men in the Meridian of their Years, are tter for Counsel or Action than old Men; for len of Age object too much, consult too long, twenture too little, and repent too soon.

The Republick of Venice suffers not any Eclesiasticks to sit in their Council, because of heir dependence on the Pope; but before any Sufage pass in Council, the common Cry is, Fuora Preti. Out Presbtvers.

The true Exposition of a Counsellor, is rather be well studied in his Master's Business than is Nature; for then he is like to advise him, not after him.

Solon being sent for by Cræsus, who advised ad counselled him wisely, but was dismissed ith disrespect: Æsop was much grieved to see in so unthankfully dismissed, said to him, We will either tell Kings nothing at all, or what is best them.

H 6

Every

take i

harad gnity o un dim uncil.

ne, at le wit necess et the

Other other

greate l to a t rath an inh h, B y to the

Could did no aid Harfello

Every one is more ready with pleasant Con ceits to delight a Prince, than with profitable Counsel to serve him: Smooth and pleasin Speeches and small endeavours, always find Fa vour; but to advise a Prince that which is ju and convenient, is a point of some pains, an many times a thankless Office.

Those who advise Princes, ought to speak if they put them in mind of somewhat they ha forgot, not as teaching them what they know not.

It's great Prudence in matters of Debate, t speak last, and be Masters of others Strength, be winget fore you discover your own.

If a Prince had several Kingdoms under him a's, an it's Wisdom to admit every Kingdom into he offe-she Council; by that means the feveral Nations wi rest the better satisfied, and each Nation will sthe rival and contend to excel the other in fmartnel of Ptole of Wit, and depth of Design.

When a Prince hath any great enterprise is bing on design, it's safest at first to propound the sam dan at to his Counsellors separately, and in private mg time ordering them to set down their Opinions in Writing, with their Reasons, and not to comecause municate the same to others; in private the estaking will be more free and bold; whereas some great Great Person or Favourite in Council, having once de clared his Conceits, carries the rest after him from which without any Contradiction; so as the best Opion.

nions are either conceased, or not so well de the pared; if the Prince meet with any Contradiction attacks. bated; if the Prince meet with any Obstruction etter the in his enterprise, let him order those who have Agest. delivered their Opinions, to debate and defend the fame in publick (which in Honour they ough to do) freely without Passion or Respect to any thin de others; by this means matters will be well debate olution and discussed.

Tho mbrac ecurit d, and n, and f For ous, nd Inf Noth nan ra Rashne vrack . The > King den v

il en su

Thol

it Con ofitabl pleafin

ns wi

st Op om.

Thol

Those are the best Counsels, and chiefly to be mbraced, that have the greatest Facility and ecurity in them, and fuch as are well groundand Fand, and upon mature Deliberation resolved upis ju n, and as little subject as may be to the Power ns, and Fortune: All desperate Counsels are dangeous, and are commonly attended by Despair peak and Infelicity.

Nothing is more fatal to great Undertakings. hey ha Nothing is more ratar to great the hand rash and precipitate Counsels. Haste and know han rash and precipitate Counsels. Haste and Tempests which Rafiness are like Storms and Tempests which nate, to grack Business; but Expedition like a fair Wind, gth, be ringeth it into the Haven.

The Chariot of Wisdom is drawn by Remoer him a's, and it's Council-Table is made of a Tor-nto him offe-shell.

King Demetrius being asked by Proclus, one on will fithe Captains, why he would not give Battel partner of Ptolemy, seeing his Strength and Number of den was much Superior? answered, That a den was much Superior? antwered, That a prise is bing once done, can never be undone; and before a ne same same than attempts a difficult Enterprize, it's necessary private my time to consider and debate.

Sertorius was highly commended by Plutarch, occur ecause he was slow in Council, grave in his Untertakings, and quick in his Executions.

Great Designs must be filed and followed; In the great Consilium; the Pillow is a silent Sybit, for him om whence you may receive Oracles of Wisham rell de To fleep upon a thing that is to be done, is ruction etter than to be awaked by a thing already done. o have Agesilaus, that wise Captain of the Lacedamodesen was, being much pressed to give his Answer to yough he Theban Ambassadors, said, An nescitis quod ad to an tilia deliberandum mora est tutissima? Sudden Relebate olutions are always dangerous, and no less Pelensueth of flow and doubtful Delays.

Cunttas

Cun Statio servilis; statim exequi Regium est.

Those are presumed to be the best Counse which come from them that advise against the own Interest.

The Athenians having been Victors in the Perponnesian War, and conquered almost all Green had a purpose to have conquered Sicily, which Design was disputed in the Senate of the Athen ans: Nicias, who was one of the chief in Athen dissuaded it; and his Reason was, because hepe suaded them to that which was not for his A vantage; for while Athens was in Peace, he kneed there were many which would go before his but in time of War, he was sure none could come near him.

A fober and wife Counsellor ought to loo thro' the present to the future, and well to consider the Consequence of things, and what Evi may happen out: The State of Venice, who they consult of a Business to Day, they consider what may fall out forty Years after.

He must not be Phrygian like, who assemble their Council after the Mischief was happene to consult how they might have prevented it.

Boldness in Council is ill, because it's blind it sees not Dangers and Inconveniencies; bu good in Execution: For in Council it's good see Dangers; in Execution not to see them ex cept they be very great.

In matters of Counsel, the good and pruder part, is to take things as they are (fince the pa cannot be recalled) to propose Remedies for the present Evils, and Provisions against suture I vents.

A prudent Counsellor consults with bot times, of the ancient time what is best, of the present what is fittest.

Periel

visest (It ma nd the im, (a Counse hern th ot tho Whe ny aga that th ey WO e wou or they fhis co deper e wou n Adv e Stre nt to g ich an aft Nu rward hat am

Peric

That has him for him for the work with we have a second contraction of the contraction of ut one

tivy to le Key urity t Cour hange

Counse Honou pericles was wont to fay, that Time was the visest Counsellor.

zest.

Counse

inst the

he Pel

1 Greed

, Whice

Athen

Athen

e he pe

his A

he kne

ore hin

e cou

to loo

to cor

at Evi

whe

onfid

emble

ppene

d it.

blind

s; bu

ood t

em ex

ruden

he pa

for th

ure A

bot

of th

Periol

It may be the Felicity of a private Man, now and then to meet with a sober Person to advise im, (and it's his Prudence to acquiesce in his bounsel) but not of great Men, for they love that flatter and feed their Humour most, of those that serve their Interest best.

When Xerxes marched with a prodigious Arny against Greece, he asked his Counsellors, that they thought of his Affairs? One told him, ney would never come to Battel; another, that the would only find empty Cities and Countries, of they would not so much as stand the Fame this coming: only Damaratus advised him not this coming; only Damaratus advised him not depend too much on his great Numbers, for ewould find them rather a Burthen to him than

Advantage, and that three hundred Men in the Streights of the Mountains would be fufficito give a Check to his great Army; and that ich an Accident would undoubtedly turn his all Numbers to his Confusion: It fell out af-all Numbers to his Confusion: It fell out aferwards as he foretold. A miserable Prince, nt amongst so many thousand Subjects, had mone Servant to tell him truth.

That excellent King Alphonsus was wont to say, hat his dead Counsellors, meaning his Boks, were him far better than the living; for they, without lattery, Fear, or Bashfulness, presented to him ruth without Disquise.

Howsoever it's not safe for any Prince to hange his secret Council, especially those made rivy to any of his last Results; for such resembles Keys that are lost or displaced, no farther Sewity remains, but to change the Lock.

Counsellors of Princes ought to give such bunsel as may comport with the Dignity and bonour of their Master, and not that which fuits

fuits with the Model of their own Mind and Fortune.

Parmenio hearing what great Offers Daring made to Alexander, which he rejected, Parmenio faid, Surely were I as Alexander, I would accept a these Offers: faid Alexander, So would I, were I a Parmenio.

After any Matter is propounded and well debated in Council, many times nothing can be more pernicious than not to come to a speed Resolution.

The Lavinians being sought to by the Latin for Aid against the Romans, put off the Resolution of it so long, that when they were just marching out of the Town to give Succours to them News came that the Latins were defeated; where upon the Prator Melonius said, We shall pay dea to the Romans for this little way we have gone; so if at first they hadresolved either to help or not toke the Latins; Not helping, they had not given Offend to the Romans; but helping them, had their shi come in time, with the Addition of their Forces, the might have gained them the Victory.

As nothing is more becoming a fober Counfellor than to advise his Prince justly; so nothin tends more to the Glory of the greatest Prince than to take good Counsel and pursue it.

The first part of Wisdom consists in Ability t give good Counsel; the next is to take it.

Hence it was that the Egyptians adopted Dioderns to be their King; for he was so cunning in giving and taking Counsel, and in changing with dexterity, when Opportunity served, that it's said, He could turn bimself into any Figure Shape.

Hannibal the Carthaginian being in Exile, at vised King Antiochus, upon an advantageous of casion offer'd, to give the Romans, his Enemies Battel.

him, The buked him Flesh of wifeth.

have an

It's

Noth Prince Counse

Let a

is prael dence, matters at first i lusion,

the Van Whe ta, to f gis (the about; l and Tre

Such not mu brought netians, ple as to part mo more for Cour and a d patience takings yet fure Motion d and

Darin

meni

re Ia

II de an be peed

Latin

efolu

arch

them

here

y dea

e; fo

to hel

ffenc

r Ai

, the

Coun

thin

rince

ity t

Diod

ng i

ing

, the

ure o

, ad

5 00

mies Batte Battel. Antiochus, when he had facrificed, told him, The Entrals forbad it. Hannibal sharply rebuked him thus, Sir, You are for the doing what the Flesh of a Beast, not what the reason of a wife Man adviseth.

It's not so fatal to the Common-wealth, to have an evil Prince, and a good Council, as it is to have a good Prince missed by evil Counsellors.

Nothing doth suit so ill with the Wisdom of aPrince, as to hearken (as some Princes do) to Counsels given by one of his own Temper.

Let a wise Counsellor advise nothing but what is practicable; every Project that thwarts Prudence, is a kind of Folly and Quacking, which in matters of Politicks; is the ruin of States; tho a first it may seem plausible, it's but a neat Delusion, and will afterwards lose it's Vogue, when the Vanity thereof shall be known in Practice.

When one propounded in the Senate of Sparu, to free Greece, Well contrived indeed, said Agis (the Son of Archydamus) but hard to be brought about; he said, Friend, thy Words want an Army and Treasure.

Such Counsels as are over-subtile and nice, are not much to be regarded, because they are seldom brought to a good issue: Hence it is that the Venetians, altho' they are not so ingenious a People as the Florentines, yet are they for the most part more happy in their Consultations than they are; and the Lacedemonians were in this particular more fortunate than the Athenians.

Counsels too finely spun, are easily broken; and a deep Contrivance agrees not with the Impatience of the vulgar, to whom speedy Undertakings seem always most heroick: And slow, yet sure Practices, are interpreted by them as the Motions of false or base Spirits.

SECT.

SECT. XXV.

Of Prudence in time of Danger.

that which ought to be done, or to flud to be truly virtuous and just, (which I wish yo ever to be) will thereby hazard his Fortune and his Safety; and, believe me, more Men are un done for their Virtues, than for their Vices; and a good Man is more in Danger than a bad.

A Plebean moved in the Senate of Athens thave Aristides banished; being asked what Displeasure Aristides had done him, he replied, non neither do I know him, but it grieves me to hear very Body call him a just Man.

Theodorus the Patriarch, was scoffed at by the Grecian Court, as an Antick, for using Goodnes when it was out of Fashion; and adjudged in prudent for being virtuous by himself.

In elder Story it passed for an Oracle of Prudence, That Honesty was the best Policy; but it modern Practice you will find, That Policy is the best Honesty: To deal justly, looks like a piece of Knight-Errantry; and a good Man is but Appleius inverted.

Virtue and Integrity, when Men were good and innocent, were great Securities: but in deprayed State, they are but as Traps to enfinant those who do profess them.

But if it shall be your Infelicity to live in butimes (as I wish you the best,) I hope you make the better for them by an Antiperistasis.

If the times be perillous, you must, as a discrete Pilot, play with the Waves which may indange you; and by giving way thereunto avoid the Hazard: So the Tempest may shake, but not rend your Sails.

He to never to Be no

To p niue of on, car in, mu only or

Be n free.

In al

tion, and And that all him Ki

Facti for if the State, rising in Peace a

But in tral, you Bat, to by the 1

I am be devo Flies.

Neith who ac whereof the Kin always the King be alwa

upon yo

to

To pass a dangerous Wood safely, it's sometimes lawful to put on such Skins as the Beasts have, which haunt those Woods.

He that acts a Beggar to prevent a Thief, is never the poorer.

Benot fingular, but observe the Humour and Genius of the Times; for he that with the Camelion, cannot change Colour with the Air he lives in, must with the Camelion, be content to live only on the Air.

Be not of any Faction; a wife Man is always free.

tod

flud

h yo

le an e un

; an

ens t

Di

non rear

y th dnef

d im

Pro

ut in

is th

Apn

goo

har

bal

ma

cree

nge

th

end

T

In all Factions carry your felf with Moderation, and so you may make use of them all.

And herein Pomponius Atticus was so happy, that all Factions loved him, and studied to do him Kindness, and in the midst of them lived in Peace and Prosperity.

Factions in State never hold long their Ground; for if they be not suppressed by the Power of the State, they will be ruined by some Distempers rifing in their own Party.

But in popular Commotions, if you stand neutral, you will be sure to run the Fortune of the Bat, to be picked by the Birds, and to be bitten by the Mice.

I am of that boon Courage, that I had rather be devoured by a Lion, than done to Death by Flies.

Neither can I fuit my felf with those Persons who act for their Advantage; like the Bird, whereof Leo Africus makes mention, which when the King of the Birds demanded Tribute, would always rank himself amongst the Fish; and when the King of the Fishes required his Service, would be always with the Birds.

If any fingular Infelicity shall happen to fall upon you, the only way is, not to fit still, but to resolve upon Action; for so long as nothing is done, the same Accidents which caused your Misfortune, do still remain; but if you act some thing, you may deliver your felf: However, you express a brave Spirit that you durst attempt it.

But that which is out of your Power, let it be out of you Care; you may, if you think fit, give your self much Trouble, but leave God to go. vern the World as himself pleaseth.

If you will live comfortably, let God along thew I with his Providence, and Men with their Rights.

A Lion that had been abroad upon an Adventure and brought off a favoury Purchase along hous Men with him, spy'd a Sheep at a distance, quite out long; of Breath, and scouring away as hard as he could adpret drive. The Lion cry'd out to him three or four with gettimes to stop a little, but the poor Creature kep inch Ple running on still without so much as looking be hind him; this gave the Lion a suspicion, that there might be a Wolf in the case, and so there lempe:

was it seems, for prying narrowly through the lites) I was it seems, for prying narrowly through the ines) I Bushes, he saw one pressing eagerly after the isle all Sheep upon the very Heel. The Lion cross'd Here the way upon the Wolf, and ask'd him carelesty or Place. enough, whither in such haste? I am looking out my Ma says the Wolf, for my Supper. If that be all ments if says the Lion, you shall take a Bit with me to alm en Night: The Wolf wou'd gladly have been excompous'd; but betwixt good Manners and good Difference the inactor was compounded and the lepose. Sheep sav'd.

WHe Stream, youd ar Lady Fl > hing. If I 1y Cottage nagnifi f Con ere unc well:

SECT

SECT. XXVI.

Of the Grotto, or Retired Life.

WHen I retire into my little Grotto, in the midst of a fine Wood, near a Cristal Stream, there I find Happiness and Content befond an imperial Crown: Here I observe the Lady Flora to cloath our Grandame Earth with new Livery, diaper'd with pleasant Flowers, and chequered with delightful Objects; there the netty Songsters in the Spring, with their vaious Musick, seem to welcome me as I pass aong; the Earth putteth forth her Prim-roses ad pretty Dayses to behold me; the Air blows with gentle Zephyrs to refresh me; here I find ich Pleasure, with a Gusto relevante, that I could g be sid adieu to Alcinous, Adonis, and Lucullus's Gar-that lens, and would not envy the Thessalians for their there sempe: if I were Epicurus (the Master of Plea-th the lires) I should wish to be all Nose to smell, or r the else all Eyes to delight my sight.

ross'd Here is no slavish Attendance, no canvasing relessy or Places, no making of Parties, no envy of gour my Man's Favour or Fortune, no Disappointe all ments in my Pretensions to any thing, but a me to alm enjoyment of the Bounties of Providence en ex- a company with a good Conscience; here I can di Distanjoy my self in the greatest Tranquillity and lepose, without fear, envy, or desiring any hing.

d the

ECT

hing

your ome.

ever

emp

it be giv

) go-

alone

hts.

dven

along

e ou

cou'd four kep

If I lye under the protection of Heaven, apoor lottage for Retreat is more worth than the most hagnificent Palace: Here I can enjoy the Riches f Content in the midst of an honest Foverty; ete undisturbed Sleeps and undissembled Joys do well; here I spend my Days without Cares,

and

and my Nights without Groans; my Innocency is my Security and Protection.

Here are no Beds of State, no Garments of Pearl or Embroidery, no Materials for Luxury and Excess; the Heavens are my Canopy, and the Glories of them my Spectacle; the motion of the Orbs, the courses of the Stars, and the wonderful order of Providence are my Contemplation.

My Grotto is safe, though narrow; no Porter at the Door, nor any Business for Fortune for she hath nothing to do, where she hath no thing to look after.

Here I am delivered from the Tumults of th World, free from the Drudgery of Business, whice make us troublesome to others, and unquiet to our selves; for the end of one Appetite or De sign, is the beginning of another.

I value Epicurus's λάθε βιώσας, Live closely, be yond a Diadem; and must say with Crates That Men know not how much a Wallet, Measure of Lupines, and security of Mind i worth.

This is the way to Heaven which Nature hat chalked out, and it's both secure and pleasant there needs no Train of Servants, no Pompo Equipage to make good our Passage, no Mone or Letters of Credit for Expences upon the Voyage but the Graces of an honest Mind will secure upon the way, and make us happy at our Journy's end.

Similis, Captain of the Guard to Adrian the Emperor, having passed a most toil some Life, to tired himself, and lived privately in the Countre for seven Years, acknowledging that he had live only seven Years; and caused on his Monument to be engraven,

Hic jace fu. You p lastrion lone by soverce Zeno h

y of the
is true, ut mine

er Terrecause in Nothing in Nothing in Nothing in Nothing in Nour for Sod's Pl is State

dwith

ot regar is sufficion the Wish of the wan on the winess.

He thandy of volume to work up the ling.

What is the grehich I d

Hie jacet Similis, cujus Ætas multorum Annorum fuit, ipse Septem duntaxat Annos vixit.

You perhaps have more Friends at Court than have, a larger Train, a fairer Estate, and more Justious Title; but what do I care to be outone by Men in some cases, so long as Fortune sovercome by me in all.

ency

its of

Xur

and

Otio

d th

item

Por

rtund

h no

of th whic

iet t r De

y, be rates

let,

nd i e hat

afant

mp d

1one oyag

ure u

Jour

n th fe, re

intre

live

mer

Zeno hearing Theophrastus commended above arof the Philosophers for his number of Scholars, Istrue, said Zeno, his Quire is larger than mine, st mine hath the sweeter Voices; so others may we more Lordships, ample Possessions, and lar-Territories; but I have the sweetest Life, cause more retired.

Nothing comes amiss to me, but all Things cceed to my very wish: There is here no rangling with Fortune, no being out of huour for Accidents; what soever befals me, it's od's Pleasure, and it's my Duty to bear it: In is State I feel no want; I am abundantly pleawith what I have, and what I have not, I do stregard; so that every thing is great because ssufficient.

0 the Bleffings of Privacy and Freedom! The lih of the greatest but the Privilege only of ean ones: It was Augustus's Prayer, That he ght live to retire, and deliver himself from publick uliness.

He that lives close, lives quiet; he fears no by of whom no body is afraid; he that stands low upon the firm Ground, needs not fear lling.

What is all the Glory and Grandeur of the World, the great Territories in it, to that Happiness hich I do now possess and enjoy? The whole mpass of the Earth to me seems but a Point, and yet Men wil be dividing it into Kingdon and Dominions.

King Philip receiving a fall in a place of wreeling, when he turned himself in rising, and sathe print of his Body (in the Dust) Good God, sathe, what a small portion of Earth hath Nature a signed us, and yet we covet the whole World?

Some are so covetous, that the Riches of P tosi will not content them; whereas in a retire Life there is no occasion for Money, but only look on it, and tell it over.

I am here at no Man's Command, but am Servant to Reason; yet I enjoy that privile which Diogenes bragged of, when he said, Arifitele dines when it seems good to King Philip, be Diogenes when himself pleases.

It is a stark Madness for a Man to think shall be safe and quiet when he's great.

Many Liberties may be taken in a private Co dition, that are dangerous in a publick.

I can walk alone where I please, without Sword, without Fear, without Company; Ica go and come, eat and drink, without being the ken notice of.

The higher we are raised, the more emine are our Errors and Infirmities; there is not Day, not an Hour, that we can call our own how can we expect Peace and Repose in a St tion, when all that ever went before us, have a countered Hazards and Troubles, if not Death self? Consider when you are exalted in the Of Glory, that every Man that admires and flatte you, envies you too in his Heart.

It's common to Men of the greatest Eminer cy, that they perished by the Hands and Harms those they least feared.

What e neve or Serv licities ges: S Mafte Innoc mbitio Let al rowds e endu hen w ranqui craggy ut upon eat rest What etters at ut truly oms tha the S our Eye fthe Ki

felf; the
is Head
ook no
the Ari
m.

empest

Agreat e but ur Sea

> Ster Aus Me Obj Len

gdon

Wre

id fa

d, fal

ure a

of P retire

nly

t am

ivile

Arift

p, 6

nk

e Co

out

Ica

ng t nine

not

OWI

a St

eath

e O

iner

ms

What with our open and fecret Enemies, we enever secure; we are betray'd by our Friends. or Servants, or Relations; but thefe are the Inlicities and Measures of Courts, not of Cotges: Servitude is the fate of Palaces; he that Master of many, is the Servant yet of more. Innocency hath no residence at Court, where mbition always wars against eminent Virtues. Let any Man but observe the Tumults and the lowds that attend Palaces, what Affronts must endure to be admitted, and how much greater hen we are in: The way to Happiness and ranquillity is fair, but the passage to Greatness graggy, and stands not only upon a Precipice. upon Ice too, and tho' we our felves should eat rest, Fortune will not suffer us.

What are Crowns and Sceptres, but golden etters and splendid Miseries, which if Men did attruly understand, there would be more Kingms than Kings to govern them; look not upnthe Splendor of a Crown, but upon the Empest of Cares which accompany it: Fix not our Eyes upon the Purple, but upon the Mind ithe King, more sad and dark than the Purple self; the Diadem doth not more encompass is Head, than Cares and Suspicions his Soul: wook not at the Squadrons of his Guards, but the Armies of his Molestations which attend Agreat Fortune is a great Slavery, and Thrones but uneasy Seats.

Sedes prima, est vita ima. Stet qui ounque volet potens Aulæ, culmine lubrico: Me dulcis saturet quies. Obscuro positus loco, Leni persruar otio.

Those Grandees upon whom the admiring Mu titude gaze, as upon refulgent Comets, and Pr digies of Glory and Honour, of all Men are me unhappy; look into their Breafts, then you h fee the Iwarms of Cares and Anxieties which ceffantly corrode their very Hearts ag ano ad

Consider the brave Men of the World, w for their Merit have been advanced to the hig est Elevation of Glory, have, for their Virtue been ruined; some have been profcribed, h canfe their Deferts were above requiral, and thers, not because they had done any harm, b for fear they might do fome, by reason of the Greatness. vierrous Concat

Rutilius and Camillus were rewarded with B nishment, to whom Rome did owe not a little her Greatness and Renown: The Athenians cashi ed, not only their Miltiades and Themistocles, wil had often preserved their Lives and Fortunes, b also their Phocion and Aristides, which are not much the Names of Men, as of Virtue and Goo

The Venetians clapt up in Prison that bra Pedro Lore-Dano, a Senator of Venice, becau he had so much Authority as to becalm a Ter pest by Land, I mean a great Commotion a Tumult raised by the Sea-men, which threat much danger to the City, and this Par Region's

Every thing that is Virtuous and Good, do not always Triumph: Things of this Wor have their Seasons, and that which is most en nent, is obnoxious to the ill Arts of others.

Ever think it's the best Living in the ter perate Zone; between New Splendide, new line he had Serè.

If Heaven shall vouchsafe me such a Blessin that I may enjoy my Grotto with Content, can lo Earth a afuch randero be o fit.

If I v

am at 1 p and els my hen tak en, and ysterio e Wor Depone tem,

que You w apendio

eration

ooking not on y Princ I can e eat fron cising th being 1 s Hercu which he oduction d prosper owns, m wenty?

he would

250°250

Ma Ma

d Pr

e mo

u Th

ich

od i

, WI

e hig

irtue

dus b

and (

m, b

f the ylier

ith B ittle cathic s, W es, b

not

Goo

t bra

becau 1 Ten

on at hreat

Wor

31 effin

tent,

an look upon all the great Kingdoms of the Earth as so many little Birds-Nests. And I can nsuch a Territory prune my felf as much as Aleunder did, when he fancied the whole World be one great City, and his Camp the Castle fit.

If I were advanced to the Zenith of Honour, am at the best but a Porter, constellated to carry and down the World a vile Carcase; I conis my Mind (the nobler part of me) now and en takes a walk in the large Campaign of Heain, and there I contemplate the Universe, the ufterious Concatenation of Causes, and the mendious Efforts of the Almighty, in Consiration whereof I can chearfully bid adieu to eWorld.

Depone hoc apud te, nunquam plus agere Sapientem, quam cum in conspectu ejus, Divina atque Humana venerunt.

You will find by Experience (which is the best ooking-Glass of Wisdom) that a private Life not only more pleasant, but more happy than Princely State.

Ican easily believe, that Dioclesian after his Reat from the Empire, took more content in exching the Trade of a Gardener in Salona, than gion' being Emperor of Rome; for when Maximiad, do Herculius writ to him to resume the Empire hich he had with much Felicity governed for often wenty Years) he returned this Animologies. We would come unto Salona, and observe the rare inductions of Nature, and see how the Coleworts, need high he had planted with his own Hands, did thrive director, he would never trouble his Head with wns, nor his Hands with Sceptres. Several D. Harve

And fometimes I think, that Dionysius took great pleasure in commanding his Scholars in C rinth, as in reigning over Syracuse.

This made Scipio, after he had raised Rome be the Metropolis of almost the whole World, had a voluntary Exile, to retire himself from it, as at a private House in the middle of a Woo near Linternum, to pass the remainder of his glorious Life, no less gloriously.

The tallest Trees are weakest in the tops, at envy always aimeth at the highest do no Jaid

Those who have been bad, their own Inselle ty precipitates their Fate; if good, their Men have been their Ruin.

If they have been Fortunate abroad, they habeen undone at home by Fears and Jealousies.

If Unfuccessful, the Capricio's of Fortune a counted their Miscarriages, and their Unhapt nesses esteemed for Crimes.

Howsoever a Virtuous honest Man, (as I wi you ever to be) though his Bark be split, yet saves his Cargo; and hath something left towar his fetting up again.

There is no Safety, no Security, no Comfo no Content in Greatness: This made a gree Man say, Requiem quasivi & non invent, nist Angulo cum Libello; I have sought for rest and get, but could not find it but in a little Corner with Book.

Vive tibi, & longe nomina magna fuge.

O the Sweetness and Pleasure of those bless Hours that I spend apart from the Noise and B siness of the World! How calm, how gent not so much as a Cloud or Breath of Windto sturb the Serenity of my Mind? The World me is a Prison, and Solitude a Paradise.

hat w Evils.. All that ms

If y

Marin

danger

ainly.

he cal

mults

Honou hedy, Long

Virtue ery an ret Tr Fortune

Give honest ampicy

I III A S. F.

A 7

If you think it pleafant from Land to behold Mariners striving with Storms; or without enlangering your felf, Armics joyning Battel; ceranly nothing can be more delightful, than from he calm Throne of Wisdom, to view the Tuorld, boults and Contentions of Fools; not that it's it, at leafant that others are afflicted; but it pleaseth Wood hat we our felves are not involved in the same his glo Evils ..

All the exterior Lustre of the World, which os, at tharms the Eyes of Men, is but a painted Cloud, Meri medy, which presently hathits Exit.

Meri medy, which presently hathits Exit. Dial which we then look on, when the Sun of Long Life and a peaceful Death, are not gran-ey has not or held by the Charter of Honour, except unea my and Envy, two ancient Courtiers, lay sethapp net Trains to blow up the greatest Structure of fortune.

> Give me a retired Life, a peaceful Conscience, lonest Thoughts, and virtuous Actions, and I owar ampiry Clefar.

took 12/11 come

Milio

s I wi

vet

omfo

a gre

221/1

end at

with blell

nd b gent

d to

orld

s in C

Vitam si liceat mibi Formare arbitriis meis. Non fasces cupiam, aut opes, Non clarus niveis equis Captiva agmina traxerim: In solis babitem locis. Hortos possideam, atque agros. Illic ad strepitus aque Musarum studiis fruar: Sic cum fata mihi ultima Perneverit Lachesis mea. Non ulli gravis aut malus Tranquillus moriar Senex.

The

The kindest Couple of a Shepherd and a Shepherdess that ever met, came unhappily to be part.

ed at last by a most deplorable Fate.

As the Mistress was a sleep upon the Grass, Serpent bit her by the Breast and she dy'd of it So foon as the Husband had discharged all the Funeral Rites and Duties, he erected a Monu ment to the Honour of her Memory, and pay' her his daily Visits, strowing Flowers and Rose upon it, with a particular Caution that no for of unclean Thing should be suffered near it. A he was one Day either killing Worms with hi Feet, or cutting them to pieces with his Sheep hook, according to his Custom; there was Voice spake to him to this purpose: Be not s cruel, gentle Shepherd, to thy once belove Amarante, for the Worms that thou hast now destroyed with a friendly Intention, are no o ther than a part of that Creature; or if I may not be credited, look but under the Stone tha covers them, and believe thine own Eyes. He had no fooner rais'd the Stone but whole shoul of Maggots came creeping out from under it and these Words along with them: Think n more of what I once was, but Treasure up this i thy Mind; That what Amarante is at present Thyrsis must one Day be. These last Word made fuch an Impression upon the Shepherd, tha from that Day forward, he bad adieu to his Flock and gave himself up wholly to the Thoughts of Death.

SECT

118C 0

T w dy th fexce

For t ray to eremp

Neve

forren

ard yo

laifanc

Plato

er, wh

Chance

So fh fhis I

oire ne

Maho

all'a F

p his

he Peo

ver an noving.

tit, bi

ut com

o to the

You nuch a Tions, and Known lode, erfeit th

Shep. e part.

rafs, of it all the Monu pay' Rose io for t. A ith hi Sheep Was not f elove nov no o I may e tha

. H shoal er it ink n

CT

and of the last by a live by a series of the last by t ne kindelt Conple of

Of Complaisance.

T will be great Prudence in you, well to fludy the Art of Complaisance, certainly an Art fexcellent Use in the Conduct of Affairs.

For there are so many Circumstances in the my to an Estate or Greatness, that a morose or eremptory Man rarely attains either.

Never violently oppose your felf against the orrent of the Times you live in, thereby to haand your Fame or Fortune; but by fair Comlaisance attain your Safety.

Plato compares a wise Man to a good Gameer, which doth accommodate his Play to the hance of the Die.

So should a wife Man accommodate the course this Life, to the Occasions which do often renire new Deliberations.

Mahomet made the People believe that he would all'a Hill to him, and from the top of it offer this he People assembled, Mahomet call'd the Hill wer and over to come to him; and the Hill not Word hoving, he was not at all out of Countenance d, that it, but put it off with a Jest, If the Hill will Flock of come to Mahomet, says he, Mahomet will hts of to the Hill.

You must imitate M. Porcius Cato, who was of ich a Temper, that he would humour all Occaons, and was never out of his way.

Knowledge it felf ought to be according to the lode, and it's no small piece of Wit, to countheit the Ignorant; the relish of Things changes cording to the Times.

Let a prudent Man accommodate himself to the present, though the past may seem better unto him.

When any thing is requested of you which you are not willing to grant, deny it not possiblank, but make your Denial to be taken down by Sips; leave always a Remnant of Hope sweeten the Bitterness of the Denial: Let Coutesy fill up the vacuity of Favour, and go Words supply the defect of good Deeds: Ho Men in Hopes, when you cannot give them Stisfaction.

A Complaifant Humour, affifted with a practical Knowledge of Men and Things, gai and ravishes the Hearts of People; it's a thing good Consequence, for a Man to make the book of his own Talent.

The Air of the Countenance hath certain Chan which have a great Influence on the Minds

Marshal de Rhetz did deserve the highest Ecomium for his Complaisancy; the access to he Person was ever easy, his Humour not Morol his Countenance Serene, and when necessity a private Reasons obliged him not to grant a Pet tion, it was in terms that sweetned the Disconte of the Unsuccessful;

Truth hath Force; Reason, Authority a Justice, Power; but they are without Lustre, the graceful way and manner of doing be wat ing; the pleasant way of doing makes the M of Fashion.

A wise Pilot always turns his Sail according the Wind.

It will be Prudence in you to ascribe you most eminent Performances to Providence; sit will take off the edge of Envy; and none less maligned, or more applauded than they w are the

Wh lay afi pleafar the bet Xene gid Di

Discou wonder and Li

Stars, to the Anaxay with Fathing;

declare

I have not modes: I low an can ble

ty that r

EVery fpo If you

fovem a ment w thers: are thought rather Happy than Able, and Fortunate than Cunning.

When you come into Company, or to Act, lay afide all sharp and morose Humours, and be pleasant; which will make you acceptable, and he better effect your Ends.

Xenocrates, who was of a very severe and rieid Disposition, would be very pleasant in his Discourse; at which the Disciples of Plato much wondering, said Plato, Do you wonder that Roses and Lillies grow amongst Thorns?

I must confess, I am by the malignity of my Stars, very morose. I cannot subject my self to the Humour of other Men; I cannot, with Anaxagoras, maintain Snow to be black; nor with Favorinus, a Quartan Ague to be a very good hing; but must appear without any Disguise, and declare my Judgment according to my own Sentiments.

I have no Sol in me, nor am I ductile; I cannot mould my felf Platonically to the World's Idea: I had rather lose my Head, than stoop to any low and unbecoming Action: In my Solitudes I an bless my self, when I contemplate the Feliciconte withat my Ashes will meet in the Urn.

SECT. XXVIII.

Of Faber Fortunæ.

Very Man is Faber Fortuna, but there are many spoiled in the making.

If you aim at Advancement, be fure you have Jovem in Arca; otherwise your flight to Preferment will be but flow without some golden Feahers: You must study to ingratiate your self into

the

felf i er un which t poi

dow

ope Cou d go : Ho

em S ith t

, gai hing the b

Chart inds

est E s to l Moro Tity a a Pe

Va al

iltre. e wat e M

rding

be yo ce; one !

ey w

the favour of fome great Person, upon whomyo must depend rather than upon your own Virtues If not, you will be like a Hop without a Pol for every one to tread upon: And wise Men know that Merit must take a great compass to rise, i not affisted by Favour.

To gain the Favour of great Persons, you must be skilful in the art of Fencing; for he that on the Right or Lest hits their Humour, win and partakes of their Bounty; but not he that useth much Skill.

If you set up for a Favourite, it's Prudence thave Fame to sound the! Trumpet of your Work before you offer your self; for by that means yo will make your self to be desir'd, which will be great Advantage to you; but by offering and in truding your self, they will think you are rewarded when you are accepted.

In raising the Fabrick of your Fortune, ther is no small Wisdom in the polishing and framin the Materials of ordinary Discourse, to discer Tempers, to suit the Humour and Character of Men; rightly to observe Time, and prudently make Occasions, will serve as so many Steps to get up to the Pinnacle.

Some Men in the making of their Fortune, a well studied in Men, but know not the nature Business; others are only wise by Rule, and stud Maxims, but ignorant in timing of Business, an making Opportunities.

Some Men by Flattery (an Art much in fall on) have raised themselves, and done their But ness without running any risque; but I look up on Flatterers as the Pests of Society, and the Digraces of Humane Nature.

He that will be Master in the Art, must sebesore him the excellent Cato Major, who was

To corum ment;

faid to

The less are of The Hands

The Mind particu
the cor
and Ap Effect.

Order Man; withou Pruden The

o the afterwa hall hav

let fort Advant undisco Make

Current Fortune he rest He th

Stream, Purpose om you

irtues a Poll know rife, i

you he tha , Win he tha

ence t Wort ns yo ill be and in eward

, ther ramin discer er d entlyt teps t ne, a ture d stud fs, an n fash ir Bul ok u he Di

ust s 30 W sid to be, Adeo versatilis Ingenii, ut quocunque loo viveret fortunam sibi fabricare visus est.

To be debonair, and behave your felf with decorum, will contribute much to your. Advancement; for the Roman Orator tells you, Proprium but esse Prudentia, conciliare sibi Animos Hominum

The covering of your Imperfections and Deids are of no less importance than the illustratg of your good parts.

The mould of a Man's Fortune is in his own

Hands.

The Architect of Fortune must dispose his Mind to judge of Things as they conduce to his articular Ends; for we have observed some in he conduct of Affairs, prefer things of Shew and Appearance, before things of Substance and Effect.

Order your Affairs so as not to pass for a crafty Man; the truth is, there is no living now a days without using it; but it's better to be reputed Prudent, than Cunning.

The first Employments are a trial of Worth, and a fetting forth of your Credit and Character o the World; and what you shall strive to do sterwards, scarce makes amends for what you hall have done before.

You must be industrious upon all Occasions to et forth and illustrate your Talent with most Advantage; for concealed Virtue is like a Mine undiscovered.

Make Sail while the Gale blows, follow the current while the Stream is most strong; for if fortune be followed, as the first doth fall out, he rest will follow.

He that cannot endure to strive against the Stream, shall hardly attain the Port which he uposed to recover: There is always a difficulty in Things that tend to Grandeur: He that's afraid of Leaves, let him not enter into the Wood; never leave a String untouched that may make Musick for your Interest and Advantage.

You must be of a sagacious Spirit, for Sagaci ty is an Oracle in Doubts, and a Golden Thread in a Labyrinth.

Quickness of Dispatch in Business is a great ad vantage to your Rifing; for Superiors do not lov to employ those that are too deep, or too suffici ent, but ready and diligent.

The Folly of one Man, is the Fortune of ano ther, and no Man prospers so suddenly as by the errors of others.

It's ordinary for one Man to build his Fortun out of the Ruins of another; when the Tree or the g begins once to fall, every one hastens to gather Sticks.

A Philosopher was asked what was doing it Heaven? Answered, Magna Olla franguntur & e.

frustis earum minores funt.

We see in Nature, the Corruption of on Thing is the Generation of another; and many Men have generated their own Fortunes, by the to reco taxing of the Corruptions of others.

But I cannot approve of the Methods of the Marquess of Pescara, who to advance himself would draw Men into dangerous Practices, and then discover them himself, making other Men forare Offences the first step to his own Greatness.

If you be of Merit and aspire, transplant you felf, for your own Countrey will envy your Ap eminent Qualities; and your Countrey-Mer imes a will better remember the Imperfections you had in the beginning, than the Merit by which you Does advanced; and he will never have great Veneration he Fir on for Tree.

Hom If yo for you

Polture tibi pa dum est pecessa

Grand It's Virtue

> into P Som promo

The ter upo it out ing em

the Sta mongf felfin

with it the rest beak t for the

eft Dig Vizier.

walkin

on for a Statue, who hath feen it the Stump of a to the Tree.

Homini praclaro, vivendum, ubi Princeps vivit.

If you aspire to Advancement, it's not enough Sagaci for you to stand at the Gate of Fortune in a good Poliure, and expect till the opens it; but ut ha ibi pateant fores confidentia & industria pulsaneat ad sum est fortiter: Confidence and Industry are two ot love necessary and useful Engines to mount up to suffici Grandeur.

It's not enough for a Man to have Merit and of and Wittue; but he must know how to bring himself by the into Play.

that's

d that

Advan-

Thread

Sometimes a trivial Action, if dexterously done, ortune momotes a Man more than the most solid Virtue, e Tree or the greatest Merit.

gather The Grand Seignior one Day reading of a Lettrupon a Balcony in his Garden, the Wind blew oing in a out of his Hand; the Pages that attended being emulous to please so great a Prince, ran down the Stairs to setch it up; but one of the Pages aof one mongst the rest, that had practised to support him-lemant alish the Air, threw himself from the Balcony by the o recover the Paper, and suddenly remounting with it, presented it to the Grand Seignior, whilst with it, presented it to the Grand Seignior, whilft of the herest were running down to setch it: This, to imself heak truly, was a raising of himself to Grandeur, es, and for the Prince being wonderfully surprised with Men here an Action, preferr'd the Page to the high-th Dignity, for afterwards he was made Grand to your Vinier.

A pleasant Jest, or an apt Repartee, some-imes advances a Man more than all his Study or ou had virtue.

Chyou Doctor Mountague, Chaplain to King James eneration the First, waiting upon his Majesty, when he was walking in St. James's Park; the King told the Doctor, That he was more troubled how to differ of the Bishoprick of London (being then void than he was of any thing in his Life; for there are many that make for it with so strong an Interest, the I know not, said the King, to whom to give to The Doctor told his Majesty, That if he has Faith, he might easily dispose of it: Do you take no for an Insidel, said the King? No, please your Majesty, said the Doctor; but, I say, if your Majesty, faid the Doctor; but, I say, if your Majesty, said the Doctor; but, I say, if your Majesty had Faith, you might remove this Mountain, (clapping his Hand upon his Breast) into the See; the King was so well pleased with the Pun, that he gave him the Bishoprick.

Some Politick Men have raised themselves. Honour by freeness in opening themselves.

Sigismund of Lunenburgh, King of Bohems being in the Diet in Germany, for the Choice on Emperor after the Death of Robert of Bavari spake the first according to Custom, and declare to them the Qualifications that an Emperor ough to have; How that he ought to be a wise Person, a good Estate to support the Honour, and a Valian Man able to protect them; after he had discourse of these at large, he told them, That he though these Qualifications did not agree better with any Person than himself, and that no Man was more worth of the Empire than himself; the rest of the Elector were so well pleased with his Freedom and Generosity, that they unanimously gave him the Voices, and so he was advanced to the Imperit Dignity.

Honours and Preferments are rarely the Reward of Virtue, but the work of Passion and It terest: Is it not strange to observe a Person raise to the Dignity of a Constable of France, for having toucht Magnies to the Smallower.

taught Magpies to fly at Swallows?

was f Honot nd at but by fit, y II Th Tho Prefer Worth f the ies are Person n Plu ime, 1 And Virtuo own he Wa een fo

To Persor

ime,

The Kingdo
under out Pr Vati
ced; b Rom
Scipio

t last

ed, be above 'Tis tain dr graced

fermer neades to difpo

en void

there a

erest, th

o give i take n

your Ma r Majel

z, (clas

See; th

that b elves

Bohemi

hoice d

Bavaril

declare

or ough

erfon,

Valian

course

though

my Pe

worth lector

nd G

n the nperi

ne Re

ind Ir raise havin

es.

To what Grandeur do you think such another person as Domitian, if he had lived in that Prince's ime, would have advanced himself unto, who was so excellent at catching of Flies? But let sonour be your Merit, not your Expectation; and attain to Preferments not by winding Stairs, subject the Scale of your own Virtues: If you miss if it, you must be content, there is a Reward for I Things but for Virtue.

Though Virtue be a Patent for Honour, and Preferments ought to be an encouragement for Worth; yet it may be observed in the Course of the World, That Men of the greatest Abilities are on Design suppressed; and they deal with Persons of the best Accomplishment, as the Birds a Plutarch did, who beat the Jay, for fear, in me, she might become an Eagle.

And it hath been the unhappy Fate of many Virtuous Persons, like the Axe, after it hath cut lown the hard Timber, to be hang'd up against he Wall unregarded, or like a Top, which hath hen for a long time scourged, and run well, yet task to be lodged up for a Hobbler.

The great Gonsalvo, after he had conquered the lingdom of Naples for Ferdinand of Spain, lived under an Ostracism in his own Countrey, without Preferment or Regard

Vatinius a Person of no moment, was advaned; but Cato, the Glory of his Age, rejected.

Rome's second Founder Camillus was Banished, Scipio that great Scourge of Carthage was distraced, and Coriolanus died in Exile, only Banished, because their Worth and Virtue listed them above the ordinary pitch of Subjects.

'Tis great Pity methinks, thus to see the Curtain drawn between a Virtuous Person and Preferment. So far am I from agreeing with Carmeades, that Injustice is to be preferred before Instice:

Justice; or that it's better to be a Knave than Virtuous Honest Man.

Though I am many times almost of Opinio that it is better to be Fortunate, than Wise or Just and ready to cry out with Brutus.

O Virtus, colui te ut rem, at tu nomen es inane.

Therefore if you design to rise and become great, I would not advise you to accomplist your self over-much, or study to be very Learn ed or Wise; for I have observed that Wisdom many times gives a check to Considence, which is the Scale and Rundle by which many clim up to the Pinnacle; and I find by Experience, the common Heads and narrow Souls, by Industry accompanied with Ambition and Covetousness work Wonders, and do the business of the World.

Sextus Quintus being made Pope, an old Acquaintance of his came to give him a Visit, and to rejoyce with him for his great Advancement but privately between themselves he told his Holiness, That he much admired how he was promoted to that Dignity, to be Head of the Church when he had such mean Parts. Sextus Quintus told him, That if he understood how Folly governed the World, he would not admire that he was made Pope.

It was well observed by the Italian, that there are not two more fortunate Qualifications, that to have somewhat of the Fool, and not too much of the Honest.

Virtue or Merit is no longer in esteem than there is use of it.

But be assured, there is nothing so dangerous and terrible in any State, as a powerful and authorized Ignorance.

Men like litt pear the Men ex Spheres Wisdor

A litte of Virtuover the But Person good fo in an A with In for her. I am mistucles felf to whereo under it Prince not male Heliog though own Vi And the Resolution ons, is self, can why he done in bestow.

If you on of V

Men of weak Abilities set in great Places, are like little Statues set on great Bases, made to appear the less by their Advancement; whereas wise Men exalted, like good Planets in their several Spheres, they carry their Influences of Virtue and Wisdom round about the Kingdom

A little good Fortune is better than a great deal of Virtue; and the least Authority hath advantage over the greatest Wit.

than

pinio

r Just

ne.

com

mpli

earn

ifdor

w hic

clim

, tha

ultry

fness

f th

1 Ac

, an

nent

d hi s pro

urch

intus

vern

mad

ther

than nucl

th an

rous

211-

Vien

But let nothing disquiet you; a Virtuous Person will at one time or another be thought good for something; and a wise Man will once in an Age come in Fashion: Fortune doth reward with Interest those who have the Patience to wait for her.

I am much pleased with the Remarks of Themistucles upon the Athenians, who resembled himself to a Palm Tree, the Leaves and Boughs whereof Men break off in fair Weather, and run under it for Shelter in a Storm.

Princes may beflow Preferments, but they cannot make Mentruly Honourable.

Heliogabalus's Cook was still but a base Fellow, though his Master made him as great as were his own Vices.

And it's sometimes a greater Honour to fail of the Reward of Merit, than to receive it; the Glory and highest Recompence of noble Actions, is to have done them; and Virtue out of it self, can find no Retribution worthy of her.

Cato gloried more in that the People asked why he was not preferred, than he would have done in enjoying the greatest Honours they had to bestow.

If you have gained upon your felf a Reputation of Virtuous, to preserve it and eschew Envy, make a fair Retreat; there is nothing better

ter than a Life retired from daily Conversation, especially of the Multitude.

Fugiat Sapiens commercia vulgi.

The greatest Perfection loses of its Worth, being every Day in fight: Therefore let a win Man take himself to the Sanctuary of an honourable Retreat; for a fair Retreat is as glorious a gallant Cambat.

Solon accounted Tellus the Athenian the most

Lands.

SECT. XXIX.

Of Negotiating. VIIO

IN all Undertakings, first examine your own Strength, the Enterprise next, and thirdly the Person with whom you have to do; take a just measure of your Abilities to person it, and whe ther it holds proportion unto your Designs; and before you Enterprise, consider what the end may be, then what Means and Instruments you have to obtain it.

It's Indiscretion to attempt an Eagles flight with the Wings of a Wren: Consider Quid valeant has meri, quid ferre recusent?

Have a care, lest attempting too high things you catch a Fall, like Thales in Laertius, who contemplating the Stars, fell into a Ditch.

When an Enterprise fails, the Door is open to Contempt.

It's no Prudence to attempt over-hard or extreme Points, but to chuse in your Actions that which is most practicable and passant; this will preserve preserve

When Compared for felling the least be who hat at, 1'ev who und ear up to f Affair Il the E the Envy

In your Undertakense of you let Reason be to : Pro

In you al, let Rins; Mine unfor len mal heir own the right He that furprift Enem Pruden elivered eas a do lew while most pointon indence ise Mai store an aw. T ent all mass, and in fany to If you boon Co

neserve you from a Foil, and increase Reputa-

When you attempt any great Enterprise, take Companion with you, by that means you secure our self against the Evil which may happen, or least bear but part of it; the skilful Physician, sho hath not succeeded in the Cure of his Patint, rever sails to take the Assistance of another, sho under the name of Consultation, helps to ear up the Pall; he that takes the whole conduct shaffairs upon himself alone, attracts to himself the Envy.

In your Undertakings, if you will be successiful, let Reason be the President of all your Actions; Miscarriages are the Effects of Folly: Fools runfortunate, because they never consider; and seem make Fortune greater than she is, and by the own folly increase her Power. Fore-sight the right Eye of Prudence.

ion

W

10.1

Wif

nou

us a mof

Own

the l

OW

v th

jut

whe

and mai

have

with

t hu-

s you

con

en to r ex-

that will ferve

He that forecasts what may happen, shall never surprised; it's too late to begin to arm when Enemy is in our Quarters.

Prudence is the Midwife of all Actions, if well divered; without it they are still-born; it will as a domestick Oracle to you: It's the Ariadne's lew which will guide you thro' the Maanders of emost perplext and intricate Affairs.

Opinion is the guide of Fools, but Reason and modence conduct wise Men: Be like Homer's ise Man who hath his Eyes, a fronte & tergo, fore and behind; Remember Periander's periander's periander. Thought is all in all: Prudence will prent all miscarriages and infelicities in your Actions, and rings the Alarum Bell upon the approach any to make you fly to the Remedy.

boon Courage, for from Diffidence immediatefprings Fear, and Fear banishes Assurance.

Philip

Philip of Spain having designed one for an Ambassador, the Man comes modestly and colditt him, to propose some things to his Majesty, i order to his Embassy; the King said, How can expect that this Man will promote and effect in Business, when he is so fearful and faint in the Socitations of his own? Therefore Considence at Boldness are excellent Engines to effect your Disgns; For by an Essurion of Spirits from you Phansie, you do, as it were, tye and bind his with whom you have to do, to condescend your Desires.

Be not over precipitate in your Designs; gre Designs require great Consideration, and the must have their time of maturing, otherwise the will prove abortive. The Fox reproached the Lioness for her sterility and slowness in Breeding the answered, It's true, I breed slowly, but what bring forth is a Lion.

The Emperor Vespasian did stamp his Co with a Dosphin and an Anchor, with this in pression, Soun enough, if well enough: The Do phin out-strips the Ship then, soon enough: A Anchor stays the Ship, that is well enough.

In all Affairs of Difficulty you must not this to sow and reap at once, but must prepare B finefs, and fo ripen it by degrees.

When you design to act any thing of Concern never blow the Trumpet, that others may taken tice of it.

He that declares himself is obnoxious to Ce sure, and if he succeeds not, becomes ridiculous Secrecy in Business is a great means of obtaining It holds the Minds of Men in suspence, as raises Expectation, which makes every thing be thought a Mystery, and the Secret of that be gets Esteem, and multiplies to Glory.

Cum cun Neve

and just you, eit the succ In all may be

hey fail ho' nev

There et cann at ill it ut ill t

Persons

A Footwise Note to the like me over me to the limit out of the limit of whereby hem.

Poppæ
hat in t
lill mad

the Roma that was trat: Bu than equ

im. In the ways to for that have to c

01 C#

Cum facturus es aliquid, cogita quo in statu eris

Never attempt any thing but what is hopeful and just, for it will be equally troublesome to sou, either not to succeed, or to be assumed of he success.

In all your Affairs chuse your Instruments that may be proper and adapted to the business, and such as are sit for the matter: For be assured if hey fail, the whole Machine of your Enterprise, no never so well concerted, will fall to pieces. There be Persons that can pack the Cards, and recannot play well; some Men are good to A&, nt ill in Counsel; some Men are good to Act, at ill in Counsel; others are good in Counsel, at ill to Act; you must make choice of such Persons as are good in their own Affairs.

A Fool knows more in his own House, than wise Man in another's.

n Am Idiy t

efty,

can ect n

be So

ce an

ur D

1 you

d hi

end

gre

d th e th

d t edin

what

is In

Do

1: 1

thir

e B cer

en

Ce

lou

nin

, at ng

at b

10

Ca

Ilike not the choice of such Instruments as reover-cunning (for they are seldom honest and me to their Trust) which can sound the depth and bottom of the Design; or of those who being out of Employment; can contrive any thing whereby to prejudice the Person who employed them.

Poppeus Sabinus, for four and twenty years (and hat in the Days of the greatest Tyranny) was fill made Ruler over the greatest Provinces of the Roman Empire, not for any excellent Ability hat was in him, Sed quia par negotiis neque supra that: But for that his Sufficiency did no more han equal the Charge which was imposed upon him.

In the management of Affairs it's not safe always to use the same Tools, or the same Conduct, for that being observed by them with whom you have to do, you will assuredly be disappointed in

your your Enterprise: It's easy to shoot a Fowl the slies out-right, but not one that is irregular in i flight.

A cunning Gamester seldom plays the Cambrich his Adversary expects, much less which is desires; yet it's not good to be always upon the Intrigue, or to use too great Artifice, for at second bound you will be discovered: Jealousy upon the watch, there is much skill to guard gainst it.

A wise Man walks not always in the same Wannor keeps always the same Pace, but acts according to the Occurrences of Affairs, and varies a cording to the alteration of Time and Place.

Your Instruments being well chosen, the nesses is to observe that excellent Apothegm of Pitacus xangor yrad, for be assured the right timin of Business, is the Art of Policy; for Affairs depend on many Circumstances, and what hath succeeded at one time, hath been unfortunate at another.

Time is the measure of Business, as Money of Wars: If the Tides and Currents of Occasions be not taken in their due time, they selder succeed, for opportunities admit of no Aster game.

There is nothing which contributes more to the making of our Undertaking prosperous, that the taking of Times and Opportunities; for Times carrieth with it the Seasons and Opportunities Business; if you let them slip, all your Design are render'd unsuccessful; but if they be rightly taken, and followed with diligence, you shall seld dom miss of your purpose.

The State of Venice fent two Ambassadors to the Pope, about some grand Concerns between him and that Republick; the Pope was very ill and kept his Bed; but the Ambassadors much y, it wa bout the mifinfort ive; the ediousne ther An earful the mes, bec eague sho le Pope. ball be g ear your uncture ained the hey coul A wife afions, b If you our, you When on, you s Pulfe, affion, ever fail You m nat under ollo's Spe erstandin ou will d

rve all

ortune.

There

hings, a ece of F

ours of oressed fo

pressed

th in i

Car

ch I n t

at f

1fy rd

Wa

cord s a

ne

F Pi

min

s de

fud

and

ley

ccal

dor

fter

re t

that

Tim es o

fign

ghtli

1 fel

rs to weer

ry ill nuch effed ressed for Audience, and after great Importuni-, it was granted to them; one of the Ambassafors made a very long Harangue to the Pope bout their Concerns, and how his Holiness was minformed, as to the actings of the State of Vein; the Pope was very uneasie, by reason of the diousness of the Oration; but being ended, the ther Ambassador told his Holineis, That he was wful that his Holiness did not fully mind their Bumess, because he was so ill; if he pleased, his Coluque should repeat his Oration over again: Said he Pope, let me know what you will have, and it tall be granted to you, rather than be troubled to ur your long and tedious Oration again. In this inclure and Opportunity the State of Venice fined that from the Pope, which at another time her could never have obtained of him.

A wife Man must not only turn with the Ocissions, but also run with them.

If you will bring your Defigns into a safe Har-our, you must act as the Tide serves.

When you make your Application to any Pern, you must first know his Character, next feel Pulse, and then attack him by his strongest affion, which is his weakest side, and you will ever fail to obtain your Ends.

You must study to be a good Book-man, one at understands Men better than Books; get Alli's Spectacles, Tirefias's bright Lamp of Unenflanding, or the true Candle of Epictetus, and on will discern Men at the first glance, and obwe all their Intrigues and the Traverses of ortune.

There is a great difference betwixt knowing of hings, and knowing of Persons: It's a quaint ece of Philosophy to discern the Minds and Huours of Men; the Knowledge of Persons teaching Men to play their Cards the better, and t perform Business with more Dexterity.

The best expounding of Men, is by their N tures and Ends; the weakest sort of Men are be interpreted by their Natures, the wifest by the Ends.

By trifles are the Qualities of Men as well di covered as by great Actions; because in Matte of Importance, they commonly temporize an strain themselves, but in lesser things they follow the current of their own Natures.

Sermo est Index animi; Speech is the Interpret of the Mind; Words, tho' they be like Water to the Phylician, full of Flattery and Incertaint, vet are they not to be despised, when they a spoken with Passion and Affectation; and a fe words casually offered, are more to be regarde than those of set solemn Speeches, which rath shew Mens Arts than their Natures.

In your Address behave your felf with Pruden (that's the Key to unlock Secrets, and unridd Mysteries) otherwise you will have no good n turn.

He that makes a fair Address, and hath no Prudence for his Conduct, is like a House th hath convenient Entries and Stairs, but never good Room in it.

When an old Acquaintance of Tiberius bega his Address to him, with, You remember Casa No, fays Cafar (cutting him short) I do not r member what I was.

When you address to any Person, fix you Eyes upon his Face and Fashion, it will make great Discovery of the Recesses of his Mind, at be a direction to you in your Business; for as the Tongue speaks to the Ear, so the Gesture to the Eve. Attica for and ag the ance at You nake a apere, f To di nd Cha sa Sec ood Sto Keep nd Will greater

Attica

Vildom ome un ith you lt's no e part is when know. Some] leemed

eal: It

wheed Reafor ill recei lt's a d ell to o tle Hint low hov obe of t e someti utioufly Let you race, (th earts and ve to do id t

N

e be

the

1 di

atte

e an

ollo

pret

Tate

y ar

a fe

arde

rath

dend

ridd

n bo

h no

e th

ever

bega

Cæfar

not r

you

nake

d, an

as th

to th

Attica

aint,

Atticus, before the first interview between Cafar and Cicero, did feriously advise Cicero, touching the composing and ordering of his Countenance and Gesture.

You must learn to fashion your self, and to nake a good Judgment of Occasions. Illud est were, si ubicunque opus sit, animum possis slectere.

To discern Tempers, and to suit the Humour and Character of him with whom you have to do, sa Secret absolutely necessary, but requires a mod Stock of Wisdom.

Keep Formality above-board, but Prudence of Wildom under-deck; for nothing will give greater Remora to your Designs, than to be seemed Wise by them with whom you are to tal: It will beget Jealousies in them, and your Vision will be but an alarm to them, never to ome unprovided when they have any Concerning you.

lt's no small piece of Wit, sometimes to act to part of the Ignorant; and there are occasiis when the best Knowledge is to pretend not know.

Some Persons with a little Compliance are to wheedled; there is nothing to be got of them Reason for having none themselves, they ill receive none from others.

lt's a delicate part of practical Knowledge, ell to observe and guess at the meaning of the the Hints that are given you by the bye, and to sow how to improve them; this is the finest obe of the Recesses of the Heart: But as they e sometimes cunningly given out, so are they uniously to be received.

Let your Applications be made with a Boonrace, (that's a political Magick to charm the earts and Affections of them with whom you we to do) but be not over Ceremonious; it's good

K

good to carry your felf with that Decorum, a spon the gain Respect, but I would not have you pass mission to for a Master of Ceremonies.

If you can handle Men right in their Affec tions and Humours, and know at what times, in what manner, and by what means they may be stirred up, you may rest assured, that beforether beauties. Minds be throughly known, you are alread had for Minds be throughly known, you are alread and for Master of what your Heart desires.

Boccace hath given us a Novel of a covetou and For rich Chuss newly in Office, that had a very sin its living Woman to his Wise, and wanted a fine Horse hat his He had also a delicate Nag in his Eye, that spected wou'd be for his Turn, if he cou'd but have him the last of the Owner of it in a style of Respect, to know har of if he wou'd part with his Horse, and the lower without Price: He did this as the cleanliest way of see his obstiting his Pulse; for who knows, says he to him speciall self, but for my Wise's sake he may make men and that Present of him. The Magnisico's Answer was this Fathis, That the Nag was not to be had for Mo by nothing the person prevailed upon to part with him. When the stor Experience is the story in t prevailed upon to part with him. When the sfor Excame to treat upon Terms, he demanded only My de one half Hour's liberty of speaking to his Wife the fresh and it should be in his Sight too, but out of he tem, an

The Officer struck the Bargain, and so leave told wing the Magnissico in a great Hall, he went usen december to his Wise and told her of the so want greement. The Woman made twenty Excuse by self to but the Husband, in fine, wou'd have it so, an take the so it must be; wherefore come along with mess of the lays he, into the great Hall and give him to some syllable I charge you all answer or Reply. The Husband and the Wing Wish

Articles off to o ook hi His perfuad

m. 2

Affec

es, in ay b e thei

read

etou

. Iorfe

tha

e hin

nt t

knov

owe

men

r W onl

upo

pon this came down together, where the Maga pass mission took the Lady by the Hand, told her the Articles before her Husband, and then led her of to one end of the Hall, while the Husband ook his place out of Hearing at the other.

His Speech ran much upon the charming Beau'ies of his Mistress, the infinite Passion he ad for her, the absolute Power she had over im, and how Ambitious he was to lay his Life nd Fortune at her Feet, the Impossibility of y fine is living without her; and for a Conclusion, hat his Life depended upon the Sentence he now spected to receive from her Mercy and Goodess.

The Magnifico made a short Pause here for ear of his Doom, but after standing at Gaze, ithout one Word in return, he began to suspect f feel his obstinate Silence for a Trick of her Husband's: him becially finding how her Colour went and came. nd that her Pulse seem'd to beat to another Tune. This Fancy put it in his Head, since she wou'd Me hy nothing her self, to play both parts in one, and the opersonate her Answers to his own Questions, the for Example.

My dear Magnifico, says he, every Day gives Wife the fresh Assurances of thy Friendship and Es-of heem, and of that tenderness of Assession which persuade my self thou hast long born me; to persuade my self thou hast long born me; to be ave told thee this sooner, wou'd neither have ent usen decent nor seasonable, and it has not been the so want of good Will neither, that I have kept to be self thus long upon the Reserve. But to hake thee some fort of Amends for the unessithmests of this Delay, I am now to tell thee for thy my someon, that the blessed Hour is at hand that sout all answer all thy Longings, and Crown all will answer all thy Longings, and Crown all will will be so with the sout all answer all thy Longings. take a Journey that will keep him away for som considerable Time; wherefore I wou'd advise thee to watch my Chamber-Window toward the Garden, and whenever thou seest a Crimso Scarf upon the Window, come to the Gate the Night in the dusk of the Evening, and thou shall find me ready to bid thee Welcome. When the Magnisico had gone thus far in the name of the Lady, he closed up the Scene with these see Words; Madam, says he, you have struck me Speechless, and there's nothing more now to be done, but to wait upon your Husband. So foon as the Formality was over, the Hus band called out to the Magnifico. Well, Si favs he, I have done my Part, and do now en pect you shall do yours too, and make goo your Bargain. Pardon me, says t'other, yo promised me I should speak to your Wife, bu I have been talking to an Image; not but the the Horse is at your Service however, thoug I cou'd wish you might rather have had him as Gift, than as a Purchase at so infignificant a rat The Husband valued himself mightily upo the Thought of having out-witted the Magn fico; and fo, without any more ado, he moun ted his Beast and went his way. The lovin Couple were now at Liberty to use their ow Discretion; but as to the Menage of the Signal and the Greetings that followed after, the Hillor is filent.

SECT lefot

leful: He is impoun

and

icies, th

priddle

The V

eceived

cks had

Actic

There

Ian no

ormerl

reece :

ools in

A wit

ourse o

nd Affa

ith grea

ill nev

A Poli

his He

Confid

e the C

At all

ough thakes of inces, and to as eur.

SECT. XXX.

Of the Politick.

THE World every Day puts on new Dresses, and is so disguised in various Shapes of Pocies, that he must be a wise Man that is able to oriddle the Transactions of it.

The Variation of the Latitude of the Maxims excived is so great, that a Scheme of new Policks had need be erected to understand the Sphere f Action.

fom dvif

Ward

mfore the 1 fhal

en th

of the k m tob

Hus

1, Si

w ex

goo, yo

, bu

it tha

houg

n as a rate

upo

Aagni

moun

lovin

row

Signa

Hiftor

EC1

Theregoes more to the making up of one wise Innow a-days, than in ancient time of seven: ormerly there were but seven wise Men in all reece; at present you will hardly find so many bols in a Nation.

A wise Man must therefore learn to cast the purse of Polity into new Moulds, as Fortune at Affairs require; if a Man be accomplished ith great Virtues, yet if he wants Sagacity, he ill never make any Figure in the World.

A Politick, like Sampson, must carry his Strength this Head, not in his Arms.

Confidence, Ambition, and Covetousness, ethe Climax by which he ascends to Gran-

At all Marts of Business, he hath his Factors, ough they do not seem openly to trade: He akes others do his Business, he hath his Exneces, as great Princes cause little ones to do ad to act their Assairs, when they do not know

In all Affairs he makes himself necessary and leful.

He is a conscientious Person, for he always, impounds Conscience with Reason of State.

K 3

He

He is one that is very free in conferring smale Favours and Courtesses, to beget Considence that he may deceive in great Matters.

He makes use of others, as the Fox did of the Cat's Foot to pull the Apple out of the Fire so his own Eating.

Conscience is the Rudder by which he feem to steer his Actions, but he turns it as the Win blows for his most Advantage.

When he hath gotten any Persons into he Net, he doth not presently draw it; but whe they are gotten into the Tunnel, they are then his Mercy.

He thinks it not Prudence to stand so near great Person, as to be oppressed with his Ruin nor so far off, but when his Ruin comes, hera raise himself upon some part of it; therefor like the Crab, he keeps the Door of the Oyster he makes what Advantage he can, when Opportunity serves, and is not nice in taking Advantages.

Interest is that which leads the World in String; he imitates the Hawk which slies high yet will descend to catch its Prey; he draws interest out of that quarter where the Wind blow fairest for Advantage: He hath Briarens's Hand to oppose Designs, as well as Argus's Eyes to p netrate Counsels.

He is an Achitophel for Plotting, as quick fighted as Linceus, as active as Fire, as infinuating as Charisophus; and like the old Woma Ptolemais, never right but when upon some litrigue.

He is continually upon the Design, thinking that something may happen by chance beyon Expectation; the Ape little thought by putill on his Master's Cap, to cure him of a Pleurisy.

dy, he their H

of Go fwell bold as

He i

As f be the

His way to tue; as Honnes

He

ing that and the for the Peru, Breafts Hearts funder.

He I Food f the proher felf Inter himself arrive. He is

Man's make u He t

turn, a procure bring al Imal lence

of th ire fo

feem

Win

to h whe

hen

near

Ruin

heca

refor

yfter

)ppo

dval

d in high

sInte

blow

Hand

to p uick

linu

oma

ne li

nkin

eyon

uttill

ſy.

If at any time he disburses Money for any Body, he uses it as Anglers do their Fish, to bait their Hooks, and catch more.

His Confcience, like Fortunatus's Purse, is full of Gold and Self-ends: That his Nature may swell and look big in the Rolls of Fame, he is hold and daring, and never out of a Plot.

He thinks that Fortunate Wickedness is a Virme, and that a Sin back'd with Success, deserves a Triumph.

As for Just and Unjust, he looks upon them to be the Needle-work of Idle Brains.

His best Apothegm is, He that is in the Highway to Honour, is never out of the Road to Virtue; and well knows, Qui avec le Prosit avec le Honneur.

He condemns the Anatomists for maintaining that there is a Ligament that ties the Tongue and the Heart together; And hath no kindness for the People of Quambaia and other parts of Peru, because they have their Heads in their Breasts, and so their Tongues are too near their Hearts, which he endeavours ever to keep afunder.

He likes not the Jackal, because it provides Food for the Lion; but hath a great regard for the prudent Cat, for that she Mouses only for her self.

Interest is the Card by which he steers, and himself the Harbour to which all his Designs do arrive.

He is like Theramenes's Shoe, fitted for every Man's Foot; like the Spaniel, when he cannot make use of his Teeth, he wags his Tail.

He takes no more of Virtue than serves for his turn, and desires only an Opinion of Honesty to procure him other Men's Faith, the better to bring about his Designs, and deceive them.

K 4 He

He never stands upon those tristing Things Conscience and Honour; for in great Undertakings he thinks there is nothing more unhappy on unprosperous, than a coy and squeamish Conscience.

When he hath any great Design in Projection, the better to essect it, he puts on a religious Dress, and a Countenance with a Godly wry Look, like a Persian Alphabet: This he says, is the best Magnetism to make a strong Verticity to the point of any Design.

He can swallow down Oaths with as much celerity as Lazarillo de Tormes could a Sausage.

He puts on the white Robe of Innocency, the better to conceal the blackness of his Attempts; his Words he puts into a Spiritual Quirpo; and Porteus like, assumes that Shape which is most in Grace, and of most profitable Conducements his Ends.

He makes use of Religion as a Stirrop to get into the Saddle, and so upon the back of Honour.

Hypocrify is the Ground and Basis of his Polity, and to find out Occasions, he thinks, is the knack of Men of Wit.

He is very dextrous at giving out of News, and hath a Mint always about him to coin such as may be current and seasonable to his Ends.

He always carries a Dose of Pillula Aurea about him, for they work safely, and remove all Obstructions; and thinks there is nothing so hard, but that pernicious Metal (Gold) will penetrate; and though upon an Asses Back, it will take the strongest City; and he assures us, That

Destruction surer comes, and rattles lowder, Out of a Mine of Gold, than out of Powder. I have that you Practice > Polin And ty are to ans of.

The marchical under the hey tool Govern n short he Thir hors fo long List ion, an ind had Paradife Thunde

he Rom Capitol Natura

he Sign with it.

loddess lerit o appy.

mong hey can hough

ruit an

ange T

I have

I have given you a prospect of the Politick, that you may know his Principles and abhor the Practice of them.

Politici est virtus maxima, nosse dolos.

nings.

erta-

y or nsci-

tion,

ious. Wry

S, is

y to nuch

the

ipts;

and most ntto

to to

Ho-

Poli-

the

and may æ a-

e all

ard,

ate;

the

have

e.

And that Men of little Honour or Integriy are the fittest Timber to make great Politicians of.

The Trees were so well fatisfy'd with the Moarchical State, both of Birds and Beasts, the one nder the Eagle, the other under the Lion; that hey took up a Resolution of erecting a Kingly Government among themselves. The Question as short was put, and they were unanimously for he Thing; though not above five or fix Compefors for the Choice. The Oak's Pretence was ong Life, the Comfort of its Shade and Protecion, and the Obligation the whole Race of Manind had to it, for feeding their first Parents in Paradise. The Laurel valued it self upon being hunder-proof, and for the Honour of Crowning le Roman Emperors, and those that enter'd the lapitol in Triumph. The Pomgranate claimed Natural Right to a Crown for having brought. le Signature of a Crown into the World along ith it. The Olive's Pretension was, that the lant was a Symbol of Peace, and sacred to the oddels Minerva. The Vine stood upon the lerit of making the Life of Man long and appy. They were thus far very much divided mong themselves where to pitch: But when bey came in the End to cast their Eyes and their houghts upon the Orange, it's perpetual Verure, the incomparable Fragrancy both of itsruit and Flowers, and those Fruit and Flowers ever out of Season too: They chose the Oinge Tree for their King Nemine Contradicente, and:

for he is like Gold, which

Humane Prudence.

and without so much as one Word speaking for himself.

The second add to see a second

Of the Favourite.

IF it be your Fortune to rise and become a Favourite to a great Person, you may have some hopes in Eutopia; for I have heard Men are advanced there for their Merit and Worth.

You must understand there are many Door which open to Preferment, but the Frince keep eth the Keys of them all.

Therefore be fure to study well the Alphabeto his Humour, and observe his Inclinations, as the Astronomers do the Planet Dominant, and the Mariners the North Star.

For great Persons account them the wises Men that can best suit themselves to their Humour and usually they tye their Affections no farthe than their own Satisfaction.

Therefore as Princes have Arts to govern Kingdoms; so Favourites must have Arts, by which they must govern their Prince.

Desire not to monopolize his Ear, for his Mil adventures will be imputed to you; and what well done, will be ascribed to himself.

Too great Services will be over-fights and weakness to you; that Merit to which Reward may easily reach, doth ever best.

To study the Humour of a Prince, may forthe present advance; but to understand the Interest of his Kingdom, is always secure.

great caref

Be all you

In sty Ac Virtu
must s low F

Man thers a five For been in ent Stapear;

proud to be pr

make y Whe

MA Co

tememile expe

a care felf. To be

Courtes ty; For it's Virt He that ferves a Prince's private Interest, is great for a time; but he is always so, who is careful of the publick Good.

Be ready to give an account, if required, of all your Transactions; for he is like Gold, which hath too much Allay, that feareth the Touch.

In all your Deportment be humble, and of eafy Access; a Favourite is like Coin, to which Virtue may give the Stamp, but it's Humility must give the Weight.

A high Fortune, like great Buildings, must have Pride doth ill become any Person; and tho no Man be thereby injured, yet it doth move in others an Offence; for none can indure an excessive Fortune any where so ill as in those who have been in an equal degree to themselves.

You must be Minimus in summo, like the Orient Stars, the higher they are, the less they appear; Honour is bonum sine clavi & sera and some proud of Knowledge, is to be blind with Light; to be proud of Virtue, is to poison your self with the Antidote; to be proud of Authority, is to make your Rise your Downsal.

Where Pride and Presumption go before, Shame and Loss follow after.

A Countrey-man in Spain coming to an Image enfirined, the first making whereof he could well temember, and not finding that respectful usage he expected: You need not (quoth he) be so proud, for we have known you from a Plum-tree: Have a care you do not find the Mythology in your self.

To be humble to Superiors is Duty; to Equals, Courtefy; to Inferiors, Nobleness; to all, Safery; Fortune may begin a Man's Greatness, but it's Virtue that must continue it.

a Fa

fome

re ad

Door

keep bet o

as the

d the Men

nour

arthe

overi

s, by

Mil

hat is

and

ward

or the

refto

Never do that in Prosperity, whereof you may repent in Adversity.

Ever think Goodness the best part of Greatness: When Honour and Virtue are in Conjunction, it's a noble Aspect, and Jupiter is Lord of that Ascent.

But Greatness without Goodness, is like the Colossus of Rhodes, not so much to be admired for its Workmanship, as its huge Bulk; therefore make Goodness like a Diamond set in Gold, a support to Greatness.

Greatness may build the Tomb, but it's Good.

ness must make the Epitaph.

Give Things the right Colour, not varnishing them over with a false Gloss.

A Flatterer is a dangerous Fly in a State, yet they thrive and prosper better than the most worthy and brave Men do.

But I would advise you to have so much of the Persian Religion in you, as to worship the Rising Sun; you must learn to translate into English, Neminem tristem dimittere; and when you cannot give Men Satisfaction in that they desire, entertain them with fair Hopes; Denials must be supplied with civil Usage; and tho' you cannot cure the Sore, yet your Prudence may abate the Sense of it.

If you have any venturous Design in Projection; it's Prudence before you come to Action, sometimes to give Things out on purpose, to see how they will take; by that means you will discover the Inclinations of the People; if it hathno fair Reception, presently check it, and make no farther Progress.

If you defire that the Designs you labour with, may not prove abortive, do not assign them a certain Day of their Birth, but leave them to the natural Productions of sit Time and Occasi-

temper may be If y

ny, be better out fa own I fire at you ha the Gre of oth Strengt

But gainst y sons nore P than by

Flames

Grav
But Libels
to fear

nothing

And bels an unhappy Ruin an You ind if a mid Modern to will be others to f you limb u ons; like those curious Artists in China, who emper the Mold this Day, of which a Vessel may be made a Hundred Years hence.

If you have Enemies, as you may expect many, being great in your Master's Favour, the better to establish your self, is privately to give out false Libels and Reports, tending to your own Difgrace; your Enemies like Powder, will fre at the first touch, and then you know what nou have to do; and to deal plainly with you, he Greatness of one Man is nothing but the Ruin of others; and their Weakness will be your Strength.

But if any Pasquils or Libels shall be vented aainst you by others (as the most excellent Perons many times are infested with them) it's nore Prudence to bury them in their own Ashes. han by confuting of them, to give them new lames; for Libels neglected will presently find Grave.

may eat-

inc-

d of

the

for

fore

, a od-

ning

yet

PIO.V

h of the.

into hen

denials

you

y a-

ecti-

ion,

cafions;

But let me tell you, as false Rumours and libels are not always to be credited, so are they not always to be neglected; it being no less vain o fear all things, than dangerous to doubt of nothing.

And we have learned by Experience, that Liels and Pasquils (the only Weapons of some inhappy Persons) have been forerunners of the Ruin and Destruction of the bravest Men.

you must be careful to keep an Ephemerides, will know how the great Orbs of the Court move; hath and if any new Star shall arise out of the East, make and Men begin to worship it, you must study ither to eclipse or suppress it; therefore it with, will be Prudence to cut off all Steps by which others may ascend to Height or Grandeur; for the you leave any Stairs standing, others will limb up.

And.

And I must tell you, it's more safe at Cour to have many Enemies of equal Power, than on false and ambitious Friend, who hath absolut oned and pur cone Command.

But in case any shall get up, you must by you Sagacity, remove him out of the way, under pre tence of some honourable Employment, or o therwise; when that is done, you know how Augustus Cafer dealt with Mark Anthony, when he got him from Rome into Egypt. 08 Alsw 6093

It hath been the Practice of some, like the Fox, to thrust out the Badger that digged and made room for him; but this must be lefter your Discretion.

In all Business ever pretend the publick Good that will make you popular, and fo you may with more Safety and Security drive on you private Interest; and let me advise you to be so faithful a Servant to your Master, that whatso ever you do your felf, you suffer not others to oact; but eve deceive him.

Make the Royal Interest and your own one incorporate your Favour with the Authority of the Sovereign; so you cannot be offended, but the other will be troubled.

baffle your line Study what you can to partake of his Bounty the more you obtain from him, the greater is your Security; for he will look upon you as his Creature, and by him raised, and so will endeavour to preserve you; but if you propose any thing, which you are afraid will hardly be accepted, or granted; offer it by Pancels, that one Piece may be digested before the other be presented. the of your Kention

In all your Negotiations, you must have an indiscernible way of Intelligence, as Angels have of Communication: Gyge's Ring will be of great Use unto you; for he observeth best, who is least And observed himself.

An Trut this m oned : fill h taking it v cils, a in du ceed 1 stion; fubie &

> But dom 1 lawfu what

But in great

your c

Adı have t In c to act tain.

In c vided baffle and yo

If b use Ar Sepient a Tou stone t

I ha should nity of Pru defensi may m other c Cour an one of olur one oy you or pre or o when

ke the ed and left to

Good may you be fo

hatfo ers to one ity of but

unty; ter is ts his ndeaeract that rubb

e an have great

least And And if you design your own Sasety, speak Truth; else you will never be believed, and by this means your Truth will secure you, if questioned; and put those you deal with, (who will still hunt-counter) to great loss in all Undertakings.

It will be Prudence in you to oppose in Councils, all Resolutions as to Business of importance in dubious Matters; if the Thing designed succeed well, your Advice will never come in question; if ill (whereunto great Undertakings are subject) you may make Advantage by remembring your own Council.

But in great Concerns, it will be your Wifdom not to rest in the dull Councils of what is lawful, but to proceed to quick Resolutions of what is safe.

Admit none to be of your Cabal, but such as have their Fortunes solely depending upon you.

In dangerous Attempts, put others before you to act; but ever keep your felf behind the Curtain.

In doubtful Matters you must be always provided with some cunning Stratagems, either to basse your Enemies, or else to secure your self and your Party.

If by Wisdom you cannot attain your end, use Argentea Tela, they never fail, for Virtutem & Sepientiam vincunt Testudines: And as Men have a Touchstone to try Gold, so Gold is the Touchstone to try Men.

I have hinted these unto you, not that you hould act any thing against Honour, or the Dignity of your Religion.

Prudence is an Armory, wherein are as well defensive as offensive Weapons, the first you may make use of upon all Occasions, but of the other only upon Necessity.

6

We

We know that the Apocrypha is allowed to be digested into one Volume with the sacred Word, and read together with it; but where it thwarts that which is canonical; it's to be laid aside.

Polity and Religion, as they do well together, fo they do as ill afunder; the one being too cunning to be good, the other too simple to be false; therefore some sew Scruples of the Wisdom of the Serpent, mixt with the Innocence of the Dove, will be an excellent Ingredient in all your Actions.

SECT. XXXII.

The Sun of Honour in the West.

BUT I have blotted too much Paper; and I must with Apelles, Manum de Tabula; if you are mounted on the Pyramid of Honour you must know it hath but one Point, and the least slip may hazard your Fall.

If you should chance to lose your self in the Empire of Greatness, return to your own Solitudes and Privacy, and there you may find your felf again.

Let no Condition surprise you, and then you cannot be afflicted in any: A noble Spirit must not vary with his Fortune, there is no Condition so low, but may have Hopes; nor any so high, that is out of the reach of Fears.

In your worst Estate hope, in the best sear; but in all be circumspect; Man is a Watch, which must be looked to, and wound up every Day.

It no appose Childre Tho your S and that out of he force It's hope, han de

That France, sold his me of able of able of nswere he Poin

owed Brave ot disp

aid un vonder

Suffer infelicition and trium Misform the trium was to the contract of the con ourage ty his (

d to

acred

re it

laid.

ther,

cun-

alfe;

m of f the

your

nd I

you must

may

the Soliyour

you must

tion

righ,

ear;

tch,

very

It

ot dispirit.

It no less becometh the worthiest Persons to appose Missortunes, than it doth the weakest Children to bewail them.

Though you lose all, yet you may still possess, our Soul in Patience; this is your last reserve, and that strong Hold, whereunto he who is beaten out of the Field, may always retire, and cannot be forced out of it, but by surrendring it.

It's the Temper of a brave Soul, always to tope, Advertities are born with greater Glory, than deferted; for such are the Comforts of unappy Virtues and innocent Souls.

That Miracle of Valour, the then Dauphin of France, and after Charles the Seventh, when they old him of that Sentence which was extorted from the Parliament of Paris by the two Kings, me of France his Father, the other of England is Enemy, whereby he was declared uncamble of succeeding to the Crown of Lillies; he will undauntedly, That he appealed; his Friends wondering at his Speech, asked him whither; he asked again, To the Greatness of my Heart, and he Point of my Sword; and his Words were followed with answerable Effects.

Brave Soul! whom the loss of a Crown could Impavidum feriunt ruinæ.

Suffering is the stay to Preferment, and great melicities usher us into Glory, if by Patience we at triumph over our Calamities.

Misfortunes are troublesome at first, but then there's no Remedy but Patience, Custom takes them easie to us, and Necessity gives us lourage.

It was a rare Temper of Eumenes, whose ourage no Adversity ever lessened, nor Prospetyhis Circumspection; one Month in the School of Affliction, will teach you more Wisdom, than the grave Precepts of Aristotle in seven Years; for you can never judge rightly of humane Affairs, unless you have first felt the Blows and Deceits of Fortune.

I am not (I bless my Stars) disturbed at any thing, neither doth Passion disquiet me: I hate nothing, except it be Hatred it self; and I am no more troubled for the Want of any thing I have not, than I am because I am not the Sophy of Persia, or the Grand Signior: He is a happy Man that can have what he will, and that I profess my self to be, because I will nothing but that I can have.

I am much delighted with the pleasant Humour of Thrasalus, and can, in my own Conceit make my felf as rich as the Indies.

I am a little World, and enjoy all Thing within my own Sphere: Honour and Riches which others do aspire unto; I do now posses and enjoy them in my self: Health is the temperate Zone of my Life, and my Mind is the third Region in me; there I have an intellectual Globe, wherein all Things subsist, and move according to my own Ideas.

The Stars, tho' glorious and splendid Bodies yet I look upon them but as Spangles, which a best do but embroider the outside of that Canopy whereupon I my felf am to tread.

Many times I raise my Spirits to so generou a Pitch, that I think Heaven it self not too high for me: I can grasp in one Thought all that Glob for which ambitious Men fight.

I account nothing more noble than my Soul except the Almighty God, whose Off-spring is; I never stain it with that Earth or Metal, which others are ambitious to get; for my Soul dot shew by desiring more, how unsatisfactory all extrinsick Objects are.

fider the hath of come to which known

Dot

fubject lous the disturbe

I mu and the that hap which i

How
na; for greatest ring of Martyre

Adve willing ings are

That ment, 1 no more need more need

A br Croffes and star him; for and we on; and

If I m sperity, the latt patience

Doth any Man rob you of your Goods? Confider that God, by that Man, takes back what he hath only lent you; the Thing you foresaw is come to pass; and what amazes you? The Thing which hath happened, you have often seen and known.

All things by Nature, in the Universe, are subject to Alteration and Change: How ridiculous then is it, when any thing doth happen, to be disturbed, or wonder as if some strange Thing had happen'd?

than

ears; fairs.

ceits

t any hate

n no

have

TY O

Mar

ofes

hat I

Hu

ceit

hing

ches

offell

tem

the ctua

e ac

dies ch a ору

rou

hig

lob

oul

ig i

hic

dot

ex

201

I must own my self as a Part of the Universe, and therefore cannot be displeased with any thing that happens to my particular Share; for nothing which is good to the whole, can be hurtful to that which is part of it.

However, Innocens sit Animus in irata Fortuna; for virtuous Persons, like the Sun, appear greatest at their setting, and the Patient enduning of a necessary Evil, is next unto a voluntary Martyrdom.

Adversity overcome, is the highest Glory; and willingly undergone, the greatest Virtue; Sufferings are but the Trial of gallant Spirits.

That brave Aristides being sentenced to Banishment, said no more but this, I wish my Countrey no more barm, than that they may never have any more need of Aristides.

A brave Soul must not yield himself up to Crosses and Disasters, but make good his Ground, and stand firm against any Accident that can befal him; for 'tis but the breaking of the first Shock, and we shall find the rest but Fancy and Opinion; and let him complain what he will, his Impatience is the greater Mischief of the two.

If I must make choice either of continual Prosperity, or continual Adversity, I would chuse the latter; for in Adversity no good Man can'

want

want Comfort, whereas in Prosperity most Men want Discretion.

Things below, as they merit not my Affection when I enjoy them, so they never vex or afflict me when I lose them.

Fean call nothing my own, but my Sins.

Calamities, if prosperously overcome, are like those Winds, which if they do not throw down, do advantage Trees, by shaking them to a greater fastness at the Root.

That which is future or past, cannot hurt you, but only that which is present; and cannot your Patience hold out one Instant?

If you consider you are a Man, your Missortune will not seem new unto you; if you rested on the Inselicities which happen to others, your own will seem but light to you.

If thou art disquieted at any thing, consider with thy self, is the thing of that worth, that sor it I should so disturb my felf, and lose my Peace and Tranquillity?

Have you lost your Dignities? You have not lost them, but surrender'd them; they are the Favours of Fortune, rarely the Characters of Merit; they have no Goodness in them, but what he stamps on them that doth enjoy them: If he be not Good; they are not Dignities, but Indignities: It cannot be said that a Man lost his Dignities, but that they lost him that gave them that Denomination, and made them Dignities, Confider things really as they are, and you can never be troubled for any of them: If you have a Glass, esteem it as a Glass, and that it may be broken, and then you will never be angry when it is broken.

As there is no Gain upon Earth, without some Loss; so there is no Loss without some Gain;

if thou Trouble
nour?
Envy;
you thal

The wracked subject your Pr may sec from the

I hon Dictato Bravery

I have toous F Fortune Whe vours, continu draws i not far

Etic

And Favour
in your how to Throne
thing b

your I you m Count and de Dials, Majett If thou hast lost thy Wealth, thou hast lost some Trouble with it: Art thou degraded from thy Honour? Thou art likewise free from the stroke of Envy; set the Allowance against the Loss, and you shall find no great Loss.

The World is a Sea, where some Men are wracked; but all are tossed with Winds, and subject to the agitation of the Waves; let it be your Prudence to gain such a safe Port, which may secure you from the one, and preserve you from the other.

Ien

cli-

Or

like

wn,

ater

you.

our

for-flea

nuov

fiden

t for eace

not

s of

but em:

but loft

gave

Dig-

can

y be

hen

ome ain;

I honour the Gallantry of Camillus, whom the Dictatorship did not elevate, nor Exile abate the Bravery of his Spirit.

I have many times observed, that the most virmous Persons are not the greatest Favourites of Fortune.

When Fortune is most Prodigal of her Fayours, for the most part she intends no long continuance; and Felicity that is grown old, draws near an end, and extream ill Fortune is not far from a Reverse.

Etiam Mala Fortuna suas habet levitates

And though you are fallen from your Prince's Favour, yet you may be a Rex Stoicus, a King in your own Microcosin; and he who knoweth how to rule that well, may despise a Crown: Thrones are but uneasy Seats, and Crowns nothing but splendid Miseries.

The change of your Fortune may diminish your Hopes, but it will encrease your quiet; you must understand that Favourites are but as Counters in the Hands of Great Persons, raised and depressed in valuation at Pleasure; and like Dials, they are not looked on, when the Sun of Majesty is off of them.

There

There is no Constancy either in the Favour of Fortune, or in the Affection of great Persons, so that no wise Man can trust the one, or depend safely upon the other.

To be without an Estate, and not to want; to want, and not to desire; to take the changes of the World, without any change in a Man's self, are excellent Qualifications, of which you must study to be Master: You are a Ball; what is a Ball the better, if the Motion of it be upwards, or the worse, if it be downwards, or if it chance to fall upon the Ground?

But whatsoever the Traverses of Fortune are, let no Discontent surprize you; if the thing be within your Power, manage it to your Content; if not, it's weakness in you to be disquieted.

Make your best of everything, or at the worst, you may yet mend it and think it best; However it will be Piety in you, to submit to Divine Providence.

I always strike Sail to Divine Providence; such Things as happen to me, and not by me, I adore, not censure: For there God's Wisdom hath a greater store and share, where mine hath the less.

He is truly wise, who can endure Evil, and enjoy Good.

An humble Soul, like a white Sheet, must be prepared to receive that which the Hand of Heaven thall imprint upon it.

Never antedate your own Misfortune; for many times Men make themselves more miserable than indeed they are; and the Apprehension of Inselicity doth more afflict them, than the inselicity it self.

Amongst the various Accidents of Life, I list up my Eves to Heaven, when the Earth affords me no Relief; I have recourse to a higher and greater own.

All A come, fance a tremitie on of the

I never cause he what is felf.

felf.
Difco
nerous
on its U

I wou when the Hope Misfort lent mea

you are go not done, it have bee

If yo more G Evil tha Meas World, ter, loo than ba not fear acquain have live fo foon er and gedy is ur of

pend

ant

nges

lan's you

what upor i

are,

ent;

orft,

ever

Pro-

ice;

e, I dom

hath

and

t be lea-

for era-

ion

Inlift

rds

and

ater

greater Nature, when I find the Frailty of my own.

All Afflictions and Calamities are to me welcome, for I never feel more the Divine Affifance and Comfort, than in my greatest Extremities; and because I am under the Protection of the Almighty, I take but little care of my self.

Inever beg of God but general Bleffings, because he, in his Divine Wisdom, knows better what is good for me in particular, than I my self.

Discontent is the greatest Weakness of a generous Soul; for many times it's so intent upon its Unhappiness, that it forgets its Remedies.

I would not have you disordered within you, when there are so many things out of order with-

Hope will be your best Antidote against all Missortune, and God's Omnipotency an excellent means to fix your Soul.

If you be not so happy as you desire, it's well you are not so miserable as you deserve; if things so not so well as you would they should have done, it's well they are not so ill as they might have been.

If you feriously consider, you have received more Good than you have done, and done more Evil than you have suffered.

Measure not Life by the Enjoyment of this World, but by the Preparation it makes for a better, looking forward what you shall be, rather than backward what you have been; you need not fear Death, the last change, who hath been acquainted with a Life so full of change; if you have lived well, you have lived long enough; so soon as Death enters upon the Stage, the Tragedy is done; believe me, he that anchoreth one Thought

Thought upon any thing on this side Heaven, w be fure to be a loser in the end.

There is nothing can render the Thoughts this Life tolerable, but the Expectation of at ther. I would not defire to live a Moment, I thought I was not to live again.

My Life is full of Misery, and I have but few Days to live: Happy Miseries that end Joy; Happy Joys that have no end; Happy E that ends in Eternity.

To ferve God, and keep his Commandment is the only Wisdom; and will at last, when account of the World shall be cast up, be four to be the best Preferment and highest Happines And so farewel. Remember your Mortalis and Eternal Life.

An Elephant that was marching at the He of his Troops towards the Execution of for great Defign, met a Doe upon the Way, at invited her into the Park, the Doe promifi at first Word to make one of the Party; the Elephant in the mean while enlarging himse upon the Honour of the Enterprize. In th interim a Weazle croffed the Way upon their and the Doe took such a Fright upon't, that the whole Earth could not make her fland he Ground. The Elephant asked her if she was not ashamed to run away from so pitiful a Cre ture. No, fays the Doe, 'tis not the Beaft dread, but the Presage which our Family h many times found the Mischief of to our Cos The Elephant made Sport with the Fancy, an laid it home to the Doe, that fhe was prevaile with to follow him yet once again: By th time they were advanced a hundred Paces upo the Way, they heard the Crowing of a Coc from the next Village, and the Cock wa worse to the Doe then the Weazle; so she wen directly loved loved for n ime for any it might a Coc m I of an it me El d hin mean conful

f Spin

hts o ano

nt,

but nd i

y End

nents

en th

found

inels

ality

Head

nifing ; th msel thi hem at the he Was Creaeaft 1 y has Coff. and ailed the upon

Cock was went ectly

edly to the Elephant, and charged him as he ed his Life, not to advance one step farther. never any body heard a Cock crow at that e of the Day, and pursued his Journey, but ne dismal Calamity befel him. If this, says had befallen a Lion, as it did an Elephant any of that Race which is afraid of Cocks. might have foreboded fomething; but what's lock, I pray, either to thee or me? Neither I of the temper to abandon a glorious Defign an imaginary Hazard. Upon these Words Elephant marched up to the Enemy, charghim and gained his Point; the Doe in the an while slinking behind the Bushes, in a fusion at the Thought of her own meanness Spirit.

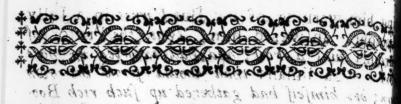

L

Sen-

A ire

. 1crs

Sententia Stellares:

OR,

MAXIMS of PRUDENCE

To be observed by

Artisans of State.

HAT Government is best tempered where a few Drams of Fear are blend ed with the People's Love

2. It's the Interest of Princes to make Acts Grace peculiarly their own; because they which have the Art to please People, have commonly the power to raise them.

Mark W

3. A Multitude of Offices are dangerous to Prince, and serve for nothing but to rifle his tep out to Purse; and the fuller they fill their Coffers, the sected.

more facile is their Justification when question 7. Sects ed: When Verres was Prater of Sicily, he having ove with wonderful Corruption pillaged that Protes with vince; and at the same time the Prætor of Same, there dinia, being sentenced for depeculating and rot opped, being that Province; Timarchides Verres his Con any, or respondent at Rome, writ a Letter to him, go 8. He was a letter to him, go 8. eid to the france to see I noce. for the immode-

Silte

ing h Humo Sardini iom th urn; b bereof. lind th Hence eguilty ies amo

all be 4. Re nce M owerfu ftheir inion c 5. A ary to eople, objects, rince: e Heart il of n Vorld, 1

6. Tha by thing bjects, ing him warning of it: But Verres in a Jolly lumour, answered him, That the Prætor of ardinia was a Fool, and had extorted no more on the Sardinians than would serve his own un; but himself had gathered up such rich Boous amongst the Sicilians, that the very Overplus breef would dazle the Eyes of the Senate, and and them so, that they should not see his Faults: lence we may conclude, that just Men must eguilty, because they were Fools, and others A Religion is the only Old Were Knaves.

4. Religion is the only Orb which doth influace Men's Minds; and except the Prince be owerful over their Religion, (which is the Bond their Affection) he will have but a weak Doinion over their Persons.

s. A Prince that runs on any Defign, conary to the general Humour and Spirit of the cople, may indeed make his Ministers great thjects, but they can never make him a great ince: Whereas a Prince that doth act with eHearts and Interest of his People, can never Aso of making what Figure he pleafes in the which forld, nor of being fafe and eafy at home.

6. That Prince which raifes an Army to effect ything against the Bent and Inclinations of his bjects, is like him who raised an Army to ep out the Plague, when the Army it felf was fected.

ered olend

aly th

is to fle hi

s, th

7. Sects in their first rise are to be nipped: but he had ing over-grown, it's Wisdom not to oppose in the property of the sem with too strong a Hand, lest in suppressing of San he, there raise many: A soft Current is soon opped, but a strong Stream resisted breaks into any, or overwhelms all.

8. He who putteth off his Hat to the People, and will see his Head to the Prince; for the immoderate Favour of the Multitude, as it can do Man no good, so it will undo so many as sha trust to it: It was said of the Earl of Est. that be was grown so popular, that he was to dangerous for the Times, and the Times fo him.

o. If any Person begins to be aspiring, it Prudence in the Prince to deal with him as th Birds did, who beat the Cuckow, for fear h should become a Hawk.

10. It may sometime be the Interest of a Prince not only to remove Grievances by doing what defired, but even Jealousies by doing somethin which is not expected; for when a Prince doe more than his People look for, he gives the Object of reason to believe that he is not forry for doing wh they defired.

11. Transcendent Services and too great Be nefits from Subjects to Kings, are of dangerou be of Consequence, when they make the mind mor states a capable of Merit than Duty.

12. A Parliament is the truest Glass, whereight let a Prince may discern his People's Love and hours so own Happiness.

13. Too great Severity in the Laws, feldon does good: for many times the common Gui and toge makes the Penalties impracticable.

14. If Affection lead you to Court, take can be that Interest keep you there; for when it's one distance past Noon with a Favourite, it's presently Night 24. A with him; the good Fortune of the Court hath a hath sew sure Friends, but the ill Fortune of the court hath none.

and they seldom part without much Envy martly who never are farther asunder than when the asmuce meet.

16 i's mo hazard 17.

Nation State, 1 of it. 18. 7 when P re unfo

19. F Il Chri libtle at 20. N ich in 7 boolute 21. T

nd a

off. 22. A 23. P

alour.

he other

16 All States stand more by Fame than Force: is most safe neither to discover Weakness nor hazard Loss by attempt.

17. What is the great humour and bent of a Nation, ought ever to be much confidered by a State, which can hardly miscarry in the pursuit of it.

1 do

s shall

Effer

as to ies fo

g, it

as th

ear h

Princ

vhat i ethin

e doe

ther

at Be nd h eldor

Gui

State

Envy n the

6. Al

18. Two Things break Treaties; Jealousies when Princes are successful, and fear when they re unfortunate.

19. Rigor in matter of Religion, seldom makes Christians better, but many times makes them libtle and reserved Hypocrites.

20. Money is the Sinews of War, and the Object of Men's Affections; that Prince who is g who lich in Treasure, becomes puissant in the one, and bsolute Master of the other.

21. There are some Evils in a State that cangerou on be conveniently remedied; the Maladies of more hates are incurable when they are inveterate: nd a Cachectical or ill-affected Body is bethereight let alone in Repose, than to have the Hunours stirred by Physick that cannot carry them off.

22. A Prince's Fortune, and a Favourite's Faith, nd together.

23. Polity at home, and Intelligence abroad s one of State turns.
A Prince te the two Poles upon which every well govern-

Night 24. A Prince ought more to real the Counter that hadvanced, than those he hath oppressed; the office of the one hath the means to do mischief, but he other hath not the Power.

25. A wise Prince doth strike his Enemies more martly with the Head, than with the Hand, and asmuch to be feared for his Prudence as for his-lalour.

L 3

26. Ta

26. In civil Tumults an advised Patience an Opportunity well taken, are the only We pons of Advantage.

27. It's Wisdom in a Prince to shew himse absolute in his Authority first, and them indulger in his Nature.

When Antigonus was asked, Why in his of Age his Government was so mild and easy: his merly (said he) I sought for Power, but now follows and good Will.

28. Taxes and Impositions ought to be in State, as Sails in a Ship; not to charge and over lade it, but to conduct and affure it.

When Antigonus exacted Money severely, on told him, Alexander did not do so: It may be selected he Alexander reaped Asia, and I do be glean after him.

29. When a Prince seeks the Love of his Su jects, he shall find in them enough of Fea But when he seeks their Fear, he loses the Love.

quered a Countrey, it's Prudence in him to carry himself graciously towards the conquered and to give the Noble Men great Titles of Honour, but little Power; to administer Justice to the P care C volt:

by C was a quered risons called while.

the R There in Re gently when up too 32.

33. his Ha

with not t it; bu from ness f resolv five v Delay feet, France and air with the with the second seco

35 giving

latisfi

36. is eve

nce an

y. We himse

dulger

his of

y: 10

now f

be in deve

y, or

y be

do bi

is Sul

Fear s the late h

ore l

name

an I

cesso nt So

aske

whe lif h e W

COL

o ca

rered

of Ho

icet

th

fide.

the People in general, and to have a special care of laying too great Taxes for sear of a Revolt: These Politicks were unhappily observed by Charles VIII. after he had Naples, which was a cause of its Revolt: After Philip had Conquered Greece, some advised him to place Garrisons in the Cities: No, said he, I had rather be called Merciful a great while, than Lord a little while.

32. Force doth rather fortify than change the Resolution of Man in matters of Religion: Therefore nothing ought to be done violently in Resormation; the Strings must be wound up gently; the Musick sounds a great deal sweeter when they are loose, than when they are strain'd up too hard.

33. That Prince who will keep his Crown on his Head, must be sure to keep his Sword by his

34. Denials from Princes must be softued with gracious Usage, so that, though they cure not the Sore, yet they may abate the Sense of it; but best it is that all Favours come directly from themselves, Denials and things of bitterness from their Ministers: Therefore if a Prince resolve not to answer a Request, the least offensive way is, not to use direct Denial, but by Delays prolong the time; and so instead of effect, minister matter of hope. Henry IV. of France was so Courteous, that when he would not answer a Petitioner, he always so obliged him with some good Word, that he went away satisfied.

35. The more a Prince weakeneth himself by giving, the poorer he is of Friends.

36. Equal Authority with the same power, is ever fatal to all great Actions; and therefore L 4 one one wife General, having but a thousand Men, is more to be feared, than twenty of equal Authority; for they are commonly of divers Humours, and judging diversly, do rarely what is to be done, and lose time before Resolutions can be taken.

37. Reward and Punishment justly laid, do ballance Government; but it much concerns a Prince, that the Hand be equal that holds the Scale; therefore if any Subject doth deserve never so highly of his Prince, if he becomes afterwards a Malefactor, he must be made an Example of Justice, without regard of his former Merit. Manlius Capitolinus, though by Valour he had delivered the Capitol of Rome from the French, who beleager'd it; yet afterwards growing Seditious, was thrown down from the Capitol, which by his great Renown he had formerly delivered.

38. The Prince who screws up the Pins of Power too high, will break the Strings of the Commonwealth. Wise Princes make use of the Prerogative, as God Almighty doth of his Om.

potency, upon extraordinary Occasions.

39. The Prince is the Pilot of the Commonwealth, the Laws are the Compass.

40. Reversionary Grants of Places of Profit, and Honour by Princes, are the bane and ruin of Industry; but Acts of Grace and Bounty, are the Golden Spurs to virtuous and generous Spirits.

Anvil of his own Brain, is in danger to have the Sparks fly in his own Face.

42. A Kingdom is like a Ship at Sea, whose Ballast should be the Princes Coffers; which if they be light and empty, she doth nought but tumble direct terest all E sound of the is like roast 1

44.

of M ty: V Bound
the was ing to of oth decline

45. fall up to pref Maleiunt

hour I way o mards their A cass it uing with the Six Princes 47. home, 48.

his De

ture, a

numble up and down, nor can be made to run a direct and steady Course; therefore it's the Interest of Princes to have a good Treasure against all Extremities; for empty Coffers give an ill sound.

43. That Prince who, upon every Commotion of the Subject, rushes presently into open War; is like him, who sets his own House on Fire to roaft his Eggs.

Jen,

Au-

Hu-

at is can ns a

the ne-

af-

Ex-

mer

lour

1 the

ow-

Ca-

for-

s of

the

th

n.

non-

ofit,

ruin

nty,

rous

the

e the hose

ch if

but mble 44. That State which goeth out of the Lists of Mediocrity, passeth also the limits of Sasety: While Sparta kept her self within those Boundaries that Lycurgus presented unto her, she was both sase and flourishing; but attempting to enlarge her Territories by new Acquests of other Cities in Greece and Asia, she every Day declined.

45. Rather than the least dishonour should fall upon the Stage, it's Prudence sometimes to preserve the Honour of the Publick, to cast the Male-Administration upon some Favourite or simplessor, and offer him a sacrifice to Justice.

46. Charles the Fifth, laid the loss and dishonour he received in the Invasion of France, by way of Province, to Anthony de Leva. The Spaniards to cover the Dishonour they received in their Attempt against England in Eighty Eight, cast it upon the Duke of Parma, in his not joyning with them in convenient time. So did Charles the Sixth of France, upon the Duke of Berry, in his Design of invading England, as many wise Princes and States had formerly done.

47. Reputation abroad, and Reverence at some, are the Pillars of Safety and Sovereignty.

48. Frames of Policy as well as works of Nature, are best preserved from the same grounds they were first sounded on.

L.S.

49, Tha:

149. The Ministers of Princes must be pares Negotiis, sit for their Business, and not supra, above it, or too able for it; for another Man's too much Sufficiency (as they think) is a diminution of their Respect, and therefore dangerous.

50. Taxes which the Sovereign levies from the Subject are as Vapors which the Sun exhales from the Earth, which doth return them again in fruitful Showers.

Spleen in a Body natural, which swells so big, as makes all other Parts of the Body lean; theretore some sober Persons have conceived, that it's more Prudence to have three Cities of equal Power, that in case one should rebel, the other two might balance or give Law to the third. A great City is the sittest Engine to turn an old Monarchy into a new Commonwealth.

52. The State which doth not subsist in Fidelity, can never continue long in Potency.

53. Wise Princes must sometimes deal with inutinous Subjects as the Sun, did to take away the Passenger's Cloak, not as the russing Winds, to blow him down.

poverish a Prince, than Impress of Money at great interest; for thereby a Prince is brought to one of these two Extremities, either to overthrow his Demesses and Finances, whereof the French Kings are Examples; or else to turn Bankrupt and pay none, as King Philip of Spain hath done to the Merchants of Genoa, Florence, Ausburg, and almost to all the Banks in Christendom.

55. A destructive Peace, and an unsuccessful

War, are both fatal in the Issue.

56. In mu wil ed a leaft

: 3

cn a

to d beco denc temp to qu

which ing or remotime.

being fome, once whom ing fi Accul Extort where reason Male-medy to of Par the for cessary

must steer their Course; therefore a wise State will always be found in its Interest.

57. A Prince is never feared abroad, or honoured at home, that hath not levied an Army, or at least made all the Preparations requisite to carry en a War.

ares

ra;

an's

mi-

ige-

rom

ales

n in bad

big,

ere-

that

f e-

the

the

non-

ide-

with

Way

inds.

im-

ey at ught

0 0 ercol

turn

p of Flo-

ks in (sfu

s. In

58. The Sword is the last Reason of Kings; and if it be not the best, yet certainly the best able to defend them.

becomes formidable, it's many times more Prudence to temporize with it, than by force to attempt the Redress of it; for they who go about to quench it kindle it the more, and suddenly pluck down that Mischief upon their Heads, which was then but feared from them, by courting or dissembling the Mischief; if it doth not remove the Evil, at least it's put off for a long time.

60. Charles the Fifth (even he who was Sirnamed the Wise,) of France, at such time as he was Regent in France, his Father at that time being a Prisoner in England, by evil Counsel of some, being ignorant in Matters of State, at once suspended all the Officers of France, of whom he suppressed the greatest Part, appointing fifty Commissioners for the hearing such Accusations as should be laid against them for Extortion and Bribery by them committed; whereupon all France was in such a Tumult (by reason of the great Number of such as were Male-contents,) as that shortly after, for Remedy thereof, he, by Decree in the high Court of Parliament in Paris, was forced to abrogate the former Law.

61. It's a noble Ambition, and absolutely necellary for a Prince to believe none of his Subjects L 6 more wise than himself, nor more fit to govern; when he hath not this good Opinion of himself, he suffers himself to be governed by others, whom he believes more fit than himself, and by this means falls into many Inselicities. This was the Unhappiness of Philip the Third of Spain, tho' a Prince of eminent Parts; yet suffering himself to be governed by the Duke of Lerma, he became of so little Esteem with the People, and had no ways to free himself from those Indignities which were cast upon him, but by becoming a Church-man and a Cardinal.

War, ought to make it powerfully and short, and at first to assonish his Enemies with formidable Preparations; because by this means it turns to good Husbandry, and the Conquests made thro' fear of Arms, reach farther than those made by Arms themselves.

63. Punishment and Reward are the two Pil-Iars whereon all Kingdoms are built; the former Ierves for restraining of vile Spirits, the latter for the Encouragement of the generous; the one Ierves instead of a Bridle, the other of a Spur.

The Love of the Subject is the most sure Basis of the Prince's Greatness; Princes are more secure, and better desended by the Love of the People, than by many Troops and Legions; every wise Prince must suppose that Times of Trouble may come, and then he will be necessitated to use the Service of Men diversly qualified; therefore his Care and Study must be in the meantime, so to entertain them, that when those Storms arise, he may rest assured to command them; for whosoever persuades himself by present Benefits to gain the good Will of Men, when Perils are at hand, shall not be deceived.

Secretis co betra

best I Great Enen

67.

less it of D exhau ward Wear

68. ty of one; Votes Couri

69. therefore State; undoing as modelives to deli times and al more them; but the People and de cipality none a 65. It's not safe for a Prince to commit his Secrets to his greatest Favourite; for if he who is concerned will give, the Prince is certainly betrayed.

66. It concerns a Prince as much to contain his best Friends within a moderate and convenient Greatness, as to weaken and depress his greatest Enemies.

LS

n,

1-ne

nd.

i-

ıg.

ke

t, ns de

ose

il-

or.

ne

asis.

fe-

the.

eof

ita-

ed;

ean.

ose

and.

ent

hen.

It's

67. No wise State will ever begin a War, unless it be upon Designs of Conquest, or Necessity of Desence; for all other ways serve only to exhaust Forces and Treasure, and end in an untoward Peace, patched up out of the Weakness and Wearinesses of the Parties.

68. Nothing doth fo much conduce to the safety of a State, as to place the supreme Power in one; for Commands depending upon divers Votes, beget Destruction and Ruin; and as this Course prevents War, so it best conserves Peace.

69. Foreign Succours are most dangerous, and therefore they should be the last Resort of every wise State; for they are seldom gotten out but by the undoing that State which received them; or else, as most commonly it happens they make them selves Masters of it.

70 Those People which by Arms do endeavour to deliver themselves from Oppression, do many times change the Tyrant, but not the Tyranny; and after a Rebellion is suppressed, the King is more King, and the Subjects more subject.

71. It's easier to make Subjects than to keep them; Men may submit to the Force of Arms, but they never obey an unjust Power.

People's Liberties, than such who are vicious and debauched; for they commonly think Principality but a Security of great Crimes: Yet none are less able to compass their Designs; for he who will dare to attempt that which no honest Man will, must be able to do such things, which none but a prudent and stout Man can perform.

73. The chief Wisdom and Happiness of a Prince, is to know well to enjoy the Sovereignty of his Power, with the Liberty of his Subjects; Love, Fear and Reverence, are the three Ligaments which tie the Hearts of the Subjects to their Sovereign: Let the Prince have the first in Height, the second in good Measure, and of the last so much as he can.

74. That State which doth affect Grandeur, to the Preservation of it's Interest, must be bold and daring; in the mean time there is no safety, and those Attempts which begin with Danger, for the most part are crowned with Glory, and end in Honour.

75. That State which will preserve it self in Puissance, must prevent Divisions, to which States are subject; and where People are factious and apt to Divisions, it's Prudence to soften them with Pleasures; for where they are subtle and proud, they must be made voluptuous; so their Will and Malice will hurt the less. It's fome Security that a Faction is debauched; for it's not fafe to fuffer sober Men to come to undo the Commonwealth; as in a Tempest, each Wave striving to be highest, rides upon the Neck of that which hasten'd to the Shore before it, and is it felf suppressed by one following: Soit happens in a civil Tempest of the Commonwealth; each Party strives to suppress the other, till a third, undiscern'd, assaults and suppresses the Conqueror.

76. When a Nation is at War within it felf, it's not fafe for any State or Prince to attempt the Invalion of it, for it will certainly re-unite against them. 77. When and it's gre the reb Mo dep. den inde his Fav the crea fubc COVE that him tend which mod ing o > dom ordin doth ment State

Reve than Exec he w the P but i

80.

77. When a State is jealous of the Obedience and Loyalty of the Metropolis, or chief City in it's Dominions, the only means is to borrow great Sums of Money of them; for by that means they will not easily break out into any Action or rebellious Attempts, for fear of losing their Money. Edward the Second of England, being deprived by his own Subjects of his Royal Diadem, had never been restored, if he had not been indebted to the Citizens of London, who upon his coming up to London, purchased him the Favour and Friendship of the greatest Part of the City; of which being Master, his Power increased, and thereby became so strong, that he subdued most of his Enemies, and thereby recover'd his Kingdom. Eumenes understanding that divers Noblemen fought Occasions to kill him; to prevent their Malice against him, pretended that he had need of great Sums of Money, which he borrowed of them who hated him mon, to the end they might give over the feeking of his Death, whereby they were assured to lose all their Money.

78. He who groweth great on the sudden, seldom governeth himself in the Change: Extraordinary Favour to Men of weak or bad Deserts, doth breed Insolency in them, and Discontentments in others; two dangerous Humours in a State.

no 1

ings,

can

. 3

of a

gnty

ects;

s to

f the

, to

and

and

the'

If in hich

ious

ften btle

fo

It's

for un-

each

eck

e it,

o it

on-her,

ffes

elf,

mpt

nite

hen

but if they be, they must be made sure from taking Revenge; and there is nothing more dangerous, than to bring a great-Courage to the place of Execution, and then grant him his Pardon; for he will always remember the Assront, and forget the Pardon.

80. The questioning of great Persons produces as much Terror (tho' it argues not so much Rigory Rigor) as the Punishment; extremity of Law must be used towards some few, to settle Quietness in the whole, and it's as it were a particular Blood-letting for the general Health.

81. Fools are ruled by their Humour, but wife

Men by their Interest.

82. A Prince of mean Force ought not in any wife to adventure his Estate upon one Day's Fight; for if he be victorious, he gaineth nothing but Glory; but if he loseth, he is utterly undone.

83. It's the Interest of Princes, that the'r Servants Fortune should be above Temptation; for many times new Officers or Princes, are like fresh Flies, bite deeper than those which were chased away before them.

84. A wise Prince ought to ground upon that which is of himself, and not upon that which is of another; for Government is set up in the World, rather to trust it?s own Power, than to stand upon others Courtesses.

85. A good Magistrate must be like the Statue of Apollo, who had a Launce in one Hand, and a Harp in the other: That is Resolution to awe on the one side, and Sweetness to oblige on the other.

86. A Prince hath more reason to fear Money that is spent, than that which is hoarded up; because it's easier for Subjects to oppose a Prince by Popularity than by Arms.

87. Outward Esteem to a great Person is as Skin to Fruit, which though a thin Cover, yet preserves it.

88. Tho one be raised by the Vulgar, yet it's not safe to build upon them; nothing is more unstable than Greatness, sounded only upon another's Pleasure; nor are the Favours of any, more uncertain than those of the Vulgar.

89. Love

argu Piot and

fets

ther by I to d

then they

oversand of

ly da 95 when

Fabri 96. Grief

97. curity 98.

humanthe for World

99. ment, Prince

the Po

89. Love preserves the Empire, which Power sets up.

W.

-1:

ap

ſe

ny

0-

17

-15

OF.

ke

re

nat

is

he

to ta-

ıd,

to

on ley.

3e-

by

as:

yet.

t's

ore.

in:

Ly,

Ve

90. The Disesteem of religious Ceremonies, argues the Decay of the civil Government. Pious Princes have first kept their People religious, and thereby made them virtuous and united.

or. Herefies and Error in the Church, are rather to be suppressed by Discipline, than increased by Disputations: For in many Cases it's Impiety to doubt, and Blasphemy to dispute.

92. Schismaticks are like a Top, if you scourge them, you keep them up; but if you neglect them, they will go down alone.

93. Revolutions of Government, and the successive Inundations of several Factions, like the overflowing Nilus, continually leave many Seeds and Spawns of Monsters, which may easily be formed to any Design.

94. The Love and Hate of the People are equally dangerous.

95. Religion is the Foundation of Society, when that is once shaken by Contempt, the whole Fabrick cannot be stable nor lasting.

96. Great Men are the first who find their own Grief, and the last who find their own Faults.

97. Emulation amongst Favourites, is the Security of Princes.

98. The two main Principles, which guide humane Nature, are Conscience and Law; by the former we are obliged in reference to another World; by the latter in reference to this.

99. Inconveniences which happen to Government, are sudden and unlooked for; therefore a Prince must be provided, in omnem Eventum.

the Power; or by Pardon to alter the Will of great Offenders; than to put them to Exile or Abju-Abjuration. Therefore Henry the Fourth of France, being advised to Banish Marshal Byron, said, That a burning Fire-brand casts more Flame and Smook out of a Chimney than within in terest lives; and Interest will fait as long as Inhis all is Conquered, because the Seat of Liberty and Empire being overthrown, the Union is lost, of which the Government is formed.

Princes reign.

ments, is like the Distilling of hot Waters, the oftner they are drawn off, the higher and stronger they are.

Heat; when they have taken time, they abate of themselves, and as the Factions grow stale, they utterly fail.

105. The State of a Prince is never established with Cruelty, or confirmed by Craft.

to6. It's more Prudence in a Prince to cut off or pardon, than distress any Man; for the distressed Man is ever before People's Eyes to move or exasperate them; the dead and pardoned are forgotten.

107. To lye still in times of Danger, is Calmness of Mind, not Magnanimity; when to think well, is only to dream well.

108. There is no dividing of a Faction by particular Obligations, when it's general; for you no sooner take off one, but they set up another to guide them.

too. It's no Prudence in a Prince to take of the Factions by Rewards; for it will animate others to be so, when they find such Encourage.

ments for being troublesome.

110. Many lo w

f

E

de

fo

Int

ow ing fear fro

Effe Tyrand Perrintlike but noth of the flow lence ing, of fi and l bute they

it ret

ferve his Power, is not to keep it. The People of England, like Wantons, not knowing what to do withit, have contended with some Princes, as Henrythe Third, King John, Edward the Second, for that Power which they have thrown into the Arms of others, as Queen Elizabeth.

look when Majelly thines on them, and none when it's Night with them.

112. Kings may marry, but Kingdoms never marry; so that by Marriage there is no permanent Interest gained.

of

m,

me

In-

as po-

er-

1 is lia-

ger

first

e: of

they shed

off di-

ove

are alm-

hink

par-

you

r to e off

te 0-

rage-

Tany

dom can take a just measure of it's Safety, by it's own Riches or Strength at home, without casting up at the same time what Invasions may be feared, and what Defences and Aids may be had from Allies abroad.

Effects upon common Safety, than the rankest Tyranny; for it's easier to please the Humour, and either appease or resist the Fury of one single Person, than of a Multitude; take each of them in their Extremes, the Rage of a Tyrant, may be like that of Fire, which consumes what is reaches, but by degrees; and devours one House after another; whereas the Rage of People, is like that of the Sea, which once breaking bounds, over-slows a Countrey with that suddenness and violence, as leaves no hopes either of slying or resisting, till, with the change of Tides and Winds, it returns of it self.

of such Persons to be his Officers, as are rich and knowing; for being rich, they will not abute the Prince themselves; and being knowing, they will not suffer others to do it.

116. In to be condemned, but it's a remedy least to be trusted, and last to be tried.

is more fafe than Speed, and greater Advantages accrue by Expedition than Delays; for while fome are in Fear, some in Doubt, others ignorant, all may be reduced to the limits of Obedience; and Fury, when the first blast is spent, turns commonly to Fear; and those Persons which are Heads of Rebellion, whom the People honour and admire at first, are at last plentifully re-paid with Scorn and Contempt.

with some yielding to condescend to Peace, than by standing upon high points of Honour, to hazard the issue of a Battel, wherein the Prince cannot win without weakning, nor lose without danger of his undoing. Lewis the Thirteenth of France, was a sad instance hereof.

Safety, but their Poverty his Calamity; for they being rich, will not easily attempt against the Government, for fear of Loss; whereas being poor and beggarly, they will upon every Discontent, be apt to break out into Action; for such will think, being poor, that they cannot be worse, but by bold Attempts, they may be better.

way is, first to cut off all their Provisions, and then secondly, to sow Sedition amongst them, while the Prince may gain time, by pretended Treaties to be even with them, drawing off the most Eminent of the Faction, and confounding the rest.

ter the Decease of the Prince their Patron, usually come into disfavour with the succeeding Prince:

che ma if i of the Tr

ties

Co

a Y

an

of

rit

Hea was ers.

Kni the fible info her find for must part

their

Prince: Oliver de Danne, Daniel and Doyat, Servants to Lewis the Eleventh; Two of them were hanged, Doyat lost his Ears, and was whipp'd up and down the Streets: And we know the Fate of Empson and Dudly, who were so great Favourites to Henry the Seventh.

122. In the Infancy of a Commonwealth, Merchandise is of Advantage; but growing great, it's many times dangerous; for it introduces Luxury, if not restrained by Sumptuary Laws.

es

le

0-li-

ıt,

HS.

ole

l v ce

an na-

CE

out

of

ce's

ney

the 100

ent,

vill

rfe,

best

and

em,

ded nost

rest.

af-

ual-

ding

A certain Virtuo to that understood the Business of Planting and Gardening perfectly well, and the best way of ordering both Timber and Fruit-Trees; had in his Ground among other Curiofities, an Apple-Tree, a Balm, an Orange and a The Apple-Tree brought him Fruit once a Year, both for his particular Occasions and for his Friends, and once a Year gathering serv'd his turn too. But at the same time it went to the Heart of the Apple, to fee how the poor Orange was used and rifled both of his Fruit and Flowers. Now this did not one jot move the Orange, till she saw a Man at work with an Incision Knife upon a Balm-Tree there at hand to let out the Balfam. So the Orange became now as fenfible in this case as the Apple was in the other; infomuch, that the Balfam put the Question to her with some Admiration; How she came to find her self so concerned for an imaginary Pain? for this way of launcing, fays she, never comes near the Heart. If my Balm may do my Master any Service, let him take it and welcome; but he must be at the Pains to cut it out of me, for I part with none upon other Terms.

While, they were talking at this rate, they cast their Eyes upon two Woodmen that were barking a Cork-Tree hard by there, from Top to

Bot-

Bottom. The seeming Cruelty of this Action put them all into Groans and Lamentations, only the Cork cheared up, and was the better for the flaying she said, and a great deal easier, after being cleared of that smothering Coat than the was before. But do you feel no Pain at all, fays the Orange? No more, fays she, than my Master himself feels when he puts off his Cloaths. In the Conclusion, they came to this Agreement. They were all willing enough, they said, to give their Master an acknowledgment out of what they had, especially themselves being never the worse for it neither; so that all this was no more than a Tribute in Consideration of the Care he took to secure them against Heats and Cold, and other Inconveniencies, and to preserve them from Caterpillars and Locusts.

FINIS.

1.

gifts 3part

thol

Rotes tious Rome logue Brow

5.

The Epich

3. Imita Latin

Th

with h
of the Writte
ties Ce
the M flated
By Je

BOOKS Printed for Richard Sare.

I. THE Works of Flavius Fosephus in Folio and Octavo.

2. Fables of Æsop and other eminent Mythologists, 8vo.

3. Fables and Stories Moraliz'd, being a fecond part of the Eables of Æfop, and other eminent Mythologists, 8vo.

- 4. Twenty two select Colloquies out of Erasmus Roterodamus, pleasantly representing several superstitious Levities that were crept into the Church of Rome, in his Days; to which are added, seven Dialogues with the Life of the Author. By Mr Thomas Brown, 8vo.
 - 5. Quevedo's Visions, the Ninth Edition. These five by Sir Roger L'Estrange, Kt.
- 1. Epictetus's Morals with Simplicius's Comment: The 3d Edition with the Addition of the Life of Epictetus, 8vo.

2. Parsons his Christian Directory, being a Treatise of Holy Resolution, in two parts, 8vo, pr. 5 s.

3. The Christian's Pattern, or a Treatise of the Imitation of Jesus Christ. Written Originally in Latin by Thomas a Kempis.

These three by the Reverend Dr. Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury.

The Emperor Marcus Antoninus his Conversation with himself, together with the Preliminary Discourse of the Learned Gataker, and the Emperor's Life. Written by M. D'Acier, supported by the Authorities Collected by Dr. Stanhope. To which is added, the Mythological Picture of Cebes the Theban. Translated into English, from their Respective Originals. By Jeremy Collier, M. A.

Of Trust in God: Or a Discourse of casting or care upon God in all our Dissiculties. By the ReverendMr. Spinckes.

Monsieur Pascall's Thoughts on Religion, and o ther Subjects. 8vo. Translated into English, by th late Reverend Dr. Basil Kennet.

A Treatise of Laws in general, of their Nature an Design and of the Interpretation of them, Translate out of French, as a proper Introduction to

A new Institute of the Imperial or Civil Law, with Notes, shewing in some particular Cases among other Observations, how the Canon Law, the Laws of England and the Laws and Customs of other Nations differ from it. The second Edition very much enlarged, by Thomas Wood Dr. of Laws, 8vo.

The Devout Christian's Manual of Prayers and Devotions for all Occasions. Recommended by the late Reverend Mr. Wagstaffe, Price 1. s. 6. d.

The Turkish Spy confishing of 8 Volumes

Boyer's Dictionary, 8vo. The third Edition Price 7. s.

- His Grammar in French and English.

Sr. George Mackenzies moral Essays on several Subjects, 8vo.

Sixteen Sermons preach'd by the late Reverend

Dr. Lake, on special Occasions.

A Gentleman's Religion in three Parts, the First contains the Principles of natural Religion, the Second and Third the Doctrine of Christianity both as to Faith and Practice; with an Appendix, wherein it is prov'd that nothing contrary to our Reason can possibly be the Object of our Belief; but that it is no just Exception against some of the Doctrines of Christianity that they are above our Reason. The fourth Edition.

The Reasonableness and Certainty of the Christian Religion, in two Parts. The fourth Edition very much enlarg'd. By Robert Jenkins D. D. Lady Margaret's Prosessor of Divinity, and Master of St. John's College in Cambridge.

BOL